Tyendinaga, Nov 21.—The semi-monthly meeting of the Senior Mohawk Mission Women's Auxiliary was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Brant on Wednesday, November 18th, with the president in the chair. Mrs. Mr. Pringle taking charge of the devotional part of the meeting. There were twenty-five members present.

Visitors at the meeting were:—Mr. and Mrs. Addison Vanderwoort, Mr. and Mrs. Lavole and Rev. Mr. A. L. Geen, (Shojeywanish) all of Belleville.

At the close of the business part of the meeting, Mrs. Vanderwoort, gave a most delightful address with views —"Impressions at an outdoor meeting, held at the Vatican", which was greatly appreciated by those present at the meeting.

Mrs. Lavole and Mrs. Vanderwoort sang a pleasing duet which was enjoyed by all.

Rev. Mr. Ivo-wan-er, the beloved white brother of the Mohawks gave a short talk in his usual happy spirit.

Mr. Vandervoort—favored the meeting with a most interesting talk which was very interesting to the descendants of the Rod U. E. Loyalists.

Mr. Mr. Pringle thanked the visitors on behalf of the meeting, for their splendid program.

A pleasant social hour was spent after the meeting, and a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and her daughter, Mrs. H. A. Brant assisted by Mrs. Pringle assisted with "Por they are Jolly good fellows".

Trenton Catholic Bazaar Very Successful Financially

WATER DRILLING

Trenton, Nov. 21 (Special) —The annual bazaar was held at the Catholic school on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. The proceeds of this bazaar are to go to the church fund. A chicken supper was served each night in the basement of the church with Mrs. John M. Hennessey in charge, and Mrs. John McHab as convener. On Monday night about one hundred and sixty-five attended the supper and they surely went away satisfied. After the supper there was dancing in the hall, music being furnished by Miss Gauthier, and Mr. Charles Allare sang two very nice solos. On Tuesday night the crowd was not so large, and on Wednesday a huge crowd of 250 attended the supper. On Thursday night about 170 attended. A special ladies' dance was held after supper and the hall's orchestra furnished the music. The various booths helped to put the bazaar over in a big way. The plain and fancy work booth was in charge of Mrs. O'Connor and Mrs. O. E. Fortune and did a land-office business, Christmas and the nearness of Christmas. Miss Mary Kinsella was there. Harry McClatchey was in charge of the Surprise booth. Miss Jean O'Connor was in charge of the candy booth which was made up to represent a Laura Secord store. Coffee Parlor section was handled by Miss Laura Cumming and Mrs. Hanrchirr. Tree by Miss Anna Gauthier. Harry Doyle, Charles Allare and Harry McLellar sure did their stuff in handling the wheel of fortune and the bingo game. Thursday, the last night, a raffle was held. Mr. Fred Allore winning a $10 grocery piece, Mr. Chas. Nelson won a barber supplies outfit, given by H. LaFerty.

Miss Ambrose won a cwt of sugar donated by Mr. Harry Doyle of the Fair store; Miss Alma White won a large doll; Rose Mary Gibson won the quilt donated by the Busy Bee Club and Mr. Hannan won the bowling set. During the four nights about 800 people attended the bazaar. Mr. W. E. Trumbley, M.P.P., was a visitor to the supper and he must have found it well worth while.

A special session of the town council was called on Thursday evening at the town hall to discuss relief, an additional $1000 being voted to the work. The work is to be on streets and sidewalks, and a good deal of work is to be done on sewers, especially on West Street and Victoria Street. The men employed on this work will be employed on a week about. The subject of giving the cold storage plant a rebate on their taxes was under discussion, the council found it beyond their power to make a rebate in this manner. Legal advice is being sought and a movement granting the same on a strong plan about $900 in expenses in bringing the plant here was passed.

A Fairchild monoplane visited the Trenton Air Camp this week. The plane will be returned to Camp Borden tomorrow, weather permitting.

The Jordan Roberts Sales Co. of Brantford are drilling for water at the foot of the Trent mountain. Yesterday a heavy drilling machine set up with a 1 1-2 ton drill which is being made to operate it. A sand pump removes the crushed rock after the drill. The objective is to reach a quantity of water which will bring in 50 gallons a minute. They are down 500 feet now and have suspended operations until about 1000 feet, when they receive more cable for the sand, pump, ably handled by Mrs. O'Connor and proved sufficient to keep the town supplied. Up to the present, and as yet they don't know to what depth they have to go. The drill is a 12-inch one, but even this finds it difficult to break through the limestone.

Hearing On The Street

Christmas gifts were never so beautiful or varied as they are this year. And especially the little trick novelties are gaining a lot of attention. People who are somewhat reluctant to enter stores are now in their element. The children of course are all up in the various toy departments and the stores on Front street. And latest reports are that the toys are known to the boys and girls even before Santa has had a chance to come around and take a list of them. However, "Give the kids what they want", say store managers. Kiddie cars have a new song. We can't supply the music to you here, but the headlines are: "Here's You're Hat, Mah Candle". And speaking of candles, Chu Chin Chow is to be opened up in New York theatres some time this winter. Millions have been in in the course of the fifteen or twenty years it had been played, and that's some record. However the old firm of Amos 'n Andy is still standing them in the aisles. The boys are getting more and more funny goes on. And how many years ago was it that they started up. Cameo rings are back in style. That's what the jewellers report. So now there will be a lot of rummaging around old chests in attics looking among the family heirlooms. Tentatively announced also is the return of "mutton leg" sleeves and red flannels. There if the men follow suit with a decision to let their "side burns" grow and wear beaver hats, we'll be right back where we started about forty years ago. Wonder how some of our local residents would look like sporting a Dundreary anyhow.

Speaking some more about old fashioned things, the Holloway street church was built away back in 1878. At a cost of twenty thousand. And the builders were James Wrixtell and Sons. The first minister was Rev. J. Locke. Is Belleville's city council to be again re-elected by acclamation. Or will there be a local and long discussion pro and con over the foot lights in the city hall. And who has the first mud pie all ready to throw. There you are—started in the old rut. Not a other day looking for a building whereby they could start the manufacture of real airplanes. They said they would be back later. And another local man is trying to get some one interested enough to finance him so he can take one of the city's empty buildings, or rather factories, to start the manufacture of airplanes. Maybe he will succeed. But the fellow who surveyed the outskirts of the fair city for an available place to erect airplane factories evidently found that the rents were too dear. Re also will be back in a week or so. How many Bellevillians know that there are such a thing as a factory here. And that two planes were made. It used to be in an old church up near the North station freight sheds, but it has moved to the old Bell Piano factory these many years. Another local man has been given a distinction. Now we have an assistant Postmaster. And soon there may be several re-distributions created by a new government. Which will mean a building to be erected some place on Pinnacle street. And it is expected that operations will be started either this winter or in the spring.

Little Freddy fell into the river the other day. He was washing his doggie. But the doggie was seven years old and Freddy is only five. Therefore the doggie pushed him into the water when the little lad tried to wash him. Then Freddy's dad met the little fellow coming home all sopping wet and gave him a spanking. When Freddy got home his mother didn't think that daddy had been on the job with his heavy hand and she gave him another trouncing. Now the little lad and Pl60 are on the outs. People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones. A little lad whose dad owns a large greenhouse was observed the other day hearing rocks at another little boy. What a row there was. Men and girls had to front of the movie camera the other night. We're told that some of those faces were, oh so beautiful. Now they want to have another contest for men.

X—X—X—X—X—X—X

The height of something or other was observed on the Main the other day. A bicycle was parked on the curb and from the handle bars hung a long dead rat swinging from his neck by a string. Then there was the fellow with the very loud and large checked white and black suit. The thought were that he was a bookie. Or possibly an initiation in some local lodge. Anyhow there wasn't any advertising apparent on the man's attire so the mystery remains unsolved. People over across the river are now wailing about a milk truck which comes along about four in the morning and spoils their sleep. They don't mind the rattle rattle of the milk cans but the exhaust from the muffler sounds like an Atlantic type locomotive with steam up for Rocky Mountain grade climbing. They claim it should be fixed. We don't mean. The clock up in the window of a local Front street store is fixed right. And one of the local papers commented on it some time The sign that was hung over it has been removed. And a certain man up on the East hill wants to know if raccoons are really what you make that out of. He brought home two the other day and let them loose on the run of the house that night. When they got up in the morning everything but the stove had been moved to a different location. Now his wife has made up his mind for him that he can get along without them. He wants to know how many more he needs before he can make himself a coonskin coat. A certain restaurant owner on Front street has the pernicious habit of picking up all the tray dogs he can find and feeding them hamburger. Another man who lives on the West side made a swipe at one of the neighborhood dogs the other day with his foot and pretty nearly lost one of a new pair of shoes.He doesn't want this published so don't read it. A little girl from town went for a skate in the Arena the other day and when she finished she sat down to watch one of the teams practise. The skates she had beside her disappeared and now she can't go skating any more until she get a new pair. The Chinese and Japanese have apparently signed a truce and the Chinese man and the boys in the make up room have also offered up thanks. Some of those names were terrific when translated on paper but when you start writing them down then.....that's the way boys felt about it, too. And down in the yards of the new penitentiary they have a sign reading "No Trespassing", who wants to?

BISHOP SEAGER

Bishop Seager's acceptance of the invitation to the see of the diocese of Huron means the ultimate removal from this part of the province of one who has come to a thorough appreciation and knowledge of the needs and the history of the diocese of Ontario. His long training in the pulpit and his office of provost at Trinity College fitted him for the office of bishop which contains much work of an executive character. His coming into the diocese has been marked by a growing activity in the Church of England.

In Belleville though he has been in this diocese five years he has come to be held in the highest esteem for his gifts in the episcopal office as administrator and as a preacher who inspires. His success has been to a large measure due to the fact that he has a comprehensive and sympathetic grasp of modern thought and the movements which sway the world. He has been above all a leader who has not been afraid to give his opinions as a result of a lifetime of experience as varied and complete as a man could wish. He has a fine scholarship and a natural endowment which fit him for any post which the Anglican communion may have to offer. He is broadminded and has many conversations referred to the possibility and the advantage of a rapprochement of the various communions.

Huron is a large diocese and one of great importance in the church to which Bishop Seager belongs and in the high office the many-talented episcopal head of Ontario diocese will have fullest opportunity for service. His acceptance of the office called forth a remark along this line from the bishop, that he saw the possibility of larger service in the western Ontario see.

THIS IS NEWS

The woman in Wisconsin who on her golden wedding day launched divorce proceedings did choose a day for publicity. The exception proves the rule. If all married folks of fifty years' experience acted as she did, there would be no news in her belated decision each and every day of the year. Its very oddness made the news. Not one of this class of weddings which have reached this age in this oldest land known so strange a turn as Mr. and Mrs. Zillmer's wedding anniversary.

PROUD OF CITY'S GIRLS

Belleville has one merit mark now. Its girls are camera-shy. That is a sign that the old-time girl has not yet disappeared. With all the changes in dress and in coiffure as well as in modes of transportation and in the new world of color in which they move, the girls are much the same as their mothers used to be and they ought to be.

There is a craving for publicity which does not need coaxing in some "advanced" cities to get girls to appear before the camera, and it often leads to false ideals of life, for life is not the glare of publicity and it is the often and the calm of existence that counts most. Belleville girls evidently believe in the old-fashioned girl modernized and uptodate of course but not distorted as some who appear in the tabloids would try to make people think all girls are.

This shyness is a good sign. Belleville would indeed have been shocked if the girls of this city did not have a little shyness, a little of that charming reserve and delightful shyness so attractive to mankind.

But if the girls are camera-shy, they are fit and worthy to appear before any camera. There can be no denial of this.

THE TRUCK AGITATION

The ship-by-rail deputation moved a step forward the other day at Queen's Park when they presented a petition emanating from fifteen municipalities asking for further control by the province of the motor truck and buses on the highways of Ontario. What action will be taken remains to be seen but some action is likely to be expected as may be gathered from a remark made the other day at Queen's Park.

The art to build up rail shipments is a laudable effort and success of the agitation would mean much to a railway city like Belleville.

In reference to motor truck transportation, complaints have been made over the use on the highways on Sundays by large vans which obscure the view of the road to motorists and clutter the highway with their giants. That some action should be taken to prevent these huge mechanisms working away over the highways of Ontario on Sunday is claimed by many. At present as long as a shipment begins on Saturday night, the transport may "carry on" all Sunday. This thing has come to be a nuisance on a day when the private automobile owner has his only opportunity for relaxation on the highways, whereas the motor trucks have the seven days for transportation. Some action in curbing this nuisance would please thousands upon thousands of motorists and Sunday observers.

THE REFUGE
BY Aline Michaelis

I built a little house of hope
Where I might sometimes go
For happy hours of rest and dreams,
Should harsh winds blow.
I built a mighty house of love,
Walls towering, high and strong,
Where I might find a refuge sure
My whole life long.
I built a shining house of faith,
All flooded through with light
And sending out its joyous glow
Against the night.

There swept a sudden wind of fear
Along life's clouded sky;
That hour saw my house of hope
In ruins lie.
There came a tempest blast of hate,
Against love's walls it beat,
Until at length each barrier crashed
In dire defeat.
But all in vain the wild storms rage,
Their assaults fall in vain
Upon my house of faith whose light
Can never wane.

IT MAY BE INTERESTING TO KNOW that there are 2,718 pupils in attendance at Bellleville schools, Collegiate, Public and Separate, and of that number 457 are between five and seven years of age, with 1484 between 8 and 13 years of age, 420 between 14 and 16, and 347 between 16 and 17. These figures were taken from the school census compiled by the City Assessor, Mr. T. Ketcheson. From the same official the following facts were ascertained: There are 61 places of business in Belleville, that is places paying a business tax, which includes citizens doing business at their own homes, such as hairdressers, beauty expert, etc. There are 2,811 dwellings in Belleville, 4,031 families and 16 churches. So now you can include the above among things you never knew till now, Mr. Ripley.

SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE RELIEF FUND are not coming in as rapidly as the workers would like. Citizens are giving their time, efforts and means to put this fund over the top and the longer it drags the more time will they have to take from their own business to devote to it. Ten thousand dollars is a small amount for the prosperous city of Belleville to raise. Other cities are raising far more and raising it with a whoop of joy, glad to be able to do something so direct and beneficial for their neighbors who have not been as fortunate as they. The whole question of relief could have been thrown into the taxes with only the taxpayers contributing but the method adopted gives everybody a chance to do good in the easiest possible way. Every dollar contributed in this way means three dollars in direct relief. You invest one dollar in good deeds and it becomes three dollars in helping some family of little children, taking the spectre of fear from homes that never knew hunger or want before, smoothing the lines of anxiety from the brow of some harrassed mother who fears that her little ones will suffer this winter. So help the helpless ones! Ask the Giver of all Good to bless the donor of that dollar which brought joy to that lonely heart, that family facing the bleak winter with empty cupboards and empty coal bins, with their savings exhausted. It is not that easily that we can show our best as good citizens of a good city and a good country. They are raising up children who will call their places as the makers of the greater Canada that is to be.

Hurry up, the committee is wondering why you have not been heard from. Of course they know it is merely oversight and that you will get in line at once.

MODERN ETIQUETTE
By Roberta Lee

Q. When one has received a written invitation, may he send regrets on his visiting card?

A. No; a written invitation calls for a written note.

Q. When are crackers passed at the table?

A. With oyster stew and with salad.

Q. What is the proper way for pie or layer cake to be divided while eating it?

A. It should be divided as each morcel is eaten.

Q. When may a boy begin using Mr. on his visiting cards?

A. After leaving college or when he goes into business.

Q. What is the effect of a very effusive apology?

A. It merely emphasizes the mistake.

GALLANTRY AND POLITICS

Mrs. Caraway, relict of the senator from Arkansas, will not be the first by the second woman to reach the United States Senate to her honor of priority goes to Mrs. Felton of Georgia, who was appointed in 1922. Her term lasted for only twenty-four hours and in that time she did not utter a word. Mrs. Felton's appointment was suggested to be a graceful gesture, Mrs. Caraway's appointment is a graceful gesture and something else. In the first place it was not an appointment to which either politicians could strongly object. It did not indicate a preference on the part of Governor Parnell, who stands for one of them over another. It was in effect, as if Senator Caraway had died. His wife was his helpmate in politics. She had been his secretary before marriage—she knew what he was doing and what he was doing for her. Presumably she will continue to pattern her official actions as much as possible upon her husband's.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

WHEAT STATISTICS CHEERING TO THIS COUNTRY

Reassurance for Canada is to be found in the latest estimate issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics regarding the world wheat situation. According to the bureau, "Substantial authority the recent improvement in the wheat outlook is the result of constructive factors and is, therefore, likely to continue. The outstanding fact is that for three months past this cereal has been moving in the largest surpassing volume. From the end of July to the end of October, 1931, the shipments of wheat will have aggregated 213,000,000 bushels, which greatly exceeds the volume of shipments in any preceding year since 1928. Imports and disappearance statistics made comparatively heavy shipments during the period appear in a new light, but the early movement of Russian wheat in volume, though at first sensational, has turned out to be the buoyant factor in the situation. It appears that the bulk of the Russian wheat movement is over for this year. While this is to the good, for a year ago it was at this time reaching its greatest proportions.

ENGLISH CREDIT UP

The Old Lady of Threadneedle Street stands in the eyes of the British public for the very rock and foundation of the national credit. It was because of the precarious situation the Bank revealed at the end of August that the public began to realize like fully how very near to disaster British credit had actually come. Faith in the Bank was not impaired, but anxiety as to what might happen was widespread throughout the entire nation, and just as general elsewhere. That the Bank has been able to weather the storm so successfully and within a brief period will serve to hearten all British citizens both in the Old Country and abroad.—Montreal Star.

VALUE OF RESEARCH

"I have long held the view," said Right Hon. Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, recently in his speech on the new tariff policies in the House of Commons on Monday, "that one useful invention is worth seventy acts of parliament. The fact is that the man who can make a great improvement in the scientific processes of reorganize business with greater skill, might do far more for the rehabilitation of this country's industry and commerce than a good set of new drug-act of parliament." In other words, research work is still considered in Britain as of supreme importance to the national welfare. It is only natural, in trying times like these, when governments and industrial establishments are seeking every opportunity for economy, that research should be in some degree affected and treated as a luxury. Yet it is certain that the country which neglects this important branch of modern industry will soon be no competitor with more far-seeing, progressive nations. One major discovery immediately relieves the factor facing the winter with empty cupboards and empty coal bins, with their savings exhausted. It is not that fault, but rather their best as good citizens of a good city and a good country. They are raising up children who will call their places as the makers of the greater Canada that is to be.

Hurry up, the committee is wondering why you have not been heard from. Of course they know it is merely oversight and that you will get in line at once.

MINE FIRE KILLS SEVEN

27 Injured in Explosion and Fire at Doncaster, Eng.

Doncaster, Eng., Nov. 21—Eighteen miners were killed, seven were missing and 27 were injured last night in an explosion and fire in the Bentley Colliery, near Doncaster.

The seven missing were believed to be in the pit, where flames raged furiously, and there was little hope they would survive.

About 1,000 men were below at the time of the explosion, and hundreds of them were temporarily isolated by roof-falls, but succeeded in escaping. The number injured was uncertain, but at least 27 were brought to the surface.

Letters to The Editor

The Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

With reference to the letter of Mr. Ed. Kelly, which appeared in yesterday's issue of your paper, on behalf of the Belleville Unemployment Relief Fund, I might state that the Slogan "One Day's pay a month for six months" is not the one that before this fund was started, but the employees generously decided one day's pay a month, for the period of six months. The idea was also used in a great many other cities, and towns in Ontario.

Subscriptions in charge asking for subscriptions from the various groups were very careful to point out that in a great many cases, it is not possible for employees to give full one day's pay a month, or part thereof, although in many cases the heads of the various businesses do make a full day's pay a month. All subscriptions are voluntary and employers are not asked to subscribe any amount of their pay or wages, but only that which they can afford.

For a great many years various subscriptions, of all kinds, have been raised, from a selected list and employees have not been canvassed, as the committees in charge of the funds, have taken the line of least resistance and tried to obtain the money where they could get it in the largest amounts.

In the case of this fund it was thought that as it was for the benefit of the unemployed, that those citizens who were fortunate enough to have employment of any kind would welcome the opportunity to do something for those unfortunate ones who, through no fault of their own, were not able to obtain employment.

The city is being covered by business groups and certain citizens have been approached by letter and a subscription card. To give an opportunity to all citizens to subscribe to the fund, subscription lists have been placed at the various banks in Belleville and the treasurer of the fund, Mr. J. J. Stock at the City Hall, will be glad to receive all subscriptions. In this way everyone in Belleville has an opportunity to subscribe to this worthy fund and it is hoped that before long everyone will do something to help, even if their subscription be small. In most cases we have found that the small subscriptions are the ones to represent a real sacrifice on the part of the giver.

In regard to liquor permits, any family or citizen receiving relief from the fund, is not permitted to hold a liquor permit.

Yours truly,
(Signed) G. A. C. Weir,
Chairman Finance Committee.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and thinking in the rocking chair today. I was doing my homework against my will, saying I darn the subject whoever invented it. Then you are spending a lot of time on the value of numbers? pop said.

Yes, I just mean I wished there wasent any such things, I said, pop did. Then you are wrong and Ill explain why.

All numbers have their importance, influencing the number of people lire their life on the theory that if they only take care of number one the other numbers will take care of themselves. When you noticed the animals, this theory is proven as the Survival of the fittest, but when practised by human beens it is often called by shorter and more uncomplimentary words.

The most graceful figure of a number is zero, whose graceful curves exert a strange influence over any other number that happens to stand beside it. Yet zero has proved a pitiful figure in arithmo, no attraction for anybody. From this we learn to be humble thanks that success in this world depends on cooperation and even the most fascinating of us will never achieve happiness or fame, and this shows us that unless we are very powerful ourselves we should choose individuals of strength and strong character for our companions. In fact I can tawk to you an hour on the value and significance of numbers, but perhaps you are reddy to go on with your homework, are your pop said.

Yes sir, G in reddy, I said, and pop said, All rite then, go to it.

One reason why fish are desirable food is that they contain such health building elements as vitamins and iodine.

WHAT GOVERNMENT DOES FOR RELIEF

Grants have been approved by the federal Ontario Government to 130 municipalities, including practically all the cities and large towns, towards the cost of the construction of municipal works involving an expenditure of over $13,000,000. Of the cost of these works the municipalities are to pay 50 per cent. the province 23 per cent. and when finally approved by Ottawa, the Dominion will pay 27 per cent. There are still a number of municipalities which propose to make application for grants. The province has fixed without delay with all applications when received, and work is being carried on in the great majority of municipalities whose applications have been dealt with. Those works have been given the preference which provide the maximum of labour.

There are some municipalities which are unable to find suitable works, or which for financial reasons cannot undertake them except perhaps to a limited extent. In these municipalities direct relief is given. Direct relief includes food, fuel, clothing and shelter, and is paid for one-third by the municipality, one-third by the province, and one-third by the municipality which the municipalities the government is glad to observe that general citizens and institutions have banded together, raising money and working with the municipal councils in the distribution of such money in direct relief. Where this is done the province and the dominion will each pay one-third of the money expended in direct relief whether the municipality in which the applicability is to be provided is paid for out of taxes or from money otherwise made by public minded citizens and institutions.

In these cases, however, the government strongly recommends that a committee be formed composed of some members of the municipal council and citizens who have subscribed to or have been instrumental in raising the money elsewhere referred to. It is essential in such cases that, while these committees can control the methods of distributing direct relief, the municipalities must take all expenditures and pay all accounts, and render them to the province in the usual way. The municipal accounts rendered in this way must be certified by the treasurer of the municipality, and its relief officer, or other proper officials be called upon to do an amount of work somewhat equivalent to the amount of relief given. Every effort should be made to give that the work is of some value and useful. There will of course be cases where the recipient is unable to do any work. These cases must be provided for in the usual way.

township for thirty-five years, with safeguards as to the price. The township was also adequately protected against the possibility of the gas mains on the highways.

The township has the right to demand that gas be laid, and the gas mains should be laid, and the company was obligated to keep all highways where mains had been laid in the same condition of repair as they were before. If any repair was the fault of the agreement by the company, the township had the right to cancel the agreement, remove the gas mains and charge the cost to the company. He believed the agreement was a splendid one for the township, and that there should be no hesitation in supporting the by-law.

J. G. Hetrly

J. G. Hetrly, secretary of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, complimented the electors on their keen interest in the gas franchise. Pointing out the fact that Belleville for this year secured four large new industries, Mr. Hetrly said their coming was due to the fact that they could find all their facilities here. Certain industries said Mr. Hetrly spout have gas, and would only go where there was a gas supply. He believed a gas supply for Thurlow would undoubtedly help to establish industries in the township adjacent to Belleville. This would be a benefit to every part of the township.

Chip of Thurlow.

Speaking of Belleville's experience with the gas company, Mr. Hetrly expressed the conviction that Belleville was well satisfied with the manner in which the agreement had been carried out. He asserted that the agreement was open and above-board in every way. He hoped the electors of Thurlow would endorse the by-law unanimously.

H. E. Fairfield

H. E. Fairfield, Belleville, expressing what he termed his honest opinion of the by-law, said he highly recommended the by-law as the finest thing the electors of the township had ever had to vote on. He said it would be a serious mistake to turn down the by-law.

E. W. Brown

E. W. Brown, township clerk, said the council deserved credit for the way the township's interests had been protected in the agreement. He also paid a tribute to the consistency of Mr. Ackerman. "You have nothing to fear in passing this by-law," said Mr. Brown, who also pointed to the benefit to the whole township of the possibilities for industries created by having a supply of gas in the township. He urged everyone to get out and support the by-law.

Ex-Mayor Bennett

Ex-Mayor Bennett of Belleville was also present and spoke on the by-law. As a user of gas, he said it was a utility which he greatly appreciated having in his own home. He stressed the usefulness of gas as a domestic utility, saying he would rather lose his electricity than do without his gas supply. It was, in his experience, much more economical for cooking to use gas instead of electricity.

Mr. Bennett paid a high tribute to the gas company for the manner in which it carried out its agreements, and he believed it would be worth while for the township of Thurlow to link itself up with such a company. He believed the by-law presented an opportunity which the electors should not allow to slip past, and that the by-law should be carried.

Mr. Illsey

Mr. Illsey, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, said the township was dealing with a group of men on whose word it could rely. The township was being given an opportunity such as seldom presented to any municipality. The company was merely seeking an added market for its product from the Belleville plant, and it was natural that it should look to the township of Thurlow. Belleville looked on the gas company as one of the finest assets of the town, and equivalent to a very substantial new industry. Mr. Illsey strongly urged the electors that it would be to their own interests to pass the franchise by-law.

M. McIntyre Hood

M. McIntyre Hood, editor of the Oshawa Daily Times, introducing himself as a disinterested party, interested only in the development of Central Ontario, gave some enlightening facts regarding the principles of the Ontario Shore Gas Company, pleasant to marry the names of their properties some months ago. Thurlow township, he said, was fortunate in having an opportunity of becoming linked with so important a gas-distribution system. Since it started its operations in May, it had extended to some nine other communities, in six of which gas franchise by-laws, similar to that on which Thurlow township would vote on Monday, had been carried by overwhelming majorities.

Mr. Hood asserted that Oshawa, Bowmanville, Newcastle and the township adjacent to these places were all delighted with the manner in which the company had carried out its obligation and had given employment to local workmen.

Mr. Hood also stressed the importance of having a gas supply available for industrial purposes since there was a tendency on the part of industries at the present time to establish themselves on the outskirts of towns and cities. Pointing to the fact that the by-law gave the rural people the same conveniences and service as the people of the city, and the township had everything to gain and nothing to lose, Mr. Hood strongly advised the electors of Thurlow to carry the by-law by a decisive majority.

Mayor George Reid

Mayor George Reid, of Belleville, was the next speaker. He cited the experience of Belleville with its gas plant, and said he was satisfied Belleville had made a splendid deal, and had found the representatives of the company were of the highest calibre. He felt that Thurlow would be just as well satisfied with its dealings with the company. He also stressed the importance of the franchise from the standpoint of employment in the municipality, and expressed his conviction that Thurlow would do well to pass the by-law.

Gordon E. Conard

Gordon E. Conard, Belleville and Canadian counsel for Ontario Shore Gas Corporation, the next speaker, expressed his appreciation of the generous statements which had been made regarding the company he represented. He complimented the township of Thurlow on the splendid attendance at the meeting which showed that the people of the township of Thurlow were thoroughly interested in the proposals made. The by-law agreement said Mr. Conard was a straight business proposition, and it should be dealt with as such. He outlined the history of the gas situation in Central Ontario particularly in Oshawa, leading up to the coming to Oshawa and Central Ontario of the Ontario Shore Gas Company Limited. He touched on the unsuccessful efforts to make the Oshawa gas system profitable, and how, as a result of the failure to do so, it had been decided to sell it to the parent company of the Ontario Shore Gas Corporation. He gave interesting details of the expansion and extension work done by the company since it came to Ontario. He told of the success of the Belleville system and the securing of franchises in Trenton and in Sidney township.

One of the difficulties in operating a municipal gas utility was the impossibility of securing expert gas engineers in Canada to give engineering advice. This he said, was the fundamental difficulty in operating the small units of gas production and distribution. Only where there was the wholesale generation and distribution of gas could an economical supply be provided, he said. "Before" he said, "the advantages and facilities of a large scale distribution which will bring the cost of gas within the reach of every individual."

The company desired a franchise in Thurlow because the franchise was necessary before gas could be supplied to a single home in the township, and the law also required that the franchise had to be approved by the electors, said the speaker. He also explained the legal necessity of having the franchise granted in the name of Eugene C. Lang, to be later transferred to the company. He also stated that the government of Ontario had to be absolutely satisfied that the company's sample agreement to carry out the whole of the agreement.

Mr. Conard pointed out that in all previous franchises secured by the company, an exclusive franchise had been obtained, but in this case the franchise was non-exclusive, and did not debar the township from making similar agreements with other companies if it so desired.

The franchise the speaker asserted, had absolutely nothing to do with the tax rate, and would not add a single cent to the taxes. Nor would any individual be expected to use gas unless he or she wished to use it. He also assured his hearers that the agreement did not give the company any right whatever to cut across any farms or other private property without paying for the privilege of doing so. He also pointed out that gas contracts were different from hydro contracts which had to be signed to cover a period of years but gas would be supplied on an application for a supply for one year which could be discontinued without any further obligation.

The cost of installing gas cooking services, said Mr. Conard was about one-third of installing an electric service of similar capacity, and this cost could be paid by instalments so as to make it possible for even the most modest homes to have a gas supply.

Mr. Conard emphasized the drastic requirements and penalties provided in the agreement for the protection of the township and also the fact that there was a fixed maximum price for gas. He showed, however, that competition and the law of supply and demand would govern the price, and that rates would have to be brought down to a price at which a sufficient number of people would buy it. The rate in Thurlow he said was to be the same as in Belleville for the first mile and outside that area at a small extra charge. The aim of the company was to create a consumption so that a lower price could be made possible.

Mr. Conard said his whole object had been to present the facts and that he was presenting a purely business proposal. The company, he said, would fulfil all the terms of the agreement, and he did not believe the township of Thurlow would ever again have another such opportunity as was afforded by the by-law vote on Monday and he appealed to all citizens to get out and vote on the by-law and to give it their strongest support.

Reeve Mitchell

Reeve Mitchell in closing the meeting, said he was fully satisfied that the passing of the by-law was the best thing for the township and he appealed to the electors to pass the by-law on Monday.

NIGHT SCHOOL ISSUE FACES SCHOOL BOARD

Deputation to be Sent to Toronto to Meet Department

GYMNASIUM USE

School Auditorium Opening Dates Are Set

Considerable discussion took place last evening at a meeting of the Board of Education relative to the account of the finance committee for the payment of teachers at the night school also the Principals salary. The Board passed a motion at a recent meeting fixing the salaries at $3 and $4 a night and the Principals salary for $400. For the term, but evidently this was not satisfactory to the teaching staff. The committees recommendation to pay at the rate of $4 and $5 was passed with the understanding that a committee of the Board go to Toronto to lay the matter before the Department of Education. This was owing to the fact that there was a difference as to salary between the Board and the teachers. It was pointed out by Mr. Ackerman that if the night school was closed on account of any difference the Board was liable to lose the debenture grant. The Board decided after a report presented that in contract of Miss M. Fleming as a teacher terminated at the first of the year, she being on a maternity leave of absence, a permanent substitute will be appointed. Several reports were presented and disposed of.

Mr. Ross Hunter addressed the Board relative to a request to be allowed to hold practice once a week. He did not know a room of 11 and he desired some area to practice with other boys. It was a voluntary movement on his part and there was no fees asked for. It was really a post graduate course.

Messrs Watson and J. Varley addressed the board requesting that the gymnasium in the collegiate be opened at the disposal of the Boy Scouts of the city for the development of the boys. The deputation stated that if any damage was done it would be made good by the members of the troop. One night a week was asked for the use of the gymnasium.

In answer to an enquiry the deputation stated that they would be responsible for any accident should one occur to any member of the troop.

The matter was referred for consideration.

Board went into committee on the whole on reports etc. Mr. R. W. Dickens in the chair.

The Finance committee recommended the payment of a number of accounts which were adopted after some discussion.

Considerable discussion took place relative to an account for teachers of the night school, the Board at present refuses to pay $4 and $5 per night instead of $3 and $4 as at first agreed. Principal Beamish Laurin was fixed at $400 instead of $500, Col. Ponton speaking said he did not consider he was competent to do its work, and he moved that the item be not passed at present in accordance with the salaries as fixed by the Board.

It was pointed out by Mr. Ackerman that if the night school was closed the Board would lose its debenture grant from the Government. He (the speaker) had been so informed by Mr. Rutherford, who is associated with the Department of Education.

A deputation will be sent to Toronto to interview the educational department relative to the matter.

The item was passed without prejudice.

Reports

Mr. A. McCee presented a report relative to the purchase of the new addition to Queen Victoria school. Considerable repairs are in the schools should have some attention done, but evidently this report were referred to respective committees of the Board.

This committee recommended the payment of an account of $35.00 to Mr. Ackerman as auditor. An auditorium committee be appointed, namely Messrs. A. Bullock, Dr. Ponton, R. H. Schryver and E. W. Dickens.

The finance committee recommended that the new auditorium of Queen Victoria school be opened will be officially opened in the near future. Mr. Mott, principal of Queen Alexander suggested that the formal opening of the auditorium of that school be held on the morning of Tuesday, November 24th.

Mr. William, principal of Queen Victoria school suggested the opening be held at the morning devotional exercises of the children of the schools. The plans are not of an expensive nature but are good instruments.

The committees report was adopted.

Management Committee

This committee recommended that Miss M. Flemming be appointed supervisor as of November 1st 1931 and, that at her retirement she be appointed to honorarium sufficient to make up the difference between the amount of superannuation and her regular salary said honorarium to be paid in equal monthly installments and that a supply teacher be engaged when found necessary to assist in the work of the school.

Discussion out in discussion that Miss Fleming refuses to be superannuated at the present time.

Mr. Harvey stated that Miss Fleming desires to finish her teaching until next year when she will superannuate. He was in the favor of allowing her to teach until next June.

Mr. H. J. Clarke said that Miss Fleming had carried on her work in a most satisfactory manner in her two classes.

Some of the members suggested that Miss Fleming be kept on until the Christmas holidays.

Printing and Supplies

The Printing and Supplies committee recommended the purchasing of some supplies including some maps and other requisites for the Collegiate.

The report was adopted.

Vocational Committee

This committee recommended the purchase of a Rogers machine for the agricultural class. It was pointed out that the department of education will assist in the expenditure.

A few accounts for material purchased were ordered to be paid.

Messrs O. H. Scott, G. A. Weir, were appointed from the committee to go to Toronto in connection to interview the education department re salaries of night school teachers. The Board appointed Mr. Elliott as its representative on the deputation.

Principal's Report

Principal MacLaurin of the Collegiate presented a report. The report referred to the excellent showing made by the rugby teams of the collegiate.

The Principal asked that the salary of the teachers of the night school be $5 per evening instead of $4.

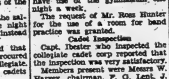
The report recommended that some proper furnishings be procured for certain rooms in the collegiate. Some more uniforms for cadets were asked for.

The inspector has advised that a full time librarian be engaged at the collegiate.

The recommendations were referred to the Sites, Building and Repairs and the Printing and Supplies committee.

A motion was adopted that the gymnasium be allowed to be used by the Boy Scouts on Thursday evening. The Girl Guides will also have use of the gymnasium, one night in a week.

The request of Mr. Ross Hunter that he be given a room for band practice was granted.



Collegiate Committee

Capt. Hesler who inspected the collegiate cadet corp reported that his inspection was very satisfactory.

Members present were Messrs W. Harvey, chairman, C. O. Lee, E. W. Barlow, C. C. Stewart, E. A. Geen, H. W. Ackerman, F. B. Smith, Col. W. N. Ponton, E. W. Crome, Rev. Mr. MacTavish, S. W. Dickens, J. Elliott, W. J. Allen, and A. R. Schryver.

Lions in capacity are said to grow better manes than those living in a wild state.

ME AND MR. GANDHI

Friends:

I don't know much about this man Gandhi, although if any man's life is an open book, it certainly is his. Mr. Gandhi has given answer to what's the matter with the cloth business.

"To know about Mr. Gandhi, you don't have to read what he says, but only look at his pictures. They tell you practically everything there is to tell and that isn't so very much.

Sometimes I wonder how he got that way. Probably he used to live in a city somewhere, making money and he wanted to be all set to dash in wherever the other fellow came out. If he ever did.

I know I wouldn't get around that way. I've had enough to resist as it is. I know I wouldn't go about that way if I was Gandhi. I've lost more meat lately binding one order than Gandhi weighs altogether.

And I know I wouldn't go around that way with winter coming on. Mr. Gandhi may find it all right in summer in India, but you will find it all wrong in winter in England. I'd like to take him up to Dundas about New Year.

Maybe he wants to show people that he has nothing to conceal. If a man wants to go around looking like what Mother Hubbard found when she went to the cupboard, that's his business, of course.

And, speaking of business, we handle oil furnaces as well as hot air heating systems in our business so guard against winter by having us install one in your home immediately. Ask about our easy payment plan.

Yours for humanity, especially plumbers.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

"FATIGUE?"

I just postpone it!"

"No, I don't have 'nerves.' You can't have them, and hold this sort of position. My head used to throb around there o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others.

"Then I learned to rely on Aspirin."

The sure cure for any headache is rest. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Aspirin saves the day. Quick relief, and the nagging ache is gone until you are home. And once you are comfortable the pain seldom returns.

Keep Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you have an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatic twinges. They don't help, they depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying Aspirin. Don't take a substitute because it will not act the same. Aspirin is made in Canada.

ASPIRIN

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

She read his letter through again till she almost knew it by heart.

"... don't know what sort of life it is out there for women, but I am told that many of the men in the company have their wives with them—

It was as if he had written: "I love you. Will you come with me?"

She kissed his signature, and her heart sang. When she saw him he would tell her he loved her, and soon, when his position was assured she would go out there to him and they would live happily ever after.

Every other thought was wiped from her mind; there was but one person in the world that counted!

She would not care if she was the only white woman in the whole East Africa if she was with Clive.

Then Hugh's voice called to her from the house, impatient, insistent.

"Priscilla! "Where are you, Priscilla!"

It was as if an unfriendly hand had shaken her roughly from a dream.

Priscilla's face was white as she turned to meet her brother.

She was much sweeter and more desirable than he had ever dreamed. That was the thought in Jonathan Corbie's mind as he walked home after his meeting with Priscilla.

The blue of her eyes, the eyes that had looked into his with such friendliness. It was almost as if she had said to him, "I like you. We are going to be friends."

Presumption to imagine such a thing of course, and yet she had called him brave, and said that she loved a man to be brave. Not that he had done anything very heroic. He would have been the same no matter who had ridden that terrified old hack.

And now his only thought was, when shall I see her again? How long will he know her before? How could have no possible interest in her, even though she had smiled and given him a half-hearted invitation to dine some night.

Jonathan did not like that brother, and found himself vaguely wondering how a brother and sister could be so dissimilar. Not that the brother mattered. Had there been half a dozen he would have pretended friendship for them all for Priscilla's sake.

Of course that invitation to dinner would never mature; Jonathan had been conscious of the veiled contempt in Hugh's eyes.

He thought of his mother with the old impatient, half-pitying affection with which she always inspired him at that moment. She was all so different; but there it was too late to change her.

Jonathan looked up at the tall trees above him, just tipped with autumn-coloring of bronze and gold, and thought of the lights and shades in Priscilla's hair.

The only woman who had ever attracted him; it seemed hard that there should be such a barrier between them—a barrier which all his money seemed powerless to break down.

And yet, if he wanted her, there was something she wanted of him also, or of some other man—money! The only trouble being that a man cannot go to a woman and say, "I love you so much or so many thousands if you'll marry me."

He had no hope of ever attracting her for other means. He knew he was awkward and unprepossessing, a man whom women shrinked from naturedly, or whom they did not trouble to consider at all.

Life was so strange. It put all sorts of desires into one's heart, making quite sure at the same moment that those desires should have to be gratified.

Useless to think about it, Jonathan told himself, as he tried not to think of nothing else as he walked slowly home; it was no use, no, not even allowing a man to be master of his own thoughts.

And then at dinner that evening, to which Jonathan had put in an unusual appearance, having carefully smoothed his hair, tactfully approached, his mother might not be induced to help him meet Priscilla again, his father said with a chuckle:

"So you've been playing the hero —eh?"

Jonathan flushed dully. He felt as much of a stranger to his father as if they were the merest acquaintances, and this unexpected reference to an episode which had meant so much to him, filled him with resentment.

"Playing the what?" his mother asked.

"The hero," her husband repeated, in the impatient tone of voice he seemed to keep solely for her. "Stopping runaway horses and rescuing damsels in distress! Oh, I've heard about it!"

"I don't know who could have told you," Jonathan said shortly. "And, anyway, it was nothing. The horse would have run itself to a standstill in another fifty yards."

He did not really think so, but he had to say something.

"Whose horse?" his mother asked philantropically. "You never tell me any thing you two, I always have to guess what you're talking about."

"Miss Marsh's from the Moorland House," her husband explained with unusual geniality. "Young Marsh told me himself. I met him down in the village and he stopped and said how much obliged they all were. I must say I was surprised. I always looked upon young Marsh as a bounder."

"They haven't called on me," his wife complained.

Old Corbie gave her a look that seemed to say he could not blame the Marshes for the omission. It was a pitiful fact that since the days of his prosperity he had begun wantonly to dislike the poor woman whom he had married without really considering the matter at all.

He was the type of man who unlikely forgets good kindnesses, or perhaps it did not suit him to remember how when they were first married she had worked and slaved for him, and helped to set his feet on the first rung of success.

Mrs. Corbie looked at Jonathan. "You never tell me anything," she complained again.

"There's nothing to tell," Jonathan said patiently. "The horse was running away and I stopped it. Any body would have done the same."

"If anybody would have done the same, it's not being a hero," his father said, sarcastically.

There was a little silence, which her husband broke with a short laugh of satisfaction.

"Glad he hoped we'd go to dinner some night. It's a bit late, seeing the time we've been neighbours as you might say, and never a word ex changed between us, but I said we'd think about it."

"They've never called on me," his wife said again, but her voice was a shade less resentful. In spite of all she had said to the contrary, it had been a sore spot with her that the Marshes should have called her so determinedly closed against her.

"Priscilla won't call the way they used to," her husband said with a frown. He could not forgive his wife's habit of eternally harping on the same string. "Anyway, he may call to-night if we're asked. But—where are you going?" he broke off to demand of his son who had pushed back his chair.

"I thought," Jonathan began, "Jonathan said."

He hated this conversation. He dreaded some direct allusion to him self and Priscilla.

"Old Marsh and his father went on smugly, "would like to see his girls painted perhaps. They used to badly enough." He chuckled, as if at some not unpleasing thought. "And he might do worse for his girl," he added.

INSTALMENT IV

Jonathan knew at heart his father was a snob and would welcome any chance to know those with Priscilla Marsh, no matter what it might cost him. But all he could hope for was the sort of "business" acquaintance such as a man would make across an office table before purchasing a house.

Not even as there any real hope. Why should Priscilla ever consider him? She must know many well to do men who could offer her fashion and pay off her father's mortgage, if that was all she wanted.

She had told him she knew Lyle Dawson. That was the type of man the modern girl liked—accomplished and easy.

Jonathan paused in the wide hall and looked at his reflection in a long, heavily gilded mirror.

He thought there was something repellant about his appearance, with his big shoulders and long arms and shock of hair. It seemed to his almost morbid sensitiveness that he side him in the mirror he could see Priscilla's dainty form, and her blue eyes laughing at him.

He turned hurriedly away. What use to dream wild dreams! He would probably never see her again.

At that moment the telephone bell rang.

Jonathan hated the phone. It never brought anything but silly messages about dinner parties or boring invitations.

But, as if sensing that tonight it would be something different, he took down the receiver before one of the servants could answer it.

"Hello?"

And it was Priscilla Marsh's voice that answered him.

"Is Mr. Jonathan Corbie at home, please?"

Jonathan's heart missed a beat. He swallowed nervously and drew a quick breath before he spoke.

"Speaking."

The words sounded curt and almost impolite, and he could have kicked himself for it, but the girl seemed not to notice.

"Oh, is that you, Mr. Corbie? Priscilla Marsh speaking. I'm just ringing up for my father. He wondered if you would care to call and spend an hour with us if you are not engaged. I hope you won't think it's too informal, but father persists that you are a hero for saving my life, and wants to thank you himself."

"You're very kind." Stupid for his voice to sound so husky and agitated. "It was nothing. Its all very exaggerated, I am afraid."

He heard her laugh.

"Well, father insists. He's such an autocrat, and he'll be offended if you won't come. He's rather an invalid, you know, and we all spoil him shockingly. So say you'll come."

"Will you be there?"

The question was out before he realized what he was asking and his own daring shocked him, but again she only laughed.

"Oh, yes. I'll be there to hold your hand if you're afraid of being presented with a laurel wreath. Do come!"

"Very well. Thank you."

He hung up the receiver, feeling dazed.

He glared at himself again in the long mirror, feeling vaguely grateful for once he had vowed to his mother's conventional dress and gotten into a dinner jacket. Perhaps it had been some sort of premonition. He walked out into the chilly autumn evening without a hat or coat, and with the queer feeling in his heart that he was being made a fool of, and that when he presented him self at the Marsh's shabby front door, eh would be told to go away, that he was not expected.

But Priscilla herself came out into the hall before he had even given his name, and was advancing to meet him.

"How nice of you to come! Somehow I thought you wouldn't."

She gave him her hand with easy friendliness. "Haven't you an overcoat? It seems so cold to-night to me."

"I hardly ever wear an overcoat," Jonathan said. He was thinking how lovely she was. The blue frock matched her eyes, and was cut away in front, a little V-shape that showed her throat and white shoulders.

Perhaps she had been sorry used to wonder he would have seen that this dress had been crying, and that her smiling gaiety was a little forced and unnatural. Jonathan followed her rather shyly into the shabby library where her father sat by a wood fire, the fine outline of his head and profile silhouetted against the dark background of books.

"Mr. Corbie, father. I thought I'd better show him in myself, in case he tried to run away. He obstinately refuses to being thanked as a hero."

Jonathan laughed, meeting Jonathan's eyes. "Oh, I know you have not said so, but I know exactly what you're thinking. You think it is your voice on the telephone. You practically told me that you were awful fuss about nothing." You must forgive father. We're quite sure he should have been dashed to pieces but for you."

The old man had risen from his chair with the aid of a walking stick. "I owe you a great debt of gratitude Mr. Corbie," he said, and held out his hand.

Priscilla was kneeling down on the hearth rug, the smoldering logs together. She was wondering wild- what Hugh would have said had would say if he could read her thoughts. What if he could guess that for the past few hours since he left her she had been desperately afraid that Jonathan Corbie would make a friend of him, something more than a friend; that he was clever enough, as clever as her self-confessed lover, to get more him and his money before Dawson came back from America!

A race against time—such a little time—a breathless, ignoble gamble with hours when in it rested with her to save a ship that was already sinking, and knew that she could almost hear the breaking of the wave on that rugged there all if he failed her.

Mr. Marsh had produced a box of cigars.

"I never smoke them myself," he said, "The doctors insisted that I give up smoking years ago. So if they are not too good—"

Jonathan paused in the wide hall and looked at his reflection in a long, heavily gilded mirror.

He thought there was something repellant about his appearance, with his big shoulders and long arms and shock of hair. It seemed to his almost morbid sensitiveness that he side him in the mirror he could see Priscilla's dainty form, and her blue eyes laughing at him.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 27. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.) By Edgar Rice Burroughs

THE RETURN OF TARAN, No. 27.

When they reached their captured village, it was too late for rescue. Already the cannibal slaves were preparing a gruesome feast under the very eyes of their Arab masters. Maddened by the sight, the Waziri warriors charged, but were repulsed by the armed Arabs. The old chief himself fell, mortally wounded. Next day the tribe begged Tarzan to lead them to victory. So he placed their finest marksmen in the treetops overlooking the village. Now for days relentlessly and without sound, their arrows of death flew forth and always a Arab or cannibal, fell, pierced through the heart.

Finally, Tarzan collected his warriors and retreated a mile into the jungle to rest and eat. At midnight, alone he crept through the blackness to the sleeping village. A single sentry dozed before a fire. Softly Tarzan climbed a tree and swung lightly inside the palisades. Catching he stole on his windpipe and, struggling madly he was borne to earth.

As Tarzan crouched to spring, the cannibal, warned by some subtle sense, sprang to his feet. Eyes wide with horror, his one thought was to escape this fearsome-looking white savage. But before he could even turn, a swift, giant hand clutch

FINANCIAL NEWS

STOCK MARKET FAILS TO RISE

Rails Have Fair Rally in Early Part of Session

By Claude A. Jagger, Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, N.Y., Nov. 21.—The stock market made an unsuccessful effort to recover today from the setback of the previous session.

The rail shares led a fair rally during the first hour, but soon yielded to renewed U.S. Steel unsettled the list later, and gains of 1 to 2 points, which had been wide by registered, were lost. The close found a mixed assortment of minor gains and losses. There were fractional activity made on a turnover of in the last few minutes.

The session was helped for a time by the firm opening of the wheat pits, following an upturn at Liverpool, and a more hopeful attitude toward the railway situation developed in the wake of shareholder heads. A temporary recession in the steel issue, after an hour of trading in shares, may have contributed to the fresh weakness, as well as a less cheerful estimate of current and operations for the Youngstown area.

PRICE SLIDE CONTINUES

Volume Light on Toronto Board, Trading Slow

TORONTO, Nov. 21. — Toronto stock exchange trading was light with prices still following a downward course, business slow, volume light, but nevertheless leaders sought lower levels.

Port Cal was subjected to pressure from the outset and declined to 15¾. Canadian Vickers sold under 12 for a fractional loss, Steel of Canada declined 1 point to 43, Dockshutt Plow lost ¼ to 5¾, and Lobiaw "A" eased ¼ to 11¼.

UNCERTAINTY ON STANDARD

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 21—Irregularly lower price movements on a light volume again marked trading on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange markets in today's short session. A good portion of the list remained inactive and unchanged, but small declines predominated among issues turned over.

A board lot of Lake Shore sold at 228.00 off 4 points, small lot trans actions were made somewhat above that figure towards the close. Mc Intyre fell 45 to 218.00, and Wright Hargreaves sold off 5 points to 1 cent or so apiece. Teck Hughes recovered early point declines and changed and Hollinger regained 10 cents of the decline. Sylvanite, Mc Kenzie Red and Ventures firmed a little among cheaper golds, but Sirdrland Base and Dome Lake, unchanged all closed a cent or so lower.

EACH HUNTER GOT HIS DEER

Mr. W. E. Sandercock, Supt. of the Hastings County House of Refuge, Belleville, has returned from a deer hunting trip in Haliburton Lake, Haliburton County, where he had success. In the party was also Mr. Cole. Hutchison, Sidney; Mr. R. D. Lott, Halloway, Mr. H. Smith, Maynooth, and Mr. Lorne Reid, the Revue of Madoc. Mr. Sandercock of the party got a deer. The deer Mr. Sandercock got weighed 200 pounds dressed. The party had a very pleasant holiday the only drawback being that the weather was too mild and soft for hunting. Cooler weather, it is thought, means the "chase" much more enjoyable.

SNAPDRAGONS SEEN IN FULL BLOOM

This fall the Ontario Intelligencer has received a number of requests of flowers which according to regular rule should have ceased to bloom some time ago. Among flowers have been of many varieties but the one until Friday was that of the Horticultural Expert of this paper who responded with a bunch of snapdandelions. These "flowers" have been flourishing in the open in the weather at Canniffon and seemed to this editor to be a good Holgate to prove that Canniffon is also in the Bananna Belt.

Mrs. Ross Gardens of Government Square, upon which the Post Office is situated, has a number of snapdragons was also presented on Friday to the editor of this paper. Along with the flowers which refuse to become naturally sad and cast out late. This bouquet was kindly brought to this office by the unfortunate Sergeant Percy Polwell, the genial Overseer of the Post Office Building.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE-TO-BE

Miss Ruby Woods is Honored By Her Friends

On Tuesday evening, November 17th, the friends and neighbors of Miss Ruby Woods, bride-to-be, gathered at Stone Church community hall and honored her with a miscellaneous shower. Rev. Mr. Scott called the gathering to order, and after singing and prayer, Miss Woods and Mr. Lough were called to the platform and Miss Luella Holmes read the following address:

Dear Ruby:—

"Friendship is a golden chain. Which binds us all together. The links are love and loyalty So strong, that none may sever."

Thus as a token of our friendship and love for you, we have met to spend an evening with you before you leave our community to set up your new home.

We are glad of this opportunity to do honour to one of our girls, who has been such a valuable asset in our church and community life.

In all phases of our Stone Church work, you have taken an active part and gave unreservedly of your time and talents—as a teacher in the Sunday school, officer in the Epworth League, member of the choir and president of the O.C.I.T. We appreciate the efforts you have put forth to further the work of the Christian Church and as a slight token of the church's appreciation for your valuable work and co-operation in the Sunday School and League, we would ask you to accept this gift. May it always remind you of your pleasant associations with Stone Church.

This community is proud of its young people, and especially do we hold in high esteem those who are honoring tonight. We are sorry to see you from this community, but are glad you will not be far distant.

So kindly accept these gifts from your neighbors and friends knowing we all wish you health, happiness and prosperity in your new home and that the golden chain of friendship still binds us together.

Signed on behalf of the Stone Church and community

Keitha Lloyd
Mr. W. Holmes
M. Magdalene Lloyd
Luella Holmes
M. Pearl Holmes.

Miss Clara MacPherson presented her with a silver tray from the Sunday school and some young men of the community presented her with numerous gifts which they proceeded to unpack. Miss Woods thanked the donors for their kind thoughtfulness and how well-wishes and invited all to visit her in her new home.

Fashion Flashes

By Alice Alden

The knack works but not very hard for his popularity since everyone loves this rich fur. A row of small scallops is made of sand colored tweed with a huge rounded, upstanding collar, drop cuffs and a curved hem border of fabric.

Why get purple unless it becomes you? But for those whom this color suits, it is really "high" fashion. A new evening gown is offered in rich purple lace. It has devolleise straps at back that reach the waist and then continue down in the form of a panel from which vertical ruffles cascade down to end in a single flip.

Hold on to your bag and see that it is smart and new. Grand for afternoon things is a bag of frill satin with a buckled flap that is closed with a jade and coral ornament.

It's nice to know that some hat styles are popular despite the rage for new and extreme lines. Thus we have a lovely tricorne model of black velvet with a back brim of softly gathered black lace put on in the form of an upstanding triangle.

A change of a lounging pyjama uses the light top idea. It is a one piece model with a high waisted bodice with short puff sleeves. The skirt is black while the bodice is green. The material is satin.

Under cover go many heads these autumn evenings since designers are showing tiny caps to wear with evening frocks. A frock of white sheer crepe has an overblouse of silver bugles in a diamond pattern and two panels of the plain crepe hang from the shoulders. It is worn with a tiny skull cap of matching bugles.

Cannifton School Parents Witness Health Plays

"Black Fairy"; Other Plays and Films Are Seen

CHILD ACTORS

Parents of pupils attending Cannifton school heard with pleasure a programme of health plays given last evening by the students. The purpose of the gathering, as explained by the chairman, Mr. Jack Lill, was to bring the parents, trustees and teachers closer together and to demonstrate to the parents just what was being accomplished at the school. The members of this school section have a school building of which they are justly proud. It takes a leading place, for its equipment and for the high standard of scholarship it maintains and it is one of the finest schools in Ontario.

Included in the programme were several films, some of which are used to aid the children in their studies. The school possesses a splendid motion picture machine and every Friday afternoon, films are shown of educational and entertaining subjects. The first number was of an agricultural nature showing the diseases of potatoes and how they can be avoided. Others showed beautiful Ontario scenery and the last was an uproarious Charlie Chaplin film. Music is part of the school curriculum and eleven children of the junior class, instructed by Mrs. Vandervoort, sang an interesting chorus, those taking part being Bob Noyes, Marion Noyes, Evelyn Lemmon, Florence Sharpe, Raymond Sharpe, Mary McGuire, Ronald Fraser, Edith Bowers Ralph Defoe, Shirley Bateman and Eric Deville.

A health play, "The Black Friar" was very well done and gave in dramatic form a survey of the health procedure in the children and learning as part of their Junior Red Cross work. The Black Fairy was Grace Mills, the sprites, Vera Pound, Evelyn Empson, Helen Trevorrow, Bobbie Coleman, Clayton Rita Harold Deville and the children, Christie Palmer Elmer Sherry, Gerald Heron, Bobbie Henthorne and Warren Cannon. Miss Cowan, principal of the school, coached the children for their parts and to her careful training is due great credit for the success of the little play.

The second play was given by the girls and showed what is being taught in the school to the girl classes. The children learn health rules and the girls are instructed in the care of babies. Those taking part were Edna Deville, Jean Mathews, Constance Cearley, Helen Reid, Margaret Mathews, Olive Sword, Marion Pound, Mary Mathews, Alice Defoe, Ralph Downey and Marjorie Breckman gave splendid recitations. A first aid demonstration in bandaging was put on by six boys who with great skill and neatness showed how to arrange different types of head and arm bandages. The boys demonstrating were: Don Wannamaker and Jack Sword, Russell Rita and Bill Carmichael, Morley Bleecker and Frank Sunderland. For this part of the program the children had been coached by the school nurses, Miss Grover and Miss Dumais, Victorian Order nurses.

Mr. W. J. Cole, secretary-treasurer of the School Board, gave a short address of great interest to the ratepayers. The value of playground equipment, of the motion picture machine, of providing lunch rooms for scholars during the winter months was stressed by the speaker who invited the parents to look over the school premises and see what has been provided for the benefit of the children. Rev. Mr. Merrick, who was called upon for a few words told the scholars that education was the doorway to success which can only be attained by hard work. He commended the spirit of friendship and co-operation between the teachers and pupils of this school in contrast with the stern atmosphere of discipline that used to prevail during school days long ago.

At the close of the interesting evening, refreshments were served.

when "COLDS CATCH YOUR CHILDREN"

... a cleansing dose of Castoria!

The first step to take when your child catches cold, doctors agree, is to cleanse the body of all accumulated waste, and infection-breeding materials.

To carry off this poisonous matter, nothing is better than Castoria. It acts gently and mildly but thoroughly to relieve constipation, and enough for children's delicate requirements, and yet it does the work unusually.

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation especially for babies and children. Its action made specially for babies and children. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics of any kind. It is so mild you can safely give it to relieve a colicky baby. Yet, in larger doses, it is an effective regulator for older children. And another help for mothers—children like its taste!

When you find a cold, a little fever, or a digestive upset starting, call in Castoria's kindly help. Your Doctor will commend you for wise, prompt action. Don't forget — the genuine Castoria always has the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package. Be sure you get genuine Castoria.

LITTLE JOURNEYS

To the Busy Hives of Industry Which Contribute to Belleville's Constant and Growing Prosperity

MEAD JOHNSON AND COMPANY

An immaculateness that approaches the ideal in the operation of a manufacturing plant is the vivid first impression one gets on a visit to the local factory of Mead Johnson and Company. The machinery is clean and spotless to the last degree, suggesting extensive use of polishing agents, aluminum and white paint.

In the storeroom where one usually looks for some disorder, are neat stacks of boxes and packages of stock being made ready for shipment. Orderliness apparently is the watchword of the management, and the personnel of this firm is to be highly complimented on the efficiency met with everywhere.

Mead Johnson and Company of Canada, Limited is a branch of the parent company at Evansville, Indiana. Infant Diet Materials are the sole line of manufacture, some fifteen products being manufactured under the Mead label. Of these, Dextri-Maltose and Cod Liver Oil are the chief products. The company was formed slightly more than twenty years ago by Mr. E. Mead Johnson who was one of the founders of the famous Johnson and Johnson organization, makers of medical and surgical supplies, under the well known "Red Cross" brand.

The history surrounding the inauguration of Mead Johnson and Company is of more than passing interest. Many years ago, Mr. Johnson's baby presented an extremely difficult feeding problem, which was finally solved by a physician who prescribed a formula containing a preparation of European origin difficult to procure on this continent. The results were so gratifying that Mr. Johnson was induced to manufacture such a preparation. This product, with certain modifications, is Dextri-Maltose.

Dextri-Maltose is still the principal product of the entire line manufactured by Mead Johnson and Company. Although usually referred to as a "baby food", it is not in reality a food, but merely a carbohydrate used in conjunction with cow's milk and water.

Cod Liver Oil is another of the items handled in a large way by Mead Johnson and Company. This is a pure Newfoundland oil and a considerable portion of the manufacturing process is necessarily carried out at the Coast. It is interesting to note that the cod are caught in traps set a half to one mile from the shore. Only an hour or so elapses from the time the fish are caught until they are on the landing stages of the Mead Johnson rendering plants that dot the coast, of which there are 48 in number.

The several thousand miles of Newfoundland Coast afford ideal feeding grounds for the fish, these waters abounding in caplin, squid and herring, which are the natural food of the cod. These, the cod devour ravenously, and as many as 52 caplin have been found in the stomach of a single cod. The oil content of the liver of the cod is exceptionally high, prime, fresh livers in some instances averaging three gallons of oil from five gallons of livers.

After removal from the cod, the livers are carefully examined by Government inspectors, following which they are thoroughly washed and sent to the rendering plant. Here they are cooked by steam and the oil is extracted. Much of the unpleasantness in the taste of cod liver oil was eliminated with the introduction of the steaming method used in this process. Under the old method which prevailed for many years, the livers were allowed to rot in open barrels in the sun. Putrefaction and nature were relied upon to bring the livers to a condition which facilitated the extraction of the oil.

The ethical policy under which all Mead products are sold is a novel one, in that these products are not advertised to the general public, but solely to physicians. No feeding or dosage directions accompany the trade packages, these being supplied to the mother by her doctor, who changes the feedings from time to time to meet the nutritional requirements of the growing infant.

Mead Johnson and Company were the originators of a policy of this nature in infant feeding, and although the wisdom of such a policy has long been proven, it was considered at that time, as may well be imagined, a radical departure and a fad.

This policy is based on the following beliefs:

(a) That there is no standard baby, but that each infant should be fed according to his individual requirements.

(b) That these requirements should be determined by a physician who, by reason of his training and experience, is the logical one to direct or control the feeding of a baby.

(c) That merely because my neighbor's baby thrived on a certain formula, it is no indication that that particular formula is the proper one for my baby.

(d) That it is impossible for anyone to intelligently feed a baby by correspondence, or from printed instructions on a can or label.

(e) That it is impossible for anyone to intelligently advise a mother how to feed her baby without first having an opportunity of examining that baby, ascertaining its past feeding history, and studying its requirements.

WAR CLAIMS ARE DISMISSED TODAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Nov. 20. — (Canadian Press Cable)—Five years of litigation by civilians in the United Kingdom who suffered losses from German air raids during the great war ended today when the House of Lords supported the decision of the lower courts and dismissed the claims against the crown.

The civilians proceeded by loding a petition of right, urging that although all their demands were agreed to in the total reparations claim Germany was required to pay neither the whole nor any part of the money paid claimants.

Juniors Have Real Work-Out and Work Fine

NEW INTERMEDIATES

"Bouncer" Holway Lining up Real Team For This Series

Over 300 fans were present at the local hockey practice last night and they went home with the opinion, that Belleville should have two of the best teams, that they have produced in some years. However there very few absentees at either the Junior or the Intermediate workouts. Both coaches sent the boys through a very thorough goodness knows practice and every body seemed satisfied, when the practice was finished. Those who had been a little skeptical at first were of the opinion, that the boys "would do."

Looking Fast as Ever.

Coach Thompson ran his Juniors out first and put the kids through a stiff three hour workout. All the kids were on deck and Tommy had his hands full from start to finish. In the nets he had McGee of Tweed and Gordon of Foxboro and they teamed with Harry Morgan who also looked good. Three of the old front line Tommy had a grist of material to work with, although Art Nichol were one complete forward line and those three boys looked very smoothly together. Their timing, passing and shooting is something that had the fans talking all evening. Jimmie Mcguire was the king pin of the other forward line and coupled with a pair of boys out of town gave the fans many a thrill. Several other kids were out and they all looked as if though Coach Thompson will have to try them in an exhibition game before the real season is won't be on.

Intermediates Look Good

The Intermediates came out, under the watchful eye of "Bouncer" Holway, at seven. "Bouncer" had no less than 17 players at the pick-ofilles and some of the new faces gave the fans a ray of hope for the coming season. Besides the players, who have been out all season, "Bouncer" introduced to the fans a few new ones and they looked real good taking him consideration, that they had not been on skates so far this year.

Les Tice was in the nets and the fans saw solid on the lad from Windsor. The way that he blocks, stops and what not that old "boot" has to really nobody beaten. On the defence Hettie Morris of Trenton, whom the baseball team expected out last summer, but he was unable to play on account of his health, was real smart. Morris's old time form will be convincing everyone in the rink, that he knew what it was about. He did not exert himself as he has not been on skates since last year. Alex Weir joined the local club and showed some of his old time tricks with the puck. Weir was the fans' best mate was the appearance of Jack Hall, last year's senior sensation with Belleville. Ken was not in shape to-night and carrying the old puck just as though he had been out for the last few. Another new face was that of Archie Campbell, who made a name for himself in local hockey and baseball for Tweed last year. Campbell did not get his own skates and on top of that it was his first outing for the current season. He also impressed the fans considerably. Ralph Wilson was an asenesic as he went hours for the week end will be back for Monday night's practice. Bert is still laid up with a bad foot but will be out soon. Hodgins was on the defence and teamed with "Pinky" Fisher at times. On the front line Bouncer ran out Spalik, Lecklaire and McMeekin as one line and these three were travelling at top speed all evening. On the other front line was Davis, Pete Morgan and Reggie St. Denis. These three also showed some real smart hockey and the fans felt assured that they could be a hard lot of beating. Bob Hill, Leggat and Campbell went out as a third front line and the team did not seem to be weakened a bit. Several other boys were out and all left the impression, that they would be heard from before the team was finally picked. Coach Holway is quite tickled with the showing and he mentioned that the players are taking. It must be understood that the present management have curtailed expenses in order that a good team will be placed in Belleville this year and in order to live up to the players to give men like Bill Ramsin, Shew Pender, Harold Legate and Joe Shortt all that they have from now until the season opens.

Mr. Rankin and Mr. Pender will be in Toronto today attending the annual meeting of the O.H.A. and expect to make arrangements for a few exhibition games to be played here before the current season opens. B.A.A.A. intend bringing a couple of senior A teams here and also a couple of real junior A clubs, plenty of opportunity to see the players in action before the schedule is drawn up.

ROYAL CANADIAN ACADEMY ELECTION

Montreal, Nov. 21—Election of J. E. H. MacDonald, A.R.C.A., to full membership of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts, and Miss Dorothy Stevens and Miss Stella Grier, all painters of Toronto, as Associates of the A.R.C.A. was announced after the annual meeting of that body held here yesterday. W. J. Phillips, of Winnipeg, who resigned as associate painter, was elected associate engraver.

Officers elected were as follows:

President, E. Wyly Grier, R.C.A., Toronto; vice-president, W. B. Maxwell, R.C.A., Architect, Montreal; treasurer C. W. Simpson R.C.A., Montreal, and secretary, E. Dyonnet, R.C.A., Montreal.

At 21, Andrew Carnegie was making $50,000 a year and had determined to quit and spend his surplus above expenses for philanthropy.

Great Britain's total output of coal is about 260,000,000 tons annually, of which some 83,000,000 tons are in normal times exported.

"Y" Alleys

The Ever-Ready's hit their stride Tuesday and took all four points from the Arenas in the Ladies' Afternoon League. High scores were Mrs. Cole for the Ever-Ready's with 331 and Mrs. Morgan for the Arenas.

The Industrial League the Ontario Intell and Houston's divided the points with two each. High scores were R. Hardwick for the Ontario Intell with 656 and 286 and F. Hanton for Houston's with 596 and 268. This game seemed to allow a lot of scandal, from some of the other members of the league and on the comment heard by one of the other leaders in the group, the Ontario Intell don't seem to be very popular. Maybe it's on account of the long lead the printers have in the group, rake. Who knows?

In the second Industrial League game City's took three points and Walker Hardware one. High bowlers were O. Davison for City's with 328 and 329 and Harry York for Walker's with 617 and 253. See scores of both these games for some nice singles.

ENGINEER AND CONTRACTOR GUILTY

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 21— After deliberating for more than half an hour, an assize court jury last night convicted H. C. Strathearn, former York township engineer and Peter Montgomery, contractor, on five charges of conspiracy and fraud. They were remanded until Nov. 27 and the men were released out on bail of $10,000.

Pitiladelphon.

The trial followed a probe of municipal affairs of York township conducted by Judge Herbert Denton. Mr. Justice Strathearn, along with a contractor and six municipal officials of the township, was last month convicted on charges of conspiracy in connection with township contracts and sentenced to one year in the Ontario reformatory at Guelph.

Evidence that mammoths roamed the Canadian prairies in times that are quite historical is corroborated by Indian legends.

Sheep and Swine Awards at Royal Winter Fair

Ontario Breeders Scoring High at Winter Show

WINNERS' NAMES

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 21—In the sheep judging final results of which were announced at the Royal Winter Fair today there were enough new exhibitors to add fresh interest to this department though the bulk of the money went to well known Ontario breeders. About only thing which corresponds to a grand championship in this end of the show is the Freyseng trophy which goes to the best pen of four lambs of any breed. The only stipulation being that the same must be bred in Canada and owned and exhibited by a resident of Canada. This year the trophy went to four nice Shropshires owned by R. Noel Gibson of Rosedale, Ontario.

In Southdowns there was more competition than usual and the sweeps, Col. Robert McEwen, London, Ont., had another grand champion wether, John P. Patterson, Richmond Hill, Ont., champion ram and reserve and reserve champion ewe while Howard Murray, Maple Grove, Ont., had the reserve champion wether.

The Canadian Pacific Railway, Department of Natural Resources had things pretty well their own way in the Suffolks, capturing champion and grand reserve champion wether and reserve champion ram. J. H. Patrick and Son, Brampton, Ont., had champion ram in Hampshires also the C.P.R. showed strong and won champion and reserve, with P. C. Willmott and Son, of Exeter, Ont., champion ram and wether and A. S. Wilson, Norval, Ont., the reserve champion.

Champion Cotswolds ram award went to Norman Park of Tavistock, Ont., with F. W. Claspell, Thorndale, champion ewe and winning the champion wether. Chas. J. Shore, Tamworth, Ont., had champion ewe with James A. Campbell, Thedford, Ont., reserve.

Again in the Oxford Downs there was a wide range of winners, etc. Henry Baldwin, Ont., champion wether, D. Johnson, Appin, Ont., reserve wether and R. Hobson, Fergus, Ont., reserves on ewe.

Ontario again had all the champion winnings in the Shropshires, F. W. Gurney, Paris, having champion ram, Harold Tyrone, champion ewe and John R. Kelsey, Woodville, the champion wether, reserve went to R. B. Comfort, Glanus, A. Shields, caller centre Skinner.

H. M. Lee of Highgate Ont. did exceptionally well in the Lincoln classes, winning champion ewe, reserve ram and champion ewe. R. S. Hobson and Son, Dunfield, Ont., had the best wether and the champion and of the same address winning reserve in this and also ewe.

Leicester awards also went to Ontario breeders. A. and W. Whitelaw, Guelph, having champion ram, Adam Thomson, champion ewe and champion and E. Snell, Clinton, champion wether and reserve on ram. W. R. Dobbs, Brampton had the other two reserves.

In Berkshires again Adam Thompson, Shakespeare, Ont., captured champion ram and ewe and grand and reserve grand sow. Wm. Boynton of Cormwall had senior and grand boar while J. McEwan carried off reserve senior boar, junior champion and reserve grand boar, reserve senior sow, junior champion and reserve grand sow. Duncan Dobbie had the other two reserves.

There was a big surprise in the remained to be judging results on sections announced this morning when an Ontario exhibitor carried off the grand championship awards in wheat. This went to Douglas Hart of Woodstock. There is a general impression that western spring wheat has the call but in the winter wheat grown in this province has been bowling to Prof. W. J. Squirrell, one of the judges, this is not always the case as is indicated by this outstanding, unrated in this province carried the championship. Hart came to Ontario specially, alsike, and most of the awards went to Ontario, the first place in timothy. The champ. championships announced today were as follows:

Oats—Erich Anderson, Wembley, Alta.

Rye—Albert Robbins, Laura, Sask. Dakford Pedi Rye.

Flax—Maclaine Charpentier, Clairvaux, Que.

Peas—J. F. Bradley, High Bluff, Man., Fea Beans.

HOME-GROWN TOMATOES SEEN

First Time They Have Been Offered So Late in Season

Canadian home-grown tomatoes were offered on the Belleville market on Saturday morning. The growers of tomatoes in the latter part of November is a novelty that is seldom seen in Ontario. The local markets on Saturday was crowded despite the fact that the weather was quite damp and cold. At the inside market the prices varied from 10c to 15c a box or 45c per dozen, while butter remained at 30c a pound. Eggs were plentiful and Ducks were a bit more plentiful and sold around $1.25 each. Chickens varied in price according to their size and sold at $1.00 per pair. Geese per pair ones brought 90c apiece. Honey was quite in demand and sold for 25c per pound pail.

At the outside market, which was well stocked with potatoes, all about the same as last week. Apples were very plentiful Macintosh Reds sold for $1.50, Tallman Sweets $1.25 per bushel, while Cooking Apples were cheaper. Potatoes sold for 60c per bag and celery brought in for 10c per bunch. Beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips all sold for 30c per bag. A fine collection of cut flowers were offered to the public and sold from each up, according to their size. Cabbages 5c and squash from 5c up also were soon bought up.

Pine young porkers were offered at $3.00 up according to their weight.

CAMP MEN INVADE CITY

Enroute to North, Ottawa Men Make Merry in Belleville

Local police were on their toes early Friday morning between the hours of three and four, when fifty to sixty men passed through here to Toronto from where they will be assigned to various camps of the Northern highway development scheme, which is a relief camp for an hour or so while their train was being changed from engines to the train.

They invaded the lower end of the town in noisy groups, closed taverns and the minions of the law to see that they behaved themselves as all were under the influence of liquor to assist them in getting back to their train. There was no damage done, however, and a good time was had by all. It is a pity that the police, who breathed a sigh of relief when these specials pulled out from the north station in the gathering gloom of a breaking day and the noisy din and impromptu entertainment all parties of young men and soldiers are noted for while on trips to various parts of the country.

BENNETT GREETED BY BRITISH PAPERS

London, Nov. 21 (CP cable)—Newspapers today joined in greeting Prime Minister R. B. Bennett of Canada, who reached here Wednesday on the first leg of a health trip which will take him to the south of France.

Funds now help under the Widows and Orphans' and Old Age Pensions act in England total $350,000,000.

BLASTING WILL SOON START

New Type of Drill to be Used on Auxiliary Main

Excavation for the new auxiliary water main is finished on South Coleman street and the men have turned the corner and are not between Jane and Mary streets. The only blasting which will be necessary on Coleman street will be a very little bit just at the lower intersection but it is expected that considerable will be carried out from that point on. The holes for this blasting will be drilled by an air compressor operating a new type of drill which has recently been acquired by the Patterson Construction Company and which will be rented to the city.

Considerable difficulty will be experienced in this construction work from now on owing to the water of the bay and river rising and making a quagmire of the trench. At this point of the work the excavation level is lower than the water of the bay, which causes this flooding. It is expected that it will be necessary to install pumps and keep this water under control until the grade on South Coleman is reached.

The work which has been dug so far is all ready for the laying of the new main, starting at the intersection of Coleman street and Bridge street and it is expected that as soon as the pipe arrive in the city, which will be some time next month, that work will be at once commenced. This pipe will be laid by men who are connected with the water works and no outside help will be needed.

I changed my tobacco a dozen times, tried blending my own, smoked old pipes and new ones—all with unsatisfactory results.

Three or four weeks passed before I got around to Turret pipe tobacco. Maybe it would give me back my happy days. "MR. AND MRS" IT'S SO NICE WHEN MARRIED COUPLES HAVE TASTES IN COMMON

LAWYERS MORE NUMEROUS IN BRITISH HOUSE

Fifty More in New Parliament Than in Previous

FAMOUS SOLDIERS

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION,
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON—The lawyer notoriously comprises a large proportion of the membership in any British House of Commons. In the new parliament, which recently assembled at Westminster, the percentage is higher than ever before. There are 135 lawyers, though not all of them practice, an increase of nearly fifty over the number in the previous parliament. No fewer than 22 of them are King's Counsel. There are also 18 doctors and surgeons, of whom several are specialists. Major Walter Elliott, Conservative financial secretary to the Treasury, belongs to both the legal and medical professions.

More than 40 holders of military rank and 10 men of naval distinction have signed the roll of the House of Commons. Two are seven, generals and 20 colonels. One of the three admirals, Rear Admiral Colin Campbell, Conservative, who defeated Sir Hon. Arthur Henderson, former foreign secretary, is a holder of the Victoria Cross. Wing Commander A. W. H. Jones, Conservative member for Wellingborough, Northampton, is practically alone as a representative of the Royal Air Force although Lieut.-Commander R. T. Bower, Conservative representing Cleveland, Yorkshire, has passed through both the Royal Naval and Royal Air Force staff colleges. Sir F. Sidney Russell, a medical engineer who is sitting as Conservative member for Duddeston, Birmingham, was largely responsible for the design of the seaplane on which flight Lieut. Webster won and captured the Schneider Trophy from Italy in 1927.

Literature has a fair representation, led by Hilaire Belloc, the Conservative member for the Combined Scottish Universities, novelist and writer of historical works.

Among members of the new House are many prominent in the realm of sport. Viscount Knebworth, Conservative member for Hitchin, Hertfordshire, the eldest son of the Earl of Lytton, is a well-known amateur boxer. So is "the Boxing Marquis", Lord Queensberry, Conservative returned by Renfrew East, who is also an enthusiastic amateur aviator. Lord Burghley, Conservative member for Peterborough is a champion hurdler and holder of the Olympic record at 400 metres. Lord Burghley is well known in Canada as the hurdling representative of Great Britain at the Empire Games in Hamilton, Ontario, last year.

Captain V. A. Cazalet, Conservative representative of Chippenham, is an Oxford and tennis and racquets blue. He was amateur squash champion of Great Britain in 1925, 1927 and 1930. Captain R. C. Bourne, Conservative member from Oxford, was a member of the Oxford University eight from 1906 to 1912.

Lord Dunglass, the young Conservative who won Lonark from the Labor Party, is a cricketer of good mean order. Sir John Gaunon, who has been Conservative representative of Dewsbury for many years, has played a good deal of first class lawn tennis.

THROAT CASES ARE IMPROVING

Classes in Schools at St. Thomas Are Re-opened

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 21—Improvement is reported this morning in the condition of Eva Chaplow, graduate nurse, who was taken to the Isolation Hospital late yesterday after contracting septicsore throat from two streptococcus patients she had nursed.

All of the other cases are also improved and general situation following outbreak of streptococcus infection in schools, has cleared up to such an extent that classes are being resumed in school rooms closed after the outbreak.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

KAY FRANCIS AND LILYAN TASHMAN—NEXT AT BELLE

Rose Quartz Dressware Monday

Each lady attending the Belle Monday evening will receive a Rose Quartz Dresserware gift with the compliments of the Belle Management.

Girls who ride in limousines but who don't pay their chauffeurs and who go shopping with married men's pocketbooks are the principal targets in "Girls About Town", the feature offering opening at the Belle today for two days, matinee daily.

Kay Francis and Lilyan Tashman are pictured as the two super gold diggers while Joel McCrea and Regis Pallette are two of the "suckers" and later the reason for the reformation of the girls.

"Girls About Town" disproves the fallacy that gold diggers never fall in love. In this story one of them does in a big way and it forms the background for the romantic adventures that pack the film with most of its entertaining value. It's an unusual story, unusually told and with a cast comprising gorgeously women beautiful—women too, who make the gay young girls of the bright lights of the big girl.

There is much to enjoy in the film, Joel McCrea, rapidly winning favor as a leading man, has the principal role as the "sucker". Regis Pallette, as the stingy millionaire out for a big time, is responsible for many of the laughs. Lilyan Tashman, as the personification of a gold digger also gets credit for a large portion of the laughs, while Kay Francis, stunning in the latest Parisian creations, appears to good advantage as the girl who loses her heart.

"Hot Shots", a highly amusing Frank McHugh comedy, Lillian Roth and Buddy Rogers in a merry sandwich, "Puff Your Blues Away," and the popular Fox Sound News are announced for exhibition on the same program.

AUDIENCE ARRESTED IN WEIRD "SPIDER" MURDER

Give a hardened murder mystery addict a novel twist in plots to worry over, and you gain his undivided interest. Add a mystifying solution and his happiness will know no bounds. But when in addition to these, you ask him to sit in and help unravel the case, well you are putting Mr. Addict in the seventh heaven of delight, reserved exclusively for mystery sleuths.

This is exactly what happens in "The Spider" tingling thriller, opening today at the Capitol Theatre, with Edmund Lowe portraying the role of the master magician, whose super detective wit and magic genius Pallette are two of the "suckers" and later the reason for the reformation of the girls.

Edmund Lowe as Chatrand the Great, genius wizard of hypnotism and magic in the thrilling mystery drama, "The Spider," today and Monday at the Capitol.

El Brendel and George E. Stone, prominent players, and Earle Foxe, Purnell Pratt and Warren Hymer, all add immensely to the dramatic intensity and unbounded hilarity which marks this swirling pageant of breath-taking entertainment. The remainder of the large cast is made up of very skilful players and there are hundreds of other carefully chosen interesting types who compose in audience.

"Unconquered Africa" the last of the fine series of human and animal life on the Dark Continent is finished and beautifully and is completed by the news and a comedy.

VAUDEVILLE CONTEST TUESDAY AT CAPITOL

On Tuesday night six excellent vocalists and instrumentalists will compete for the cash prizes in an Amateur Vaudeville Contest at the Capitol theatre.

Large crowds are predicted to judge these competitors and to vote whether Buster Keaton's "Side-walks of New York" is not one funniest film of the year!

Japan has a written history extending over 2,500 years.

UNIVERSITY ATHLETICS UNDER FIRE

Practically Every College in U. S. Subsidizes Sports, Charge

New York, N.Y., Nov. 21—The charge that practically every college in the country has subsidized athletes is made by Christian Cleuss, dean of Pomona College, in an article in the December Scribner's Magazine.

The article, entitled "Our Professional Football Amateurs" is on a line parallel to the recent attack on "semi-professionalism" of college football in several college organs.

Dean Cleuss says that although many colleges have come in which the subsidizing of athletics is forbidden, in virtually all colleges this rule is violated by private alumni enterprises.

Dean Cleuss tells of an alumnus who increased the salary of one of his employees whose son was a good fullback. Another anecdote concerns a halfback who was manager of a student store and who received his revenue from alumni friends who would give a $10 bill for a 10-cent cigar and tell him to keep the change.

"As regrettable as the situation may be," Dean Cleuss said, "it is only the natural outcome of our social psychology in regard to athletics."

14th TRIP ACROSS ATLANTIC BEGINS

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 18—Count Aurelio Baldeschi Balleani has begun his fourteenth trip across the Atlantic Ocean to Europe so that he could come back to the United States again.

Immigration laws have required him to make regular trips across the Atlantic every six months before registering an alien six month visitors' visa.

He expects to return again shortly and resume his duties as United States representative of the International Canadian Holding Company.

OPERATION UPON HICCOUGH VICTIM

MANSFIELD, O, Nov. 20.—Ira A Kite, who has hiccoughed for the last thirteen days, will have to undergo an operation before he obtains complete relief, physicians said today.

An X-ray has revealed an infectious condition in the abdominal region, and this is believed to be the cause of his attack of hiccoughs, which occur at the rate of seven a minute.

Further slight improvement was noted in his condition over night and it is expected the operation will be performed about 11. He continues to regain his strength.

PICKS 9 RIPE TOMATOES

Freakish Growth in Cellar Followed By Outdoor Growth

Smiths Falls, Ont., Nov. 21—Mrs. John Courtland yesterday picked nine rosy, ripe tomatoes from a plant in her vegetable garden—but that's only part of the story.

Last fall Mrs. Courtland carefully stored her home plants in a warm cellar for saftey during the rigorous winter season. In April when she went to bring her plants up for their summer flowering she discovered that a tomato seed in one of the boxes had come to life and developed into a healthy plant with seven fruity tomatoes on its branches. Mrs. Courtland placed this plant in her vegetable garden and it proceeded to deliver the tomatoes during the summer season.

HAMLET STIRS UP CRITICS

Reviewers Clutch at One Another's Throats Over Play

NEW YORK—For the first time since 91 John Ervine went back to his London critical post, the New York reviewers are clutching at each other's throats. Vitriolic verbal brickbats bounced from critical columns as those who sit in judgment upon the theatre defend or assail the Norman Bel Geddes production of "Hamlet."

No play in recent years has created such a controversy as the revival of Shakespeare's play of the Prince of Denmark. The purists among the critics, those, who, like their Shakespeare straight and orthodox, have denounced the Bel Geddes production as taking too many liberties with a work they consider sacred literature.

There is a rival school of critics who are just as ardent and enthusiastic in lauding the show. They like the way Bel Geddes has "humanized" the play, taking some of the awfulness from its gloom and making the dialogue more easily understood. They like the performance of Hamlet by Raymond Massey, Toronto-born actor, pointing out that he is the first of Lord Privy Seal's successors to portray the part of Lord Privy Seal in the Cabinet. Above are photographs of the "Iron Chancellor" and his wife.

Massey is a young, angry, revengeful Hamlet who is more concerned with the moaning of his part than with the pretty sound of his impressive words.

As the critics, purists and modernists, rave and rant at each other Bel Geddes sits back smiling. For "Hamlet" is one of the two outstanding dramatic hits of the season, the other being "Mourning Becomes Electra."

The feature of Bel Geddes' "Hamlet" really is his lighting and scenery. The latter is "nothing more than adjustable blocks which may be moved in a second to become either a castle hall or the indescribable expanse of a graveyard. A dozen batteries of stage lights are so arranged that they can illuminate any corner of the stage, yet leave the remainder in pitch darkness. This eliminated the use of all curtains and wings.

The Mahatma's sin consists of drinking goats milk which, he said contains "life" belongs to the mother of goat's young and ought not to be consumed by human. He said he would have given up goats milk as a food long ago if he could have found a suitable substitute.

His doctor urges him to eat eggs in order to increase his weight, which is only 92 pounds, but he said he could not, "because they contain life, and we humans have no right to take life, even the life of a chicken."

Others had tried to persuade him to eat meat, he said, but he had yielded only two or three times during his life and then only when he was in bad company."

HIGHWAY WORK IS NOT AFFECTED

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20 (CP)—Officials of the Ontario Northern development department explained today that under no present system work on roads in Northern Ontario was being done in shifts in order to employ as many men as possible. The explanation was given when a deputation from Iroquois drawn to their attention. The despatch said that no shifts were laid off.

The trans-Canada highway work is not affected; only local roads. In connection with the latter it was decided to give part time work to the men who were hired in the north.

Premier's Health! Much Improved By Sea Voyage

Southampton, Eng., Nov. 21 — (Canadian Press Cable)—Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, arrived here today from New York and was met by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain, who boarded the Aquitania and held a long conversation with the Prime Minister before they left the ship.

On shore Mr. Bennett declined to discuss any affairs in an interview. He said, however, that he had just shaken hands with the Canadian Pacific and hoped to see him butter. "You may read anything you like into that," he added, "it may mean tariffs or anything else."

Replying to a question as to whether he had any proposition to make while in London, the Prime-Minister countered with a twinkle "Only yesterday I made an interested Canadian to come to this country to make investments."

While in London Mr. Bennett will stay at the Mayfair Hotel. He will make a number of courtesy calls on Cabinet Ministers in his capacity of Minister of External Affairs.

He will remain a week and then leave for the south of France. Already he has his health greatly improved by the sea voyage and complete rest.

KING GEORGE HONORS PHILIP SNOWDEN

The news that His Majesty has been pleased to make Right Hon. Philip Snowden a Viscount is most popular. The rise of this son of a poor man to the front ranks of British statesmanship reads like a fairy tale. Born in poor surroundings, Philip Snowden overcame great obstacles, the greatest of which was his physical infirmity. At the age of twenty-seven the stern Socialist was injured in an accident and ever since has not known a moment's respite from agonizing pain, but for all that he struggled on with the aid of his chancellor's wife, and has at last reached the pinnacle of fame. As a member of the Nationalist Government he holds the post of Lord Privy Seal in the Cabinet. Above are photographs of the "Iron Chancellor" and his wife.

BUDDY AND THE SQUIRREL

Meet Buddy!

Buddy is a four or five year old little boy who lives somewhere on Charles street. That's up where the little squirrels hold sway in the branches of the trees in the tourist camp and surrounding streets. Here they sit and chatter of social events and daily happenings. Sometimes, too, they descend to the ground where they frisk and frolic around with little jumps like small boys let out of school. Occasionally if you have a bag of peanuts in your pocket they will come right up to you and plead with big shoe-button eyes for their share. Grey squirrels, red squirrels and black ones, and all are as tame as one could expect the little animals to be.

Buddy stood on the sidewalk with sturdy little legs braced like he had seen his dad do. From big, blue eyes, wide-open in wonder he surveyed the scene before him of little black things with big bushy tails frisking around right under his nose. He couldn't understand them. Cars and doggies he had seen and had petted. He liked the dogs best though because they didn't have those nasty hooks in their feet like the cats did. And they didn't spit and snarl either. But here was something new; something he had never seen before in the few short years he had been out getting acquainted with things around the neighborhood. And from the extensive gaze developed the desire back in his little head to get one of those funny little things and take it home to show his mother, who no doubt had never seen one of them either.

Slowly and cautiously he started to stalk one of them who was busily engaged in examining something he had found. Closer Buddy crept, unnoticed by the unsuspecting black squirrel. Who had time to think of his back turned and did not see him. Whether or not the animal knew Buddy was coming, or whether he did it just out of pure squirrel devilry, or thought he would play one of the "old tricks" which squirrels are inordinately fond of playing perhaps will never be known. However, just as Buddy gleefully reached out his chubby little hands for the "Blackie", the little animal frisked around with a stare in his direction, just as the mid-action of his mother is when he meets a strange dog face to face in the park and doesn't know whether to fight or run or just bark. Only in this instance the squirrel made up poor Buddy's clicking little mind for him. The squirrel "Blackie" started for the little fellow, sprang from the ground—which was not such a great spring after all when you consider that Buddy's little fat legs were not very long, not as long as the average four or five old boys' because Buddy was a fat little fellow—and ran up his pants leg, and on to the top of the lad's shoulder and chattered vicously—in fact it seemed to Buddy as if he widered boy's ear.

If there was anything else in the world Buddy didn't want, it was a strange, black little animal with funny teeth sitting on his shoulder, and cracking one some sensitive ear drum. So he acted therefore as the lad's breath, mind and body seems to work in one and more methods for the quick disposal of this terrible thing, but stamped and howled until "Blackie" perhaps thought the joke had been carried far enough, then with a little run down Buddy's back and a flip of a final warning chatter he scampered off across the park, amid the shrill chuckles of his to her little companions who had gathered from their hiding places and who made the park ring with their sounds of merriment.

LIBRARY CORNER

The story of the tragic lives of the Bronte family that lived in the Yorkshire moors is told in "Haworth parsonage." There home on the limestone hills was the scene of much sorrow and misfortune. Here the three sisters Emily, Anne and Charlotte wrote books "Wuthering Heights," "Agnes Grey" and "Jane Eyre." Here Charlotte was left alone after the death of her sisters, and here also, the place of her marriage to her father's curate. Her life seemed fated for unhappiness, however, for she died a year after her marriage at the age of thirty-nine. Miss Clarke's book is a fitting tribute to the three sisters who were perhaps the most striking example of "group genius" that the world has ever seen.

David Grayson, whose leisurely "Adventures in Contentment," "Friendship" and Undirstanding" are fine examples of a very humane philosophy has written a new volume "Adventures in Solitude." His period of enforced solitude was due to a serious illness and his reading in this thought occurred during his convalescent stage. A unique method of amusing himself was by keeping up an unpoloted correspondence with Mussolini, President Hoover and John D. Rockefeller. All who have read and enjoyed Grayson's other volumes will want to read "Adventures in Solitude."

Two new books of the Library that men will like are "Gold, men and dogs" and "Seven lives to tell the Tale." The former is the autobiography of Alexander Scott Mclan, one of the worlds greatest mushers of dog teams, thrice winner of the famous Alaska sweepstakes. He has led a very adventurous life from the time he joined the Great Gold Rush to the Klondike to the present day. He describes tribes visited, days and endless days of the Rush, his rise to fame as winner of the sweepstakes after a race of over four hundred miles of wilderness with the thermometer often down to fifty-five below zero and his strange experiences when commissioned by the French government in 1915 to bring several hundred dogs to France to the Western front.

Elmend Gilligan in "One lives to tell the Tale" has recorded the story of three hundred Canadians who escaped during the first year of the war from a prison camp in South Africa and tried to make their way northward through the jungles and deserts to safety within the German lines. Ludwig Bemelmans, the sole survivor, now an executive officer of the United States coast guard ship Carrigan has given the author ample material for an exciting book.

An addition to the radio section of the Library is "The radio amateurs handbook, a manual of amateur short wave radio telegraphic communication." The book is intended as a reference work for beginners-operators of the American Radio Relay League and other radio amateurs and also as a source of information to those who wish to participate in amateur radio activities but have no idea how to get started.

EXHIBITIONS FOR CHARITY

NEW YORK—People of this city and visitors can thank hard times for opportunities presented them to view the works of some of the world's most noted old masters. An exhibition here in aid of charity are paintings valued at more than a million dollars.

Ten Rembrandts, portraits of the artist's brother and his wife are being displayed to art lovers for the first time in 25 years. The portraits are from the Porges collection in Paris and are valued at 1500,000. They date from 1650 to 1654, just before the period when the painter, then 48 years old, faced bankruptcy. I was in 1654 that he painted his famous "Portrait of Jan Six."

Just 23 years ago these paintings were exhibited to the public in honor of Queen Wilhelmina at Amsterdam at the Stedlyk Museum They have not been seen in public since. They are the property of the Porges collection they were in the collection of the Rothschilds of Sir in London.

A painting of the Madonna and Child, believed to be the original work of Raphael from Marcus Hallmaster, has been on exhibition here like the Rembrandts in aid of charity. Dr. Bode, the famous art collector owns the Raphael which is valued at 250,000. Years ago he sent it to Berlin for cleaning and restoration and had just been returned. The painting is said to have been sacrificed by Professor Oskar Pischel, Berlin, an authority on RaphaelHas the "lost Perugi Madonna."

Sir Henry Raeburn's portrait, "The Boy with Rabbits" recently sold for 25,500, is also on exhibition. The painting formerly belonged to the late Gifford A. Cochran, wealthy sportsman and patron of the arts.

VIKING'S HOUSE SEEN IN GREENLAND

Copenhagen—Discovery of the ruins of a stone house said to have been built by Eric the Red, banished Vikings on the east coast of Greenland, is reported by Knud Rasmussen, explorer in that region.

Returning after a long stay in Greenland he said he had no information once was used as a shelter either by Eric the Red or Leif Ericsinfosterer after being shipwrecked. He found it at the tip of Cape Farewell, Idunfjord, the first white settlement in eastern Greenland, which Rasmussen visited on his journey.

AWARDED MEDAL FOR ART SERVICE

DICE TO DECIDE WHO HOPS OCEAN

San Francisco, Calf.—Five aviators sailed recently for Honolulu on the initial leg of a transpacific flight, aiming to shake dice to decide which one should attempt to fly back aboard a monoplane stowed away in the Coolidge's hold.

Leading the group was J. K. Gayling the only woman flyer of Althaus, former German war flier with him were R. S. Mead, Harry Forbes, W. S. London, and Tom Darby. Their plane has a cruising radius of 3,500 miles. It is 2,400 miles away here and Honolulu. Althaus said.

He will undertaken to gamble for the privilege of piloting the first plane from the mainland to Honolulu. He will be a solo flight. We hope to complete it in less than 20 hours."

The first worker in the field of mental heredity was Sir Francis Galton, who in 1869 published a book with the title "Hereditary Genius."

Central Park in the heart of N'w York City contains nearly 1,909 acres of land. It was set aside in 1858.

A STEEL HIPPOPOTAMUS—THAT FIGHTS

What is believed to be the most sensational development yet made in the field of armored cars is represented by this amphibian fortress, equally at home on land or on the water. It is a 50-ton land-sea-water tank is shown plowing ploughing up the waters of the River Thames, near London, in one of its recent tests. The craft was photographed while it was making six miles an hour against both wind and currents. Note how heavily it is armored. The gun sticking from the turret is far more deadly than any weapon a hippopotamus which the tank resembles, could employ.

TRENTON CAFE HELD UP AND ROBBED

Early Sunday Morning Holdup Nets Bold Pair $50.00 at Trenton Cafe

Belleville Boy Called Out of Restaurant By Bandits

ESCAPE IN FOG

Patrons of Cafe Have Exciting Time at 1.45 A.M.

Trenton, Nov. 23 (Special Correspondence)—Two armed bandits paid Trenton a visit on Sunday morning about 1.45 a.m. They held-up and terred the Boston Cafe, which is on Dundas Street, directly opposite Front Street. On entering the cafe one of the hold-up men stepped to the right of the door ordering the customers of the place to remain seated. They did not notice Mr. Lee, the owner of the cafe to the rear of the establishment, as he stood behind the show case and tried to open the cash register which resisted his efforts. Finding he could not open the till he went and got the gun and at the point of the gun forced him to open the till from which he secured about $50. They immediately left the cafe and it is thought they went to Front Street, where they had their car "planted" for the getaway, a hearty to help get their escape.

The police arrived on the scene a few minutes later and every effort is being made to apprehend the hold-up men. Various descriptions of the men are given. The one was a young man and slim man with a brown cap pulled well down over his eyes and was wearing a light fall overcoat. Nothing is known of the other who was partly hidden while standing in the door. This is the first holdup in Trenton in a good many years and the five patrons of the cafe at the time of the hold-up, will have something to talk about for some time to come. They were Mr. and Mrs. Bell of Wooler; Mr. Harold Nicholson, manager of the Bank of Montreal, and Gladys Pingbbon and Mr. Gordon Reed.

CITY POLICE PATROL ROAD

But Find No Trace of Bandit Late From Trenton

About ten minutes to two o'clock Sunday morning the Belleville police received a telephone call from the Trenton police warning them about the Boston Cafe holdup. It was thought that the men would make their getaway to travel on the main highway and Constable Evans, Constable Gay stationed themselves along the Belleville-Trenton highway on the city limits where they remained for an hour. It was a dark foggy night and they have told that the bandits can carried only one headlight. However the Belleville constables took no chances on the light having been put out of commission temporarily by removing one bulb and replacing it after the completion of their car had been broadcasted so they stopped all cars that came along. The hold-up men were not captured. All motorists were given a satisfactory account as to their identity and destination.

AYLMER PLANT AT CAPACITY

Anti-Dumping Duty Has Had Stimulating Effect on Industries

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 23—The first effect locally of imposition of the new British anti-dumping duties comes in the form of a large order for condensed milk to the Canadian Company Limited, Aylmer, from the company's export branch in England, through the head office in New York. The extent of the order, according to A. W. Campbell, of the Aylmer plant, will be a million and a half pounds of fresh milk. It will take the entire output of the Aylmer plant for December. Much of the company's business in the United Kingdom has heretofore been taken care of from the Carnation plants in Holland. On receipt of the order the Carnation Company and Aylmer at once recalled thirty-men who had been laid off temporarily and began operations of the plant at 100 per cent.

How Rare a November Day!

Roads were crowded with motor cars, people lounged about eating lunches brought by them to various picnicking places; turtles ambled deviously across roads and there were front gardens of residents across the bay; up in Cobourg a number of the folks donned bathing suits and made merry in the clear waters of the lake and butterflies were observed fluttering around a hedge of roses still in bloom at Wellington in another Summer Sunday on 22nd of November.

MAJ. ALDERSON FOUND DEAD

Was Distinguished Military Man From Kingston

Gravenhurst, Ont., Nov. 22 — Missing since Saturday night, Major Fred Alderson, Kingston army officer, was found dead this morning in an automobile parked on the outskirts of this town. Major Alderson was a tubercular patient in Calydor Sanatorium here.

It is understood a length of rubber hose was found attached to the exhaust pipe and leading into the car, and that the ignition key was found in the ignition, engine was not running and the motor cold.

Major Alderson's widow is a daughter of Auguste Meilleur, of Ottawa and sister of Senator Rodolphe Lemieux, former speaker in the House of Commons. Prior to his widow, one daughter, living in the Kirkfield Convent at Peterboro, survives.

Major Alderson won the Distinguished Service Order early in the Great War, in which he served as an artillery officer with the Second Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force.

The discovery of the body ended a search that had continued Saturday night and all Sunday. Major Alderson was found on a side road about four miles from the city by William McDonald, a district resident.

An inquest will be opened today.

CHASE YOUTH OFF WITH GUN

Strangers Summon Belleville Lad Out of Cafe — Question Him

Trenton, Nov. 23 (Special) —Eric Richards, 17 years of age, Belleville, had an unpleasant and novel experience yesterday. He was the principle episode early Sunday morning. He was chased at the front table from the Boston cafe by a man facing the window and was waiting for a companion. The two men were seen walking back and forth on the sidewalk looking for Richards, who remained tightly locked no time in following the proffered advice.

On Sunday he returned to Trenton and was questioned in regard of the hold-up. He at once went to tell his story to Chief Bain.

Colors according to scientific research, affect persons as follows — Red and orange stimulate; deep yellow stimulates; blue has a quieting effect and white induces irritation.

Even Poet-Raconteur Feels Pinch of Taxes

HASTINGS, Eng., (by mail) Nov. 23—Rudyard Kipling has complained that his taxes are too high.

In a protest to the assessment committee here the noted author declared the committee would be lucky to get 10,000 now for a $4,000 house built in 1924.

Furthermore, the river near his home at Burwash frequently floods, swamped a tennis court and forced him to use planks to leave or enter the house.

The committee decided not to make any reductions, however.

GLOOMY DEAN OPTIMISTIC ON UNIVERSE

Fate of Terrestrial Ball and Universe Not So Dark

PURPOSE OF GOD

Sees Nothing to Support Fears of End in "Nothingness"

NEW YORK, Nov. 23 (CP)—The "gloomy dean" of St. Paul's, the Very Rev. W. R. Inge, has revealed himself as an optimist over the ultimate fate of the universe, says the New Lork Times in a special cable from London.

He was frankly skeptical of the theories of Sir Arthur Eddington and Sir James Jeans that the universe must end in nothingness.

During a lecture on the subject Sunday the dean said: "Even if the whole of the Einstein theory were known must submit to universal doom that only means that we have got to look at the purposes of God which like all purposes that are not impetuous has the power beginning middle and end. In that case there would be no room for the world of orders of which we know nothing."

The theory has expanded and vanishing universe, according to Eddington, is a more "pessimistic than Gotterdammerung" and a complete reversal of the nineteenth century's philosophy of hopefulness."

SECOND DEATH IN BALL TEAM

Undefeated St. Edward's Team Again Victorious

St. Edward, Nov. 23—Twice within three days death has depleted the ranks of St. Edward's undefeated high school football team.

Last Friday, William Weed, 18, years old, died from a skull fracture suffered in a game at Osceola, Nab., yesterday, Clifford Walker, 16, end and a fullback on the team, died from a fractured skull from an infection that developed following a hip injury received in game with the Tullerton, Ont., high school team. He was ill for three weeks.

A week ago Weed went to Omath and gave Wake a pint of blood. His father died recently and the friend had been fatally injured.

VAST EXPANSE OF UNIVERSE

Extra-Galactic System Expanding Says Dutch Scientist

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 22.—(By the Canadian Press)—The radius of the known universe which is now between two thousand million light years and twenty thousand million light years, said Prof. W. De Sitter distinguished Dutch astronomer, addressing the Royal Canadian Institute here Saturday night. Light travels 186,000 miles a second, he said.

It had been discovered recently, he said, that the whole extra-Galactic system universe is about 200,000,000 light years at the rate of 200 miles a second. The system appeared to be expanding rapidly, doubling its size every 1,600,000,000 years.

MAYORALTY CONTESTANTS

MAYOR GEORGE A. REID, who has announced his candidature for a third term for Mayor for 1932. The mayor has been in the council for four years.

ALD. GEORGE O. TICE, former chairman of Gas Committee and a member of the City Council for six years, who announced his intention some days ago of running for the office of Mayor.

Mayor Reid is Candidate Mayoralty Race Assured

Likelihood of Large Field of Candidates For Council Seats

INTEREST RISES

"I am definitely in the field for the mayoralty for the year 1932," stated Mayor Cobrey A. Reid today to the press. "You know my policy it is progress."

Mayor Reid first entered the city council four years ago and in 1929 he was chairman of the printing and stationery committee and in the following year he was chairman of public works. During the last two years he has filled the office of mayor.

The two years which have just passed have been strenuous ones. They have seen the city's total of $37,500 in relief grants from the federal and provincial government fund. These years have also seen the relief of five million dollars burden taken off the city by the Ontario Government.

Alderman Tice, who was the first to enter the mayoralty contest for the year 1932 has been in the council since 1926, the present year being his last. Last year he defeated the poll of aldermen. He has been chairman of public works committee and later he took charge of the municipal gas generators, succeeding Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C. In recent months he has been conspicuous at one of the greatest industrial deals in the taking over of the gas plant by the Ontario Shore Gas Company and its entry into the field here shortly.

With the two candidates in the field for mayor, the vote on the day-light saving by-law, and the increase in number of candidates for the mayoralty, the possibility of an acclamation for 1932 has as far as it is evident entirely disappeared.

Among names mentioned as probable aldermanic material next year are those of these well known citizens, F. Hounsell, R. P. Wright, Charles N. Sulman, an ex-mayor; John O'Flynn and William McCreary.

It is understood that the question of aldermanic representation in the city's present council has been discussed at meetings held within the past few weeks.

Everything indicates rather a large field and especially more than usual interest in the presenet at the council.

MALE HEIR IS BORN IN INDIA

Maharaja Signals Event With Remission of Fines

New Delhi, India, Nov. 23 (AP) — For a hundred years the Maharajah's heir has been born in the line of the successive Maharajas of Kapurpur, but today there was a magnificent Durbar, for the wife of Maharaja Jagatjit Singhji Bahadur has presented him with a son.

It was a day of public celebration and the Maharaja announced holidays, remission of fines and rents over the past five years, a gesture which involved about $1,000,000.

Allege Plate Was Robbed

Toronto, Nov. 23. — The collection plate of a local Presbyterian church is said to have been a source of revenue to Samuel Mackenzie, 39, of Toronto. Mackenzie was taken into custody following a service in the church yesterday. Two plainclothesmen appeared a few immediately behind him and as they observed him remove a dollar bill from the plate he was taken into custody on a charge of theft after the service.

MONTH EXTRA IS GIVEN TO YOUTH

SUDBURY, Ont., Nov. 23.—Pleading guilty to a charge of escaping from Burwash Industrial Farm, Salem Hammer, aged 25, of Toronto, was given one month in addition to his term of from four to six months on three charges of theft by Magistrate J. D. McCulloch in police court here today. "If you try anything like that again, you'll likely be sent to the penitentiary," said the court.

Hammer was arrested by the police guards about five miles from the farm.

BALLOONIST IS AT DEAN LAKE

George Vanik, Cleveland, Has Been Missing Two Days

Cleveland, O., Nov. 23—Briefly mentioning an all-night struggle in a balloon against a terrific blizzard the aeronautical world announced that it was wrecked, and a subsequent 48 hours of hardship, George Vanik, 25, missing Cleveland balloonist, today reported he is safe at Dean Lake, Ontario.

Vanik had not been heard from since he left Cleveland, at 5.30 p.m., Thursday in a 35,000 cubic-foot balloon. The word of his arrival at Dean Lake was contained in a telegram to his mother Mrs. Marie Vanik.

The telegram said the balloon was wrecked near Sault Ste. Marie Ontario, Friday morning, and that Vanik received a wrenched leg and bruised shoulder in the landing. Suffering from his injuries he lay for the next two days and nights, but the message said he is "all O.K. now."

Vanik had been aloft only a short time when the heavy wind and rain storm struck. The trail craft evidently was violently blown out over Lake Erie, and thence north-westward in Ontario.

The balloonist is expected to descend within a few hours and his safe word will have been with friends began to fear for his life.

YOUTH FOUND DEAD ON RAIL AT PORT HOPE

Inquest Opens on Body of Young Victim of Accident

IDENTIFICATION

Some Doubt as to Who Victim of Rail Accident is

The body of a young man was found lying on the right of way of the railroad near Port Hope, today, his body nearly severed. It is presumed he fell beneath the wheels of the freight upon which he was riding. An inquest was opened by the coroner at Port Hope and after preliminary evidence was taken was adjourned for one week.

At first it was thought from the fact that near or on the body were a watch guard and a ring with the name of Belleville and the city that it was a Belleville youth who had been away from this city for some time and had returned home. The father of the young man in question listened at the inquest and was positive that the body was not that of his son.

Efforts are being made to identify the body. The police at Port Hope were the source of information to the local police

SKIDDING CAR HITS PUPILS

Five of One Family, One Other Are Hurt at Hull

Hull, Que., Nov. 23—(CP)—A group of children, returning to their homes from school for lunch, were injured, when an automobile crashed into the sidewalk at Gatineau Point Village, shortly after noon today. Six of the children were injured, five of them members of one family, and two were in serious condition in hospital here this afternoon.

Gerard Mineault 13, suffered a fractured skull, while her 7 year old brother and three sisters, ranging in age from 8 to 12 years old, sustained less serious injuries. Only Richard, 13 is in hospital with a possible fractured skull.

The automobile which skidded into the group of children was driven by Miss Marguerite Philipe, Gatineau Point. She escaped injury. Four of the children were struck by the car while the other two fell when the car skidded right past which was struck by the automobile.

POLICE LOOK FOR TWO SAFE BLOWERS

Sudbury, Ont. Nov. 23.—City police are searching for two safe blowers who last evening wrecked the office of a local dairy and left here. They escaped with $40.00 and considerable booty.

The explosion was heard by a little girl about 8 o'clock and it is that she thought an oil tank had exploded and locked the doors of her home in fright. She did not tell anyone. The robbery was not discovered until an hour later by a constable on his beat.

World Champion Sap Afraid of Shakespeare

HAVERFORD, Pa., Nov. 23.—An order made out 355 years ago this week for the arrest of "William Shakespeare late of Stratford" has been discovered in the records of the Court of Queen's Bench in England by Leslie Hotson, Professor of English at Haverford College, in his study of documents in the life of the Bard of Avon. The order was discovered by Professor Hotson during his researches in the rolls of the Queen's Bench in England for material for a life of Shakespeare's life. The order was written at the request of Sir Thomas Lucy, who, the paper said, "walked in fear of his death" at the hands of Shakespeare and three of his friends. One of these, Francis Langley, had been imprisoned for a few months before from William Gardner and Wayte, Dr. Hotson learned through papers in the files. Dr. Hotson said he believes he has identified the originals of Shallow and Slender in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." It was generally believed, whom the dramatist sought, Sir Thomas Lucy, who, the paper said, while Slender, whose original Dr. Hotson believes to have been Wayte, remains literature's "unparalled sap."

Boy Chokes Eating Pear

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 23—(CP)—Five year old Leon Mailhiot choked to death last night at the home of his parents in St. Joachim. He had been eating pears and was awakened when a bone was prepared. LIBERALS ARE IN CAUCUS

OTTAWA, Ont, Nov. 23—Matters of finance and organization were under discussion when, after several years, the National Liberal organization committee met here today. With approximately sixty prominent Liberals from all provinces present, the committee went into conference behind closed doors to discuss organization matters. Presiding over the meeting was Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader. Many of those who sat on the treasury benches with him during the last administration were present.

Before plunging into the business for which they have come to Ottawa, the delegates held an informal meeting in Mr. King's office in the Parliament Buildings. "It might be exchanged greetings. The business meeting did not begin until after eleven o'clock, and it was intimated that the session would last until one o'clock or after. There would be an interval for lunch after which business discussion would be continued.

Prior to the meeting Mr. King outlined in a sentence of the functions of the committee. "It might be termed the ways and means committee of the Liberal party," he said. Financial matters would assume a prominent position in the discussion, and there was also the possibility of a general campaign for the Liberal party being selected. As the matters under discussion were not concerned with policy, but concierly with organization, it was understood any lengthy statement would be issued. On the other hand, arrangements would be made to give out news from time to time; should any develop.

Tomorrow representatives of the National Federation of Liberal women and of the 20th Century Liberal Association, will join in conference with the National Liberal Organization committee. It is anticipated that the business will be completed by to-morrow evening. Meetings are taking place in the Parliament Buildings.

N. Y. TEA HOUSE IS ROBBED, ONE DEAD

Washington, D.C., Nov. 23— One unidentified man was killed and five persons seriously wounded early today by gunmen who held up a tea house and fled with $325.

The bandits entered the tea establishment when five hold-up men entered, leaving one in a car outside. Police said they found no loot here. They escaped with $40.00 and considerable booty.

The explosion was heard by a little girl about 8 o'clock and it is that she thought an oil tank had exploded and locked the doors of her home in fright. She did not tell anyone. The robbery was not discovered until an hour later by a constable on his beat.

SUCCESS IS ASSURED FOR SERVICE LOAN

Messages of Optimism Pouring Into Acting Finance Minister

BOOKS OPENED

Price is 99 1-2 For Five Year and 99 For Ten Year Bonds

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP) — Success seemed assured today for the Dominion of Canada $150,000,000 national service loan.

Messages of optimism continued to arrive this morning at the office of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, acting Minister of Finance, who is directing the loan, from members of the advisory committee from Atlantic to the Pacific coast. Every province has reported confidence has been expressed that success is assured.

Subscription books opened through Canada previous to morning, but already many millions of dollars have been allotted in applications received during the past week.

In two maturities, the price of the issue is 99½ for five year bonds, and 99 for the ten year bonds, which are redeemable 51 per cent., and 5.13 per cent. respectively.

The new national service loan is a Canadian issue, payable as to principal and interest in Canadian funds, but it has attracted the interest of United States investors, who are likely to take quite a large share of the issue. Many of the large business houses of the Dominion will take large blocks of the loan, while insurance companies and loan companies run into the millions. "Dominion-wide support" it has been made to the citizens of Canada, from investor with a few hundred dollars to invest to the millionaire, and the messages received by the national committee men all bear the keynote.

Wholehearted support will be given the national service loan by our citizens. Over-subscription is expected."

The leading banks and investment houses of Canada have been organized into a wide bond-selling organization to handle the sale of the loan.

The sulphur of coal smoke will be removed from flowers much paler, or even white.

Equality of rights logically involves equality of duties.

ESSENTIAL TO A GOOD LAWN

Careful Planting And Constant Care Necessary

Attractive green turf, the desire of every suburbanite home owner, is the ambition of any one who is willing to follow carefully certain fundamentals. The first is preparing the ground for a new lawn, in seeding it and in caring for the grass once it has made its growth.

The most important of these, comparatively small area, the extra cost of giving the seed bed the necessary fertilizing and fertilizing to insure best results and of buying the best seed is surprisingly little. Skimping on seed and fertilizer is the most frequent cause of disappointment, H. L. Westover and O. R. Mc Clure, agronomists with the United States Department of Agriculture in a recent bulletin. The bulletin gives instructions for the planting and care of lawns in all parts of the United States and has been compiled by these two experts.

Climate and soil determine the kind of grass seed that should be planted in various parts of the country and also the time of year when the lawn grasses should be planted. Kentucky bluegrass, alone or mixed with red top and the best grasses for shady places, is the recommended grasses over most of the United States. Fall is the best time to seed with seed which is carefully prepared in the spring, they say. Creeping bent grass, used for putting greens, however is started from pieces of runners. This grass requires much more attention than the other grasses.

The Department of Agriculture specialists advise "Fall coaxing of lawns in the North; weeds are less troublesome then and a good start before the Spring crop of weeds germinates. Lawns however should do best if seeded in the Spring.

NEW AIR DRILL IN OPERATION

35 Men Are Now Employed on Auxiliary Line

Work is rapidly being carried forward by the C.N.R. on the new line employed on the excavation for the new spur water tank. The main contract for the main force is well past the Mary street intersection and it is expected by the foreman in charge that some time this afternoon they will be well up to North West Dundas street hill, otherwise known at times as the Corbyville hill. Work also continues to pour into the lower end of the trench and men are required to wear rubber boots while working, but it is expected that as soon as higher ground is reached that the digging will be dry and more gravelly.

At the other end of the trench a beginning has been made on the Gardner-Denver compressor has been set up by the C.N.R. workers and one of the new air drills is in action drilling the holes necessary for blasting. The other air motor drill and their action is quite rapid. One man is required to hold the drill and it is expected that the drills will be in the foundations of the old type steam drills and be some three times faster.

SASKATCHEWAN GOES TO POLLS

Regina, Sas., Nov. 23.—All Saskatchewan goes to the polls today, in eight cities, 80 towns, rural municipalities and more than 6,000 school districts, election machinery was set going this morning. With fair weather in prospect a record vote in many districts is looked for.

In city and country, chief issues are economy taxation and relief, and in most municipalities candidates will seek votes on economy platforms. The Labor party joins Communism has become an issue, with electors closely questioning candidates in regard to their social ideas.

ALLEGE QUARREL ENDS IN SHOOTING

OSHAWA, Ont., Nov. 23.—Jesse Sadler of Bradford, Ont, is in the hospital here and Fred Bailey of Scugog Island is in custody in the county Jail at Whitby, following a shooting on Scugog Island near Port Perry yesterday. Bailey is charged with shooting with intent to wound. Provincial Police claim Sadler visited Bailey and the two men quarrelled.

DUCK HUNTER UPSETS PUNT

Man and Boat Soon Beached on North-port Shore

From busy Peterboro factories very many unlikable canoes and skiffs have been built and distributed throughout many provinces in Canada, and other countries. Mr. J. J. Grahams seen at work while in use on Lake Tanganyika in Africa. Their fame is world-wide, but still very many silliness of this city are still unaware of the fact that these unsinkable boats are to be had — or perhaps it is that when they feel the need or urge for a quiet paddle on nearby waters and rivers they simply borrow several of the ordinary canoes and skiffs have been known to be a cramping and annoyance and accidents have been the result of their use. Points are but temperamental, so much so that when word is received of one boat capsized over then it is worthy of a news item.

Sunday afternoon a prominent merchant of this city taking advantage of the beautiful spring-like day decided to go in a little paddle in a nearby punt. Several feet — several hundred feet in fact — from the shore he was joined by the rower from above. His rower was a duck, apparently quite unafraid, and emulating a hard shelled reptile of that same name he dived down to the bottom of the bay in grand confusion. However after some gallant efforts he was straightened out and the swimmer straightened way by her leaving the boat behind him. Shore was reached without difficulty and although wet and dripping the man and the boat were beaching and he related during afternoon on the shores of Northport and the waters of the bay near Telegraph Light.

FLOWERS ARE BLOOMING

Seasonable Flowers Still Bloom in Mrs. Clapper's Garden

Mrs. Job Clapper, R. R. 2, Belleville, is a very enthusiastic grower of flowers of many varieties and she raised a perfect paradise in the cultivation of her garden. This season owing to the exceedingly mild weather many flowers such as butterscotch, snapdragon, forget-me-not and larkspur have continued to bud and some to bloom up to the present late date. A bush of the Mock Orange bush, a small variety of rose, has bloomed for three months of the season and at times has had as many as fifty blooms thereon. The Larkspur is still in bloom in Mrs. Clapper's garden.

KNUTE ROCKNE'S MAGIC VOICE

A remarkable thing happens in "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Though he was killed some months ago in an airplane crash, the voice of Knute Rockne, famous football coach, is heard in an impassioned harangue to the team as they go on a big game. The players run through simple plays, or pass the ball among themselves, and over it all sounds stoccato voice of the tempestuous coach, inspiring them to the measure of his own tremendous enthusiasm.

Indeed, in this very speech may be found one of the most remarkable lessons for the continuing success of Notre Dame teams. It is a "pep-up" speech without a touch of profanity or false men to the heights of endeavor — rapid, forceful, impassioned leading in a constant crescendo of tumbling words and then suddenly, if there ever was one. The picture, which is directed by Hobart Henley, has been distributed by Pathe.

"The Spirit of Notre Dame," which will appear at the Capitol Theatre on Saturday, includes in its supporting cast such famous Rockne coached players as Eddie Garvey, twice All-American quarterback, "The Four Horsemen," Elmer Sullins and Bucky O'Connor, William Bakewell, a Paramount juvenile, Sally Blane, Andy Devine and Harry Harris also play prominent roles in this fast-moving picture, which was directed by Russell Mack.

I hope before I die to make the use of imported commas illegal in Great Britain.—Stanley Baldwin.

CROSS AND ITS SIGNIFICANCE

Service of Hymn and Story Built up Around Crucifixion

With the singing of old time hymns, the congregation of Holy Trinity Street United Church were entertained by the members of their choir last evening. During the progress of the evening the choir quartette consisting of Mrs. Hagerman, Mrs. Moynes, Mr. Geo. Dunlapp and Mr. E. Moore sang "Nailed to the Cross," the male quartette sang "The Old Wayside Cross" and Mrs. J. Adams sang "There is a Green Hill Far Away." During the evening Mr. Alec Gordon rendered Stainers Crucifixion on the pipe organ. The male quartette was made up of Messrs. Nonos, Dunlapp, Moynes and Thrasher. Before the closing hymn Miss Irish read "The Story of Calvary Cross" assisted by the choir. All the hymns sung were much appreciated by the congregation, that was present as they brought back many memories of days gone by.

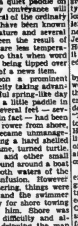
In line with the spirit of the service, Rev. H. R. Neal spoke to the congregation on the subject of the Cross. Taking as his text the 23 verse of the 23rd chapter of the gospel according to St. Luke, "And they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified Him." Rev. Neal pointed out, this story is the most wonderful story ever told. It is the only story that is recorded in all four gospels. It is there are two outstanding characters Jesus and Pilate, which Pilate can only see the great Roman Empire and its mighty power, while Jesus saw the glorious record that had left in its wake something that would live for ever. He realized that Jesus was alone before Pilate but he had no fear in His heart and it was due to this that Pilate seemed to sense the situation.

In those days the punishment of crucifixion was one of the most worst elements of society and when we see Jews while Jesus to be crucified they were intended to degrade Him as much as possible. While we may disagree with the history of the world," said Rev. Neal, "we have to say that the Jews were illy realized the real significance of Jesus' teaching which was exacted at Calvary but that its power was to be manifested in the future.

Napoleon Bonaparte at St. Helena said, "Jesus Christ was the greatest personality who had ever tread this globe," Mr. Neal pointed out the two outstanding signs of the Cross and in his closing remarks said that we must serve Jesus faithfully if we expect ever to realize understand Him." The service was built around the Cross and was enjoyed by all who heard it.

Letters to the Editor

COINCIDENCE



Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer, Dear Sir:

Will you allow me to add a postscript to the article which you so kindly published last Friday regarding the Rev. Dr. Campbell, inducted in Campbellville? It may interest some in Belleville.

That Sunday afternoon, there was a very tall, white haired man and jet black hair in my congregation. He was a student in his third year in Toronto University. His name was Solomon Cleaver. He rose rapidly to a position of prominence in the Methodist Church and is today the Rev. Dr. Solomon Cleaver, D.D. I believe he has recently published a book on prayer. A few years ago he was pastor of Bridge Street Church in the city. He too, preached his first sermon in Campbellville. Singular coincidence, that both chose the text for our initial sermon and it was this. "Therefore endure hardness as a good soldier of Jesus Christ." 2 Tim. 2.3.

Sincerely yours,
(Sgd.) W. J. MacTavish.

ATTACKS WIRE OF FERGUSON

Comment on British Election Protested By Mackenzie King

Montreal, Nov. 23—Traversing the whole range of Canada's financial situation, especially commenting Premier R. B. Bennett's retention of several portfolios, and the duties of which had supposedly resulted in the resignation of Mr. Bennett's health, directing sharp criticism at the "political machinations" of Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and scoffing at the "Cant and hypocrisy too characteristic of the present administration," Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, delivered an address here to the Montreal Reform Club.

Mr. King had some caustic comment to make upon the counsel of the Canadian Bankers' Association to the province and municipalities whereby that organization had warned them to cut their expenditures and revenues. Why, he asked was the same advice not given to the Dominion administration? There was where it was needed most. Why had not the Bankers Association entitled to the Prime Minister that the time had come in Canada to have a minister of finance.

Bennett Away

Mr. Bennett was in England, Sir Robert Borden, Minister of Labor was ill, presumably from overwork in having to assume the tremendous responsibilities which the present situation imposed on him; and Hon. H. H. Rykeman, Minister of National Revenue, had been the Spitfireless Health. Why, asked Mr. King, did not the Bankers Association say that Canada expected the Government of this country to be conducted by men holding offices for which position was made in the statute? Why were they represented as advisedly criticizing the new "National service loan." Why, he said, Actually, the contrary was the case. The people of this country would be happy success, and strongly advised the banks to support their money in it.

Unveiling a heavy barrage against the telegram which Mr. Ferguson sent to Premier Baldwin and R. Henry of Ontario following the recent British elections, the Liberal leader declared that Canada could have only one meaning: that Canada's representative in Great Britain regarded himself as the representative of one of the political parties in the United Kingdom at the moments the party under the name of the National Government and 70 per cent. of which was known to be Conservative.

"When we Britishers have a job to do, we do it," Mr. Ferguson declared Mr. Henry.

"What it is recalled that the premier of Ontario, the successor of the great British Prime Minister in Great Britain, it further means that the High Commissioner in London, the Conservative parties of the two countries are allied, and that they alone are entitled to a monopoly of the term 'British' and to be the essence of 'Toryism.' Mr. King said, "that is not the basis on which the British Empire is founded or can be maintained."

It is overlooked that untruthful statements are the worst form of confidence at home or abroad. — Dr. Hjalmar Schacht.

TRENTON NEWS

RUSH WORK ON NEW BARRACKS

Three Storey Structure Rising at Air Base in Sidney

Trenton, Nov. 23 (Special)—The roads out on R.R. No. 1 must be boulevards at least to Mr. John Jamieson, who on driving into town Saturday morning crashed his Ford coupe into the car of Mr. Clarence Pelster R.R. No. 2 of Brighton, taking the side off as he went along. Officer Huffman was on the scene of the accident and acted as arbitrator and the affair was settled, to the satisfaction of both parties.

The new barracks at the Trenton airport are going ahead fast. The steel work is completed, being erected by the Dinnen Steel Construction Co., of Toronto. The walls will soon be in place, bright blocks taking the place of the ordinary brick. The building will be three stories, with four wings. An attractive feature is that they will all be outside rooms.

Fire on Wooler Road

A fire on Saturday night at the farm of Mr. Ed. Akin on the Wooler Road almost five miles from Trenton, completely destroyed a large frame house. Mr. Earl Roberts was renting the farm from Mr. Akin. The origin of the fire is unknown as there was nobody home at the time the fire started. A large quantity of hay is thought to have perished in the flames.

Mr. Frank Hilton visited his parents over the week end. Mr. Hilton is attending Pharmacy school in Toronto.

Mr. Art Begin of Tweed, visited his parents over the week end. Mr. Begin a teller in the Bank of Montreal was recently transferred to Tweed.

Entertains at Bridge

Mrs. J. Reynolds of King street entertained the bridge club at her home on Saturday evening. Mrs. William Nolan winning the prize. A delightful lunch was served.

Mr. Clark Nelson of Toronto visited his parents over the week end. Mr. Nelson is going to Pharmacy College in Toronto.

Mr. Ray Heaney of Toronto paid a visit to the home of his parents over the week end.

Napanee High School basketball teams visited Trenton on Friday night. The Napanee senior team due to the outstanding playing of Fannie Waddell who scored most of the points beat the Trenton girls quite handily. The final score being 40 to 18 for Napanee. The Trenton Juniors came through in a big way winning by the score of 28 to 19. Miss Bertram did some very fine work in the game as some on the rest of you juniors.

A lunch was served in the hall after the game, then dancing until eleven. Miss Edna Ash and Miss K. Heywood furnished the music.

CALLS OFF TRIP

Dublin, Nov. 23 (AP) — Mahatma Gandhi today cancelled his proposed visit to Ireland.

"The unexpected prolongation of the Round Table Conference," he telegraphed from London today, "makes it impossible for me to speak in London until Thursday, after the time I must return at once to India."

SQUIRREL AND THE HUNTER

Citizens of our neighboring city of Kingston are in the throes of discussion and debate that has almost by now reached the stage of disputatious argument, and which seems likely to last for the whole coming winter season. For the benefit of those who are interested in these sort of things we will give the low down.

The scene is a tree; the performers a squirrel and a hunter. The squirrel keeps the trunk of the tree between itself and the hunter who pursues the little animal around and around the tree. But the question is:

Does the hunter go around the squirrel?

"Yes!" say other hundreds who have also devoted deep study to the subject.

And so the battle rages. However it seems to us that after all it is just the old old question of does the hen or the egg come first. Personally when we can get that satisfactorily answered first then we can settle this squirrel question with a little more experience on the subject.

And in the meantime Kingstonians delve deeply into the riddle while the midnight oil flickers and wane and casts reflections on worried brows as things daily get more exciting.

U. S. HORSEMEN IN AWARDS

Capt. Bradford Wins Military Handy Course Royal

TORONTO Ont., Nov. 23.—(By the Canadian Press)—The visiting United States army officers continued their winning performances at the Royal Winter Fair, horse show Saturday night saw the Americans carry off first place in the military hand course. When Captain W. R. Bradford, U.S.A. on Joe Aleshire a tall sized black, made the only clean performance in the course to clear all the jump off, and took first place.

Captain Nghill of the French army team, on Tonkin, was awarded second place, with a clean performance the first time around and only fault when the obstacles were raised for the jump off. In third place with six faults on the jump off but a clean record for the first round, was Capt. F. A. Abram, of the British Pre-War State team, riding Blarney Castle.

CAROL AFRAID TO TAKE STEP

Rumanians Check King's Intention Towards Brother

Vienna, Nov. 23—Pressure from his cabinet and an official warning that stern measures would not be popular with the Rumania people have forced King Carol to give up his intent to force an annulment of the marriage of his brother, Prince Nikolas, and Mme. Jana Lucia Dezleli, according to dispatches from Bucharest received here.

The cabinet opposition, the despatches said, was led by Premier Nicolas Jorga, noted Rumanian savant and educator and once Carol's tutor. Premier Jorga was joined by Constantine Argetoianu, one of the King's favorite ministers, in insisting that the honeymooners be not separated although they eloped and were married without Carol's consent.

Carol, it was said, will merely order that they refrain from appearing together in public. He listened and fumed, the report said when the ministers took action against him, but finally accepted their counsel.

They warned him that any attempt to coerce Prince Nikolas, who played a considerable part in bringing about his resignation would create a bad impression on the Rumanian people.

Unemployment Relief Fund

The Relief Fund continues to grow, but is still some distance from the objective. The committee will appreciate prompt response to the cards sent out last week, with when stamped return envelopes were enclosed. Please return the card in the addressed envelope with subscription, and if, for any reason, you are unable to contribute, return the blank card so that your name can be taken from the list.

Direct cash contributions up to Monday morning totalled $1728.25, while group subscriptions totalled $2,799.75, a grand total of $4527.86.

Remember the objective is $10,000, which should be an easy mark for prosperous Belleville, particularly when everybody is asked to take a share, small or large.

Blade of Knife in Brain for Over Thirty Years

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 23—For 30 soon went to the hospital for treatment. He told Dr. George Scurlock, ram of the hospital staff that for many years he had suffered from occasional fits of unconsciousness which came without warning. Once he fell from the seat of his tractor. On another occasion he fell into a bonfire. Then there was the time when he became unconscious just as he had turned on a gas jet and before he could apply a match. He narrowly escaped asphyxiation.

The Charm of LEATHERS

SPUDS BOUGHT BY FARMERS

Potatoes Are Unusually Healthy During Present Autumn

"Potatoes this year are healthier and contain less scab and black rot in this district than formerly, but nearly all grown in and about Kingston are inflicted with rot in varying degrees and are not so clean generally and as we have up here," stated Mr. C. D. Stevenson, fruit and vegetable inspector for Belleville district and employed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, as he closely examined several sacks of them contained in a truck on Front Street today.

Also was learned the surprising fact that rural residents in this community do not grow enough potatoes for their own use. This is explained by the general unsuitability of the ground owing to its heaviness. Very many of the farmers usually buy their supplies from other producers who depend on the potato as their chief crop, while they run their gardening mostly to tomatoes All potatoes for sale must now be graded according to new instructions received by this inspector and the name and address of the sender must also be marked on a slip on the bag.

CAR UPSETS YOUTH KILLED

Wilfrid Smith, Napanee, In Peculiar Accident

KINGSTON, Nov. 23. — Wilfrid Smith, aged 20, son of Frank Smith, Napanee, died sunday afternoon in an auto accident at Storm's Corners, eleven miles east of Napanee when a roadster in which he was riding with Gordon Asselstine, also Kingston, overturned in a side road—way.

Asselstine was injured, but not seriously.

The car belonged to Asselstine and the two were on their way from Napanee to Bath. The provincial police at Napanee are investigating and Dr. Gallbraith, coroner of Napanee, will hold an inquest.

As far as can be learned, there were no witnesses. The car was making a bend in the road when it turned over. Smith suffered terrible injuries and lived only a few minutes.

Smith is survived by his father.

FAIR-SIZER VOTE IS BEING REGISTERED

The electors of Thurlow are voting today on the Gas Franchise By-law and from reports received early Monday afternoon a fairly large vote is being polled. It is thought that the bylaw will carry by a large majority as very little opposition has been shown to the granting of the franchise to the Ontario Shore Gas Co, Ltd.

111 YEARS OLD FRIEND OF SCOTT'S

Ballymacaneleon, County Louth, Ireland, Nov. 23 (CP cable) —Hon. Katherine Plunket, daughter of the second Baron Plunket, yesterday celebrated her 111th birthday by entertaining relatives at her home, after being greeted by villagers who came to wish her "many happy returns of the day."

Hon. Katherine Plunket, who has known Sir Walter Scott, the novelist, who used to visit her father.

POUND TAKES SHARP DROP

New York, N.Y., Nov. 23 (CP) — A sharp drop in the pound sterling market early today on local and foreign exchanges. The pound opened at $3.66 in United States funds a loss of 6¼ cents compared to Saturday's close of $3.72¾.

The Canadian dollar sagged in sympathy with sterling. It was bid at 87⅞ cents, a decline of 3-8 of one per cent. compared to Saturday's close.

FLYING CLUB MOVES SLOWLY

Plans formulated by Carl Read for the organization of a flying club for Belleville are maturing very slowly. A few of the boys have guaranteed him their support and money but the majority are either indifferent or lack sufficient funds to carry out their ideas of becoming full fledged pilots If more members are not soon forthcoming the plan of owning their own plane will be abandoned by Mr. Read and instructions will be held at the Leavens brothers airport with the use of one of their machines. It was hoped that if one plane could be secured that the fifty-fifty aid which the government would forward to the club, providing they already had one machine, the members could add to their equipment as the club grew. It seems now though that the plan will at least temporarily have to be abandoned.

The radio broadcasting station which was to have been erected here is also held in check by the government owing to the fact that allocation of wave length, hours and call letters can only be given on the presence of permit, wave length, etc., now held by an inactive station in Kingston. This the station has so far persistently refused to do and the matter has been in litigation for some three years. Mr. Read intends to keep on trying for this and so far refuses to give up hope. If operations are commenced on that station it is expected that local talent will fill the various program of music and such, although it will be primarily intended for the broadcasting of local news events.

Mrs. R. Gibson 83 Years Old

Mrs. Robert Gibson, 94 Hillcrest avenue, yesterday received the congratulations and good wishes of her many friends on the occasion of her eighty-third birthday. A resident of Belleville for over fifty years, Mrs. Gibson is well known and highly respected in the community. She was born on the second concession of Ameliasburg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Roblin Weese. After her marriage to Mr. Gibson she lived for some time in Thomasburg after which residing in Belleville.

An active member of St. John's Church and later Christ Church, Mrs. Gibson was in previous years an ardent worker in church affairs. Her husband passed away ten years ago and her only son, Sergt. Major Charles Gibson, a veteran of the South African and the World War died shortly after returning from France.

Mrs. Gibson is enjoying splendid health and takes complete charge of her household management. Mr. and Mrs. James Jarvis of Ottawa, spent the week-end with her to be present for her birthday celebration.

PROPHECY

Those who have been camping this year have had the most delightful season perhaps on record, a season which except for an abnormally warm autumn has had all the characteristics which man himself were he selecting the weather would order. During the present year it might have been possible to camp from sometime in April until the present time with the end of the camp not yet in sight, though surely a change must be brewing. Still the warm days go on and the let-up has yet to come.

Most attention has been paid to flowers and fruit, the appearance of trees and bushes bearing fruit though the leaves have been off the bushes for a month or more. Still nature is exerting herself in an unusual manner in an unusual season. An unusual however has been paid to the roses which are intimately associated with the month of June, though some it is well known, bloom largely throughout the summer and autumn.

The guessing goes on. How long will it last? One weather prophet has ahead of him about four weeks of mild weather that is, he thinks that the rigid winter weather may not set in until the winter solstice, which is about the twenty-first of December. Every particular indication might seem to point this way but there is the general history of winters which gives his prophecy a good many chances to fail.

SHEEP WORRYING

Farmers, especially those who raise sheep, must be possessed of infinite patience, not the firstlings of their flocks ruthlessly torn by the savage fangs of dogs.

The huge sheep bill presented to Thurlow council recently for one month's slaughter by running dogs was enough to set people thinking a bit about sheep, but think much of dogs, thinking very seriously. Farmers who have had sheep worried by dogs have long since done their thinking on this problem which seems never to lighten.

PARENTS' LOVE

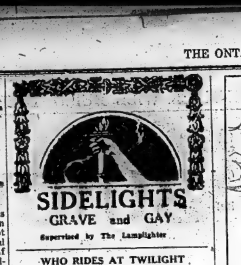
Newspapers have carried stories during the past few days of dire calamities which have almost sickened men and women at heart but for one thing—the fact that through the tragedy and suffering there has shone the glory of human self-exercise, especially that of parents for their young. The other day a father who had been in falling health launched into a river in which little ones who had tumbled in—both were lost. On Saturday a Toronto mother saved two of her children from a flaming tenement and lost her life trying to rescue another.

That is love—the supreme expression of love. This love would die rather than fail to make even the last and greatest sacrifice for the sake of the helpless.



These stories of valour and love are not restricted to one class or one walk of life. They appear in the history of all classes though there may be particular tests to certain spheres of activity calling for more occasions of sacrifice.

Whatever crime there is in the world, even if Landru gun splits death or unholy offences are committed enough almost to shake the faith of mankind in fellows, the outstanding fact is not crime but love and readiness to sacrifice. That is the truth which exists and which penetrates beyond the fog of crime. Without this high ideal, this touch with the Divine, there could be no continuance of human life.

One of the most graphic stories ever told was published throughout the continent, dealing with the heroism of some fellow workmen who threw their bodies between a man who was caught in a wrecked engine from which steam was escaping and the pipe whence the scalding steam was pouring. They saved their friend and did fortunately not suffer as much as might have been expected. But they took a risk of death or a living death.

These and similar incidents show why the nation honour the soldiers and sailors who have given their lives for their kindred and their countrymen. The soldier who falls in battle does not fall because he has a private feud with his enemy—both are the victims of an unrighteous system which the world is trying to get rid of—the soldier dies from a sense of duty for self-sacrifice. He gets out of war would not lead him to go through the turmoil, pain and tragedy of war unless he were carried onward by an ideal. These defenders of their country's honor are not soldiers of fortune. They go vicariously to serve and if needs be, die. It is the knowledge of this motive which impels the nations to honor their heroic fallen.

In such sacrifices men and women, frail though they be, triumph over circumstance and the untoward forces in life.

WHO RIDES AT TWILIGHT

BY Aline Michaelis

He who rides in the morning
Drinks the wine of a carefree mirth,
But he who rides at twilight
Learns the secrets of the earth.

He sees the shadows deepen,
As the whip-poor-will's notes ascend,
And the rising moon's white face
Looks down like a trusted friend.

He hears the sweet night voices
From the hedgerow and the field,
And the music of humblest life there
To his ears is at dusk revealed.

He who rides through the twilight
Feels the pace of the wind that sings
Of the ways whence it has wandered
And earth's lovely and simple things.

And the wind's soft hands upon him
Are laid with a swift caress,
For he who rides at twilight
Learns the secrets of happiness.

THE DREAMER'S JOB

Can we build a better world out of the stuff of dreams?

In "John Matlefteze" (Doubleday, Doran) Christopher Morley writes that "it is not the dreamer's job to heckle society for its cruel and secular follies, nor suggest remedies for civilized misery."

"But it is," replies J. Brokos Atkinson, dramatic critic of the New York Times:

"That is precisely his (the dreamer's) job; he has no other. Civilization being always threatened by those who have no capacity for dreaming and who want to make it safe for stupidity, it behooves those who know better to take charge seriously.

"We dreamers and artists must bear the brunt of the conflict; no one else will. When a question of principle is at stake, it behooves the critic to assume all the prerogatives of the artist, throw his opinion down every throat, and cast his lot in with a wiser world."

"Well," commends The Reformed Church Messenger, taking up the cue, "the preacher is a combination of dreamer, artist, critic, and prophet. He is the ambassador of the Most High God, and of all men he must not truckle or trim, or in any sense weaken and pervert the divine message."

"But the willingness to call sin by its right name and to summon sinners in the pews to repentance must not be spoiled by the disposition to negative and controversial preaching or personal attacks from the pulpit, which are all too common.

"Nor is it necessary to enter into gruesome details with regard to certain questionable acts or places. We read the other day of a preacher who described a certain peakonry in such length and with such eloquence that some men in the audience who had never heard of the place were moved by curiosity to visit it. This may or may not be true, but it suggests some dangerous possibilities. There is a public sensationalism not far removed in its ethical quality from the pernicious tabloid newspaper."

UNITED HOTELS, of which the King Edward at Toronto is one, reduced rates some time ago, without any apparent increase in business. Then they got busy and advertised in the newspapers. The response was quite gratifying and the management has expressed great satisfaction with the investment in newspaper space. So they have gone on using newspaper space intelligently and consistently. The business intellect which seeks to economize by cutting down advertising is placing his business on a starvation diet. Advertising is just as necessary as the dew and the rain to bring good crops. Lack of moisture makes for poor crops, lack of advertising makes for poor business.

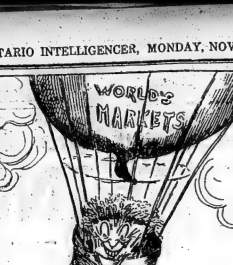
MODERN ETIQUETTE



By Roberta Lee

Q. Is it necessary to make a call if one has been present at an afternoon tea or reception?

A. No, it is not necessary if the affair has not been formal.

Q. Why should one be careful not to quote the sayings of a child in his absence?

A. Because by doing so the child becomes self-conscious, as well as impertinent.

AMTORG'S DECLINE

One sure sign of the decline in Russia's foreign trade is seen in what is happening to "Amtorg," the world agency in the United States. It is announced that the staff on that purchasing organization is to be reduced by more than half. The Economic Review, the organ of the Amtorg, connected to the stimulation of trade between the two countries, in regretfully announces the withdrawal of the Russian government, attributes it to the fact that the government banking facilities have not been provided by the United States, and it is charged that a deliberate campaign has been staged against export trade with Uncle Sam ever since the days of most exactly with the reduction now made in Amtorg's staff — nearly one half. The American government has said that it is not actuated by any hostility against the soviets, recommending only a policy of caution in its dealings. Probably no official warning was needed, for ordinary prudence suggests that of course. Lack of confidence has undoubtedly played its part, for it is to be supposed, at a time when foreign orders are being so eagerly sought, the business interests of the United States would put up an opposition without sufficient reason.—Hamilton Spectator.

A STUPID FRAUD

The Chain Letter is with us again. Nobody seems to know why it is that these foolish things, or what profit anybody can conceivably derive from them. But they appear with monotonous regularity every year, and always in the same form. Of late they have become more of a menace since their letter, and the names of many very important men have been included in the list of those supposed to have entered the chain. Last year the Post Office Department thought the indignant denials issued by several statesmen and others would end it, but it is a pity that there is no method of detecting there letters in the mails through the agency of the postal authorities, but since it is impossible to detect them there is only one way to do is to ignore them absolutely and to treat the whole thing of inanition. Unfortunately, many credulous persons are at all times worrying about the bad luck which they were threatened if they do not continue the chain. Only bad luck they can possibly experience is the result of doing so if the realization that somebody has been trying to make a fool of them. —Montreal Star.

MARGIN BUYERS, BEWARE!

Did the public learn its lesson from the speculative orgy of 1929? It is not just hanging around waiting its chance to get some more easy money.

When wheat made a spectacular rise a few days ago it was not brought up in sympathy there was a noticeable increase in the traffic on the roads that lead to the brokers' offices. There were indications indeed that the old say, "Once a sucker always a sucker" is as true as ever in terms of yore.

But those who know "the street" will tell you that that is the time to buy on margin. True, there are good stocks that are going begging at bargain prices. But they must be bought as an investment, not as a speculation. They will go up in price as the times improve. But the market will have many an up and down before top or even normal prices are reached. Also the "big fellows" will shake out the margin holders many a time as the opportunities offer.

The investment thing to hold is easy money. And the money that lasts longest and is the most needed is the money required by a hard day's work.—Toronto Telegram.

Letters to The Editor

Belleville, Nov. 20

The Editor Ontario Intelligencer, Dear Sir:

Re Sidney and Prangpool, 1858. With regard to the signature of the Attorney General to the venerable parchment, of which you published a copy, establishing the first Agricultural Fair in the first year of Queen Victoria's Reign, the name should be Hagerman, (not Hagerman as erroneously given in the copy handed you.) It is a matter of pride that to those early days the District provided two Attorney Generals for Upper Canada. It might be a matter of interest to your readers who may have followed the old fashioned language of the proclamation, to know that the word "plenar" closed twice therein, is derived from an old Latin word "plere" meaning completion or both. The preference to the Law of Pie Poudre is rather puzzling but shows the practical derivation from the very soil itself of many of our old Law terms. This is interpreted by the Laws of Dickens and peddlers and the word means "dusty foot" taken from the condition of the foot of the apothetic peddler who sold goods from house to house in those days. Nothing to do with shore but of interest to your readers, may be the fact that Dalton, the early scientist who recently civil, spent some time in Belleville in his early years as in the early days of lithography at the keys with the late George Dean Dickinson, K.C., who frequently corresponded with him on his lifetime. This fact I have from the late Mr. Dickson himself, who watched with pride the growing fame and scientific achievements of his former colleague as an operator.

Yours truly,
Sgd. W. N. Pentan

Poet's Corner

IN DEFENCE OF AUTUMN

Who would cry out against this radiance
Of silk and leaf and moonlight?
Who would cry
Lamenting that the Summer is gone by?
Is there no vigour here to recompense
The intolerable long intense
Consuming fervour that we called Summer?
While the mimx stayed we did but sweat and sigh,
And now of Summer that she is gone hence.

Bewailing each spent season as it goes,
Is poet's nonsense, friend, and hangs beside
Only a dullard can regret the rose,
Only a blind man in his blindness hide
When every roadway flames in gold and red
And down the wind the white hosts cry:
"We come!"

ANCIENT CITY IN PALESTINE

Archaeologists Excavate Near Site of Gaza

Manchester, England (CP) —Digging a lantern held here on the excavation of a newly-discovered city in South Palestine by her husband, Sir Flinders Petrie, Lady Petrie told reporters: "Tell-el-Ajjul, the city which Sir Flinders was excavating, as perhaps the original site of the town of Gaza. The site covers 33 acres and is a vast amount of work remains to be done. Sir William Matthew Flinders Petrie is Edwards Professor of Egyptology, University College, London.

Sir Flinder Petrie said the wilderness of South Palestine was now giving up its history in the last few years, in response to active digging for six months of the year by 40 trained workmen under the superintendence of Sir Flinders Petrie and herself as a chosen student.

Explaining a number of lantern slides, Lady Petrie said that the ancient city, which was probably a Philistine city B.C., perished from lack of water. For some weeks last year from approaching the 100 feet owing to malaria, but they had since dug a canal which had drained the stagnant pools where the mosquitoes bred, and it was now, after 4,000 years, free from malaria.

Sir Flinders Petrie and Lady Petrie continued, it was like walking through history. Beneath the grass roots, the houses were of hard mudbrick, stood from 10 to 20 feet high, and it was possible to walk through the rooms, finding the old doorways. Curious shrines, whitewashed inside, were also unearthed past a fool-basin carefully set with bowls. In the main city the finds were by some of the larger houses. Several of these had large bathrooms. Running from the main gate of the city had been found a paved road, and this road had been intended either as a way of approach for chariots or as a defence or else as an ambush. It petered out in the middle of nothingness in the Copper Age.

MISSING RELATIVES FOUND FOR SAILORS

Montreal, Que. (CP) — Hundreds of parents and relatives of sailors in Canada and Great Britain have reason to be grateful to Miss Bates of the Montreal Sailors' Institute for her work in tracing missing marriages.

Statistics just issued by the Institute show that 1,000 men have been found so far this season of navigation, and in the case of these more than 127 were traced.

Miss Bates would have been gifted with a special genius for locating missing persons, and there was a good example of her intuition recently. A young sailors visited the Institute and asked if he wanted to find his aunt who had married a Montreal gentleman named Nick. All the information the young man could give was that she lived in Montreal twenty years ago and that her name was what was the first name of his aunt's husband or what employment he followed.

A glance at the names listed under Montreal in the telephone directory would serve to prove the difficulty of the task set for Miss Bates. However, she called a number and by good fortune it proved to be the family sought.

The result of this discovery was contained in a letter written to J. Lyon Bell, manager of the Institute, from an officer of the mail liners to Seaman in Vancouver, in which he was asked to convey to Mr. Bell the thanks of the sailor who had left Montreal for the west without having a chance to acknowledge his services.

A typical request received by the Institute is one being handled. It is from an Aberdeen mother in search of news of her sailor son, Alec Copeland. He has not been seen in the Institute building since last May and three letters in the Institute mail bag bearing the Aberdeen postmarks are evidently from his parent. By conversation with sailors and other means, Miss Bates hopes to be able to discover Copeland and to relieve his mother of her anxiety.

Twofold Service

$86,000,000 of new insurance has been written by the London Life in Canada this year to date. This is having a pronounced beneficial effect, which is twofold:

(1) It has extended by $86,000,000 of Life Insurance the financial security back of the homes and businesses of a vast army of Canadian policyholders.

(2) It has forced into circulation a large volume of new money. Since premiums collected for insurance must earn interest, the London Life has placed large sums in new mortgage loans and, in government and municipal bonds. These investments have a stabilizing effect on general conditions.

An investment in life insurance with the London Life—a purely Canadian Company confining its activities and investments entirely to the Dominion—helps you directly to establish future financial security for yourself or family, and assists also in the development of Canada.

Countervailing Duties To Meet British Measure

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—(AP)—The United States moved today to levy countervailing duties to meet the new British anti-dumping measure but officials quickly found few if any articles would be eligible for higher rates.

Treasury and Commerce department executives studied the British Ad Valorem measure of 50 per cent which takes effect Wednesday, to determine whether the countervailing clauses of the United States tariff could be used.

Under these countervailing paragraphs, little country's government is permitted to raise rates on a small number of articles to a figure equal to that of foreign countries on similar United States exhort.

The study has disclosed preliminary provisions affect only automobiles, trucks, and bicycles, except tires, coal coke paper board wallboard and sheet asphalt including asphalt board and leatherboard and gunpowder. None of these items has been noticed in the British schedules thus far published, so might be found that the countervailing clauses cannot be invoked.

CANADIANS NAIVE, THINK RUSS SOVIETS

Canadian-Born British M. P. Outlines View

REDS TO STAY

MONTREAL (By The Canadian Press)—In the Russian estimation Canada is the most naive of countries. In time of prosperity she goes ahead at full blast without thought for the future. When the greatest wheat exporting country in the world was removed temporarily from the market and Canada stepped in to take that position, she did so without the slightest halt to consider that the conditions were indeed temporary and that at some future date she might be relegated again to a secondary standing. And Russia is convinced that when the time comes she can easily defeat this most naive of countries at the wheat exporting game.

Such insight into the Canadian viewpoint was given in the course of a recent interview here by Laurance Lyon, Canadian-born M. P. for Hastings, England, from 1918 to 1931, and author of "The Pomp of Power", "The Fruits of Folly" and other works of political observation and character. Mr. Lyon spent some eleven months in Russia last year for the purpose of observation of Soviet methods and has gathered much first-hand information on the subject.

"This nivete of Canada is further exemplified," he said, "in the fact that only the West is turning to mixed farming, when turning to mixed farming, when it has become obvious that wheat is not what it used to be. If mixed farming is good now, it was also ways good and ought to have been introduced ten years or more ago when the introduction would have been managed much more easily."

Turning to Russia, Mr. Lyon said that there was a great gap between the older generation of communists, those in power, and the younger generation. Those in power now were not born Communists, he said, "they had struggled hard for what they now have and appreciate it all the more for it. They spent their early years in Siberian lodgings in Ekaterinburg or Geneva, talking as only Russians can talk, and considering the time that was to come. They have obtained more from Communism than ever they dreamed. On the other hand the young generation were born Communists and know nothing of the early struggles of the fathers. They see no great, painful splendor left to whom Communism can mean so much as to their parents.

"But Russia will never get rid of Communism before the end of the unthinkable now; if they have no regime it is equally true that they have nothing and mind it not a bit at the same time they do not see any more idle rich riding around in their carriages. The leaders live with their families in small apartments. True, they have motor cars and free theatre tickets but that does not make up for the ordinary amenities of society," Mr. Lyon said.

Questioned as to the spread of Communism to other industrial countries, Mr. Lyon thought that as Russia was at war it would be many years before the whole country was educated and organized on satisfactory lines, and monthly or six monthly plans and that the spread of the system in Europe was not necessarily be slow. On the subject of war he was confident Russia did not wish to fight in Manchuria. Russia has for her hands quite enough at the moment to be diverted by carrying on war, and besides the army is not ready. I believe that there is general reluctance as far as the rank and file of Russian troops and a tendency to underrate them as fighters. It must be remembered that we have gone a long way since the days of the Crimea when the Russian troops had not even boots on their feet, or rifles, and that is how they were forced to fight without sufficient equipment.

"The citizens of Russia are orderly and those of the Soviet Republics call their uniform such cities as "New York and Chicago." The government is a monopoly on hold-ups as on everything else and takes what it wants when it wants it," said Mrs. Lyon.

Laurance Lyon was born in Toronto and is the grandson of the late Hon. Mr. Henry Dorwood, P.C., Chief Justice of Canada. He practised the profession of law until 1906, since then he has resided in London and Paris. He was proprietor of a London hotel from 1916 to 1919 and was Conservative-Unionist member for Hastings. He is the author of numerous books and essays on political subjects and has been frequently confused with the late Lord Beresford as "The Gentleman with a Duster."

'Mummie' Keeps Open House for All Her Little Friends

Woman on Twilight Trail Most Happy With Children

ALL KNOW HER

"Mummie", some of the little boys and girls over on the West side of the city call her, but "Mother" is used quite frequently, too.

Anyhow she's the gray haired, kindly faced woman who is most of the people in that section have seen in the company of a couple of kids who stream to her home from all over the neighborhood.

"Mummie"has the largest cookie jar, the nicest jam and jelly and the sweetest nature of any woman in the world, and if you don't believe that you can ask any of the little boys and girls you see trooping in and out of her house at all hours. Mummie keeps open house for her little visitors all the time—rain or shine. And besides these good things to eat she can tell the nicest stories you ever heard, if you happened to be a little boy or girl.

You see Mummie never had any little children of her own, and now that she is getting along on the sunset trail twilight isn't such a happy unless she has the companionship of the neighborhood and can have their childish prattling voices or watch the little boys tumbling over the floor.

If a finger is cut or a toe stubbed it is Mummie who washes the wound and bandages it up. If a little boy gets into trouble Mummie is a Mummie who mends the tear and cleans the clothes, and there is a scolding awaiting at home. And even if one of the kids is not feeling well, or receives a sprained leg, or the puppy has fleas, it is Mummie to whom they run or drag it protestingly on the end of a rope for it, too, to be washed and bandaged up. Nothing is too trivial or too big for Mummie to overlook and all the boys and girls and cats and dogs on the west side of the city know it.

How flat this old world would be if there were not a few of these gray haired and kindly eyed old ladies in every community ready to get up out of bed even at a moment's notice to go and help some one with some little act of needed charity, or to minister to the little children of that district who do if they didn't have they got in trouble. How they would miss her if she were to die one day and found that their gentle old lady friend was gone and some other one where she would be in the everlasting home and the boys and girls just like the ones she had left in heaven.

But for the present Mummie here is strong for her age, and lively and there is a twinkle in her eye, but still and for all she is motherly enough to take care of those little boys and girls the next time they are in trouble who come first on the list of any of the saints that they can remember.

DEER IN ROAD CAUSES AUTO ACCIDENT

SEA ISLE CITY, N. J., Nov 23—(AP)—A deer standing in the middle of the road almost resulted disastrously for Kalman Katz, assistant city clerk, and Mrs. Woodruff and his wife, Dorothy, when they were both seriously injured after the machine struck the animal and overturned.

They were taken to the Atlantic City Hospital. It was found that Katz's left car was almost severed, and he suffered from a deep gash on the left cheek, a fractured left arm and lacerations of the right arm and jaw.

Mrs. Katz had a deep scalp wound, gashes on the left knee, bruises, and a possible fracture of the left ankle.

CANDLESTICKS ON CAR FENDERS

We have seen greyhounds apparently hunting off into space and shiny little men and women representing various gods and goddesses of speed; and we have seen keeple dolls and just plain motionless men in fine bewildering display of ever increasing intricate and novel displays on car tops and fenders, but the strangest thing we encountered was on the fender of a large car parked on the lower end of Front street Saturday morning.

Screwed securely to either fender was a pair of white metal candle sticks minus the candles. And we are still wondering how come. The guess is as good as ours, but we hazard the opinion that the genius man who owns this car may possibly use candles for parking lights or, as the opinion has advanced, they may just possibly be used as a pair of receptacles for matches used by those fiends who lean against nearly car fenders and use them in place of sand paper to scratch heifers on to light vile smelling pipes.

PILGRIMAGE ON INCREASE

St. Anne de Beaupre Attracts Large Throngs

Quebec, Que. (CP) — An increase of 16,200 in the number of pilgrims made the journey to the Shrine of St Anne de Beaupre in Quebec province in the 1931 season, according to statistics recently compiled by the Redemptorist fathers.

In 1930 the number of pilgrims who made the journey was 521,600, as compared with 537,800 for 1931 season, which has just come to an end. This year's attendance included 14,300 pilgrims made the journey by auto, the number in this category being 2,000 more than was relied by autobus. 108,100 by train and 1000 on foot.

Three solemn masses in the number mass celebrated but an increase in the number of communions was recorded. For in 1930, 14,300 masses were celebrated, and 1931 the number was 17,200 for 1931.

On the other hand there was a decrease in donations given during the course of last year and 273,000 in the season just ended.

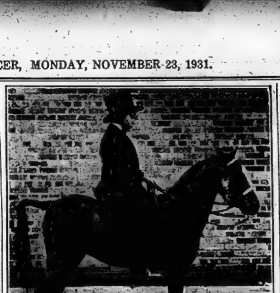
Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding, protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the affected parts. These parts become weak, flabby, almost dead. Only an internal remedy can remove the cause. Ointments, salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, HEM-ROID succeeds because it removes congestion, restores circulation, brain and strengthens the affected parts. HEM-ROID has behind it a record of satisfaction ending even piles of long standing that. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your piles agony or money back.



READING FOR EDUCATION

Many Study To Fit Selves For Higher Posts

Montreal, Que. (CP)—People are spending more and reading to fit themselves better for the jobs they already hold and for those they hope to hold when the depression is gone, according to Milton Pergrin, Brooklin librarian, who was in Montreal recently addressing the McGill University Library School.

Referring to the Brooklyn system of libraries, Mr. Pergrin said: "We believe that reading makes good citizens, and that it is our duty to bring good reading as close as possible to the average citizen. A prominent manufacturer in the United States advertises that people will walk a mile to smoke one of his cigarettes. We find that people will walk a mile to read a book. Hence we try to keep neighborhood libraries not far apart. We find that gives the proper service."

During the past two years Mr. Pergrin said he felt that the Brooklyn public is not only using the library more than ever before, but that especial attention and demands are being made upon that section of it dealing with subjects of economics, business and the finer points of trade.

Contributions to Church Fund Are Subject of Litigation

Was Firm Insolvent at Time of $30,000 Givings?

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 21—Contributions of two men who carried on a retail florist business in Toronto to a local church are the subject of litigation before Mr. Justice Sedgewick in bankruptcy court in Osgoode Hall. The men are Edmund and Milton Slichter, of J. Slichter and Sons who were adjudged bankrupt in November 1930. The contributions were made to the Christian Unity Mission.

O. T. Clarkson, trustee of the Slichter estate, is plaintiff in the action, and the Christian Unity Mission and Rev. James Gregory Butland, is minister, are defendants. The contributions are compared by Mr. Clarkson at $30,000 over the eight year period ended 1930.

The plaintiff alleges the Slichters made their donations to the Mission at a time when they were insolvent and those donations "constituted a fraud" on the creditors of the firm of J. Slichter and Sons. The defendants assert the Slichters did not contribute the sum mentioned, but that they were regular contributors to church funds.

ROMANS USED MODERN FOOD

Ancient Roman Dishes Much Like Those of Today

NEW YORK, N. Y.—If you were in ancient Rome, and if you did as the Romans did, come dinner time you would eat a dozen of all things!—chicken fricasee, vegetables, fruit and delicious pastries.

The general belief that the Romans lived on nightingales' tongues, peacock tongues and such table niffties is, according to Miss Alice Lodge, collector ofancientcookbooks, a lot of applesauce.

Apicius, Roman cook, is now food editor of the Hotel Bulletin. His cookbook, the oldest of any of which is on exhibit at the National Book Exhibition, is valued at $35,000. It consists of over 5,500 items, many illuminated books, rare copper engravings, wood cuts and gilded menus of royal banquets.

His earliest manuscript, "The Art of Cookery," was published under master cook to the patriarch of Aquileia about the fifth century of Rome, was written 1b, 1450 in hand by scribes, and illuminated during of pressed ad on Gesta.

In the index of menus and cook book of Louis the Fourteenth at Versailles, 1748. It consists of 2,000 recipes and the names of the kings guests, the menus served for each banquet described therein; also the names of cooks who prepared the feasts and the sums paid them.

The world's oldest cook book he has too. It bears the name Apicius and was written about 1900 years ago, but Nothing as to its origin can be easily traced to Greece and to the ancient Romans.

Sand shoes of wire mesh, which operate on the principle of snowshoes, are used by soldiers in Syria in marching over deserts.

TAKE DELIGHT IN DOLPHINS

Voyagers See First Play About Ships as of Olden Times

In the days of the Phoenician mariners prayed Phoebus Apollo to send them fair and steady winds in that their wooden ships might sail "cheerily on" across the Mediterranean Sea, perhaps to Africa shores, or even beyond the Pillars of Hercules to the open seas Atlantis where both adventurers reached the Canary Islands and Madeira, seeking tin from the mines of Cornwall, says Glenn Dunn, in an article in the October bulletin of the Boston Society of Natural History. Here in the calm of the day's traveler could discern at times what causes a scurrying of feet on any ocean liner in this modern age —dolphins, or porpoises, perhaps in those far-off times the larger mammal, the dolphin was more plentiful, and was regarded by mariners as an omen of good luck, a safe voyage and a fair wind.

Frequently, the ships of these ancient days of the sea were accompanied for short distances by schools of dolphins that seem to delight in playing about the bows, coming to the surface and then again leaping or leaping bodily from the water in merry sport. Today, we see schools of porpoises as we look on a sea voyage, but they, unlike their brethren the dolphin, are not quite so energetic, and move at a much slower pace. The first play ever brought up to this state by the Phoenicians, it is probable, except that they keep a safe distance from the propellers.

Along our Eastern coast there are two species of dolphin that are commonly seen from ocean going shipboard. One, the bottlenosed species, is a dark colored fish attaching its claw white below, as does this in life and reaches a length of ten feet or more. It is a migratory species, appearing off the Florida coasts and the Carribbean Sea, and in Spring passes northward along the Carolina coast so regularly that fishery for them has been maintained at intervals for some two hundred years.

The other, the New England shores in May and are known from Cape Cod to the Southern Greenland and the British Isles. Voyagers to the West Indies are often entertained by the leaping of this school rising and diving together near the steamer accompanying it for minutes at a time. Standing in the bow, one may look directly down upon their backs, as with leaping bodies and broad flukes they seemingly without effort, at intervals surging to the surface for a breath. Then, as quickly as it came, sometimes merely breaking water again leaping clear, but never losing their place by the foaming "protection" of the ship.

ONTARIO IS WHEAT CHAMP

For First Time Wins Crown at Royal Fair

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—For the first time in the history of the show at the Royal Winter Fair, the championship trophy for the best half bushel of wheat shown in a regular class was awarded an Ontario exhibit in a sample of Garlo-grown Junior No. 6 variety, white Winter wheat, grown and exhibited by Dona las Hart, Woodstock.

The championship was won on the near perfect scoring of the sample of Winter wheat, which for its merits as a soft wheat, of the highest standard of quality and excellence as a wheat for the production of pastry flour. The judges pointed out that while the soft white Winter wheats are not usually the championship was the highest scoring of any sample in the show, it was difficult to compare the wheat commercial value with hard red Winter wheat. This sample is considered mainly for its milling properties, for producing bread flour.

PANTS VANISH WHILE IN TUB

Alderman's Trousers Are Taken Through Window

Montreal, Que. (CP) — The promayor of Montreal lost his trousers in a short time ago.

When Alderman Gaston Demers left his home after a long and busy meeting of the legislation committee, he was thoroughly tired, hot and tired. Undressing in his bedroom, which faces on the street, he stepped to the bathroom and relaxed his tired nerves in a delightfully hot tub.

Returning to the bedroom, his first impression was that he had found a quarter. The coin lay glittering on the bedroom carpet. As he picked up the money, however, he observed that his pants were missing. The quarter had fallen out as the thief was pulling the garment through the open window.

D. A. R. LEADER DIES AS CAR CATCHES FIRE

Mrs. J. Ridley Trapped in Car That Skidded Off Road

OTHERS RESCUED

SOMMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 23—Mrs. Jane W. G. Ridley, 68 year old, of 40 Ridgewood Road, Maplewood, N.J., New Jersey State chairman of the National Trails Committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was burned to death when the automobile in which she was riding skidded from the White Hoge-Flemington Road eight miles west of Somerville, crashed through a concrete wall, turned over and was consumed in flames. Her husband, who was driving the car, and two women and a N. of others were injured.

The four were driving to Philadelphia to attend the Eastern Regional Conference of the D. A. R. Mrs. Ridley had left her home with his wife, Mrs. Raymond Goodfellow, 42, of 115 South Kingsland Road, South Orange, N. J., chairman of the Junior Girls' Branch of Daughters Committee of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Mary Brooks, of Madison, 40, of Woodland Road, Ridgewood, N. J., State recording secretary of the organization, as passengers.

When the car left the road it crashed through a concrete wall, turned over against another and burst into flames. Following in another car were Mrs. Peter Suyker, of Madison, N. J., sister of Mrs. Ridley; Mrs. Lincoln Pierson and Mrs. Mary Brooks, also of Madison, and Mrs. Frances Hewitt of Roselle Park, N. J. They too, all members of the D. A. R., were going to the conference. The four women ran to the wrecked automobile and extricated Mr. Ridley, Mrs. McCarthy and Mrs. Goodfellow.

They were unable to reach Mrs. Ridley. Her husband braved the flames but was forced back with burns of the face, neck and hands. Mrs. McCarthy had suffered shock and bruises; Mrs. Goodfellow cuts and bruises of the head, bruises over shock. All were taken to Somerset Hospital. Mr. Ridley and Mrs. McCarthy left soon after treatment, but Mrs. Goodfellow remained for observation.

Coroner John A. Bonnaw of Labann, said Mrs. Ridley probably died of asphyxiation before the crash. Mr. Ridley will be arranged later in a charge of manslaughter,

ODD COINS IN TAG DAY BOX

Montreal Taggers' Boxes are Receptacles of Many Oddities

MONTREAL—(By The Canadian Press)—Tag day boxes became a haven for all sorts of coins as shown by an assortment gathered on Poppy Day in Montreal this year.

In addition to the total collected—$37,000 tag day collection of the Great Montreal Poppy Day Relief Fund were made bets to the following:

One Dutch West Indies coin of doubtful value.

An 1854 shilling—sadly mutilated, two silvered cents.

Two sixpences.

Two Canadian cents.

A lead half dollar, partly cut out.

A large slug in his religious medallions of varying sizes.

17 LIVES ENDANGERED

Woodstock, Nov. 21—(CP) — Lives of twelve passengers were endangered when a Buffalo-Detroit bus caught fire as it entered the city here. The blaze started beneath the engine hood and spread until the under-carriage was burning. Firemen extinguished it after a battle.

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

"I never smoke either," Jonathan said. He was sitting down now, so close to where Priscilla knelt on the rug that by putting out his hand he could have touched her.

It was also why he talked, keeping the ball of conversation rolling between the two almost silent men, till presently her father turned up at the clock on the shelf and said: "If you will excuse me, I have to be up early, by doctor's orders, but if you will stay a little while and talk to my daughter, Hugh will be in directly."

And presently he had left them, and Priscilla was sitting in the big chair opposite, her slender feet stretched out to the fire, her face in a shadow.

"It was kind of you to come," she said suddenly.

"Kind?"

"Yes." She leaned forward now, her hands clasped round her knees the firelight warm on her face. "Somehow I thought you would not. We haven't been very neighborly, Mr. Corbie, have we?"

Jonathan's mouth twisted into a little smile as he noticed Priscilla's words with faint irony.

"You mean you haven't called?"

She laughed rather nervously. "Yes, I suppose I do mean that. It seems silly — I don't know why." She fell silent for a moment, then went on with an effort: "It just shows how one can miss all sorts of good friends in a little village. I've had trouble."

Jonathan's big hand moved nervously on the chair arm.

"Friends?" he asked.

"Yes. Aren't we going to be friends?"

It was so difficult; such uphill work. With another man it would have been easy, Priscilla told herself, but just because, this man was not like other men, every word she spoke sounded forced and artificial she almost felt that he must guess what she was so desperately trying to do.

And all the time her brother's words were ringing in her ears, a ruthless machine which had caught her in its iron hands and from which she could not escape.

"We've got ten days, that's all. Ten days before Hugh gets his land, and then you know what will happen if you haven't got your share."

Pulled it off! How horrible! As if she was a clever boy or girl punishing house, sent out to drag an unsuspecting victim home.

More honest to speak the truth to this man who was going to be her husband, more honest to throw herself on his mercy and say:

"Will you help me? I am in terrible trouble."

What an absurd thought! As if any man could be expected to help a woman to whom he had spoken but once in his life, to slip a check in cold blood and hand it over to her without a question asked, without security of any sort.

With an effort she forced herself to further speech.

"Perhaps you don't believe in sudden friendships? Some people don't I know, but with me I'm terribly, terribly modern. I like doing things on impulse, as I once heard you like. I don't want to wait for weeks and months till I get to know you in the ordinary way. I like to ask. Well, are we going to be friends or not?"

Her voice trailed away tremulously.

Jonathan stood up. He looked like a giant in the firelight, she thought and involuntarily she shrank a little from him.

"Are you trying to ask me that?" he said in a queer voice.

She stared up at him, trying to smile, but her lips only quivered and refused.

"I suppose you think I'm a little mad," she said. "But this afternoon when we met—I thought—"

Eloquence came suddenly to Jonathan Corbie.

"INSTINCT!" he said. "I've been thinking that for weeks—months," Jonathan said quietly. "Ever since I first saw you —every time I've seen you. Perhaps you'll despise me, but I feel I've often gone miles out of my way just to see you pass. I've often waited hours on the chance of seeing you. I don't understand myself, Miss Marsh. I'm afraid of them. And they don't like me, or understand me. I'm not a marrying man, not sure you would think I am presumptuous, I would say to you now, this moment Will you marry me? There is no other woman I have ever wanted for my wife. There never will be."

He broke off suddenly, and there was a profound silence.

She had thought it would be so difficult, so preposterous, and after all it was so absurdly easy.

Six hours ago she had never spoken to this man, barely knew him by sight, and now he was asking her to be his wife.

An insane desire to laugh took possession of her, to cry out, "Oh you fool!" And then as suddenly she felt that she must weep; that she must fall at his feet, and sob out all her misery and fear, tell him the truth, and ask him to be her friend indeed and help her.

A big log fell apart in the wide, old-fashioned grate. It sent up a sudden flame that illuminated the room and showed her Jonathan's face, a little pale and set but with the same steady kindliness in the eyes—oh, and something else, too, something that was surely love and a great humility.

He spoke again in that same quiet voice.

"I know it must seem presumptuous to you. I know you can't ever give me a thought except, perhaps, some day in kindly friendship. But if could no more help telling you that I love you than I can help breathing."

She found her voice then, though it was hardly more than a whisper.

"But—you don't know me—you know nothing about me—nothing."

Jonathan made a sudden stop-short bending look the hand that lay on her lap, holding it in his own tightly.

"I know you are the woman I want for my wife."

She sat very still, here eyes on the land that held hers, and suddenly she began to tremble.

She felt so mean so unspeakably mean. It seemed amazing to her that he could not guess how she was acting—nothing plan, while here no need to tell her that he was sincere—that he meant every word he said. There was nothing but shame in her heart; shame and a great longing to be as honest with him as he had been with her.

The sudden gleam of firelight had died down so that they were again in the shadows.

"People will laugh at you—cut you," she said in a shaken voice. "They will say it is just your money I want."

"And I shall laugh, too," he answered, "and say that I don't care what it is you want as long as I get you."

She drew her hand away and stood up, facing him, desperately.

"And if it is—only your money?"

For an instant he hesitated then he said gently: "I am not vain enough to think . . . you could love me as I love you."

She gave a little sob that broke on a laugh.

"You are worth some one so much better than I am."

There was a little swaying movement of the big body, and she felt his hands on her shoulders.

"Does that mean—you will marry me?"

She closed her eyes.

"It is such a big risk — for you." Jonathan laughed.

"Not too big," he said, and then after a moment "I take the risk Priscilla if you will tell me." And he bent and kissed her.

The big, old-fashioned bedroom was cold. Fires were a luxury at the Moorland House except where they were absolutely essential. Priscilla had wrapped herself in a fur coat and huddled over the desk.

It was very quiet everywhere now. Two hours ago Hugh had come home, a little noisy and excited.

"Well, did he come?"

"I don't know what you mean."

"I mean the knight errant. I had job enough to persuade the Guv'nor to ask him so don't say he would not come."

"What do you mean, Hugh?"

Hugh frowned. "You're not generally so stupid. What did you think I was doing in the library this evening, if I wasn't bullying the old man into being polite to one of the made neighbours?"

"You mean — if it hadn't been for you —"

"Corbie — wouldn't have been asked, of course. I told the old man that it was just as well to be friendly with the devil, seeing that one never knew how soon he might be one's landlord, as it were." He yawned. "Well, did he come?"

"Yes," said Priscilla.

She wondered why she had not recognized her brother's hand in this; why she had not guessed that even her father's gratitude to Jonathan would not have driven him to the lengths of asking him to the house.

Hugh laughed complacently, then his eyes caught his sister's face and he was momentarily silent.

"Damn it all," he burst out after a moment. "There's no need to look so tragic about it. The fellow could be made quite presentable if he got into the hands of a decent tailor."

Priscilla said nothing; there seem ed no words to express her thoughts just then. Hugh went on:

"Well, that's the thin edge of the wedge, I suppose. I think I paved the way for you very well."

"Don't you mean for yourself?" his sister asked in a quiet little voice.

He shrugged his shoulders.

"It isn't only my bread the Corbie thousands will butter."

She turned then and faced him. "She'd never occurred to you that I might care for some other man?"

His eyes fell before her stare.

STOP Coughing

LUDEN'S MENTHOL COUGH DROPS

At the blank paper before her. Clive's letter lay at her elbow, but there was no need to read it again. She knew every word of it.

Well, she would never be his wife; never go to the mess dinners.

And he was going next week; seven more days and then the silence of eternal separation would fall between them.

She clipped the pen in the ink. She must write something, must answer his letter somehow—must say good-by.

"Dear Clive—"

She wrote those two words and no more. She knew no words in which she could bid him farewell, nor make him understand.

It seemed hours she stared stupidly. Surely the days were past when daughters sacrificed themselves for their fathers and brothers. One read of such things in books old-fashioned books.

If she told Clive the truth perhaps he would laugh, too; laugh at the very idea of her throwing away his very hopes of happiness with him for the sake of some one so utterly worthless as Hugh. That admission caught her by the throat; it was the first time she had ever allowed herself to realize the truth of it. Some one had been blinded by her foolish love for her brother, by that maternal sense of pity, silly and protectiveness toward him. She was caught fast in a net from which she could never escape, a net made of love and loyalty to a man who was so undeserving of it, as he was ungrateful to her for the sacrifice she had made.

"Dear Clive—"

CLIVE'S ANSWER VI

Priscilla took up the pen once more. "Thank you for your letter. It is good news to hear that you have such a splendid position, and I am very glad to hear of it."

What a silly sentence. She tore the paper in halves, and tried again.

"Dear Clive—

Dear Clive, dear Clive, dear Clive! How clumsy, how unlike the world; the only words that would come to her were these.

She closed her eyes and tried to conjure his face, instead, she saw Jonathan Corbie, his big body and kind eyes, the only eyes she would have the right to look in like that.

Dear Clive, dear Clive—

She loved him so much, had loved him for so long, and now of her own silent choice she was to send him away from her forever.

Sudden bitter revolt rose in her heart; a quick longing that seemed for a moment to melt the iciness there, and then she doomed it still, leaving her cold and indifferent once more.

After all, what did it matter? Or what would it matter in the years to come? Marriage generally turned out all wrong. People grew tired of each other, or found they had made a mistake, and then they spent miserable years to be free. If she had married Clive that would probably have happened to them, too. Why should they be any exception to the general rule?

Dear Clive—dear Clive—

Oh, how cold she was! She drew the big shabby coat more closely round her, and robbed her chilled fingers to bring back a little warmth.

Presently she found she had written a lot more words, a page, and had signed her name.

Yours sincerely,

Priscilla Marsh.

She began to read it through, then gave it up. What did it matter what she said, or omitted? One had to say good-by somehow. She folded the paper and put it into an envelope which she addressed and stamped, she had told him not to bother to come to see her unless he was sure he could spare the time; she knew how busy Clive Weston was. She hoped he would prosper and have every happiness, and that was his sincerely.

Then she crept into bed and lay shivering and doing fitfully till daylight came.

The letter addressed to Clive was the first thing she saw when she got up. While she ate a hurried breakfast she wrote a short note to Jonathan Corbie, asking

PENITENTIAL CALL ISSUED BY BISHOPS

Dec. 2nd Set as Day of Prayer in Church of England

PASTORAL LETTER

The House of Bishops of the Church of England in Ontario has issued a call to penitence and prayer and they have sent out a call to all members of the Church to observe Wednesday, Dec. 2, as a day devoted to this purpose. In all Anglican churches, from coast to coast, in Canada there was read by the clergy on Sunday a pastoral letter from each Bishop of the Church, the people in his diocese concerning this matter. At Malindi in the Toronto Church and in Christ Church yesterday the following pastoral letter was read from the Bishop of Toronto, the Right Rev. C. Allen Seager, D.D., L.L.D.:

The Bishops have called the members of the Church to observe, on Wednesday, Dec. 2nd, the day of Penitence and Prayer. They have done this because they have been deeply moved (and no one wonders) by the dire conditions of the world to-day.

Distress of nations, torn by the conflicts of opposing evils; and situations and fears on the one hand, and by the horrible and insistent menace of preparation for war on the other; tragedies and sorrows innumerable, due to poverty and unemployment heaped upon millions of our race; the fear that has down for the moment of fiscal and industrial systems, and of those leaders bewildered, and the masses asking for guidance and finding none—all these conditions, hardly describable in words, moved, I say, the Bishops to call for this our appeal to Penitence and Prayer.

To Penitence first of all: whatever the immediate causes of the present distress may be, and they are as always, the perverted and evil self-will of man—whether it be rebellion against God, and that utter disregard of righteousness, justice and love which is condemned in the Bible and the Church calls sin.

The new methods of the Church not fruitless, citizens blind to the Kingdom of Christ's kingdom, sluggish and unwilling in sacrificial service, not grieving over the things of the world and relatively little for the things of God, hard and unchastened by discipline and in actions, and in many respects but the reflection of the spirit of the wrongs about them the measure we deal by them is the measure affected by the sin of the world.

Of course there is a brighter side. Many individual lives are aglow with the love of God and adorned with the beauty of Christ character. Most people desire the better things, however feebly that desire works out in action. Even where self-will rules, there is pity, conscience accuses, and points the Higher way. It is also true that this that the Bishops have called all the members of the Church to penitence is the measure of the Christian spirit and a living conscience will respond to the call.

Therefore, as representing the House of Bishops, I, the Bishop, now I call you to Penitence on the day appointed. Special services have been arranged under the leadership of the clergy as the means of observance of the Day, let us hope that the veil of self-satisfaction may be torn away from our eyes, so that we; in the white light of the holiness and love of God, seeing ourselves as we really are, may plead a humble and a contrite spirit.

Then self revealed and quickened the Bishops call us to Prayer—prayer for ourselves, but chiefly for the world for which we have almost to destruction. It is alarmed and bewildered in the whirlwind which its own sowing to the wind has brought to reap. Now is the moment for the Church to raise a prophetic voice, to speak as One who is the High Priest of humanity in heaven, in intercession for the Almighty Father will deliver upon from the evils and perils which beset us.

Consider what is really taking place. Beneath the surface of the present confusion lies a new and better order of things, quickening to birth.

And God fulfils himself in many ways.

This is the invariable course of history; this progress moves from stage to stage.

One thing only delays it, one thing only spoils or qualify it. It is, of course, again, man's own blind and evil will. If, therefore, the Bishops call us to Prayer for the delivering of the world, it is that men may be delivered from their own perverse and selfish spirit.

So, on the day appointed, and may I add the Sunday following, let us find ourselves caught up, with the whole fellowship of the redeemed, in Christ our great High Priest, and in "members of His body, of His flesh and His bones" unite the Church with the Head in that heavenly intercession which He ever liveth to make for the world He died to save.

May we all be exalted into the heavenly places in Christ Jesus on the appointed Day of Penitence and Prayer to which, in the name of the Episcopate of Canada, I, in this letter summon the members of the Church in the Diocese of Ontario.

I am,
Your sincere friend and Bishop,
Charles Allen Ontario.

PR. SPECTACLES PROVIDE CLUE

After Collision of Cars Man Escapes Leaving His Glasses

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 23—A pair of spectacles provided the clue which led to the arrest of Ross Porter, 18, of Hamilton, charged with the theft of an automobile, here yesterday.

While driving the car, Porter is alleged to have collided with another automobile here. He and a companion fled from the scene of the accident. The car was returned to its owner, Walter R. Champ, from whom it had been stolen on Wednesday. In it was found a pair of spectacles.

Police visited every optician in the city and found two had ground the lens. Porter's arrest resulted when he allegedly tried to get new lenses ground.

STOCK TRAIN IS DERAILED

Seven Men Known Killed and 12 Horses By Spreading Rails

Lexington, Mo., Nov. 22—Derailment of a special stock train has carried death to possibly seven men and at least a dozen members of a crew and caused the known destruction the show rings of this country.

The 50-car "million dollar" train, hurrying horses and other animals to the Royal Live Stock Show at Kansas City to the International Livestock Exhibition at Chicago, piled up on the Missouri Pacific track near Lexington late yesterday.

Officials blamed a spreading rail on a road-bed weakened by recent rains. Four bodies were removed from the wreckage of the twenty-four cars that left the track. Many others suffered injuries but their names were not accounted for.

Coroner Edmond Lisack of, Lafayette County, said two of the victims had been identified as Alvie Babb, Kansas, Ila., an attendant for the stable of Emill Philip Schandein of Kansas City, and Ralph Lewis, 30, Delaware, Ohio, also an attendant.

A third victim was said to have been attached to the crew and Mary Belle Llewellyn, River Forest, Ill., R. A. Smith, who said he was stealing a ride on the train, identified another fourth man as his travelling companion.

R. A. Davis, an assistant undertaker, said early today the cars probably contained fifteen dead horses.

Screams of the stricken animals mingled with the shouts of men as rescuers sought to free the victims.

The achievements which are America's pride and glory seem to the Russian to be infamous pride—George Bernard Shaw.

THACKERAY ERRS IN STORY

Leaves Out Part Played By Amherst at Quebec

London, Nov. 23 (CP).—"Thackeray deserves the thanks of all reasoning beings for deliberately omitting the preposterous myth of the reclining Wolfe of Craggy Slope in a hazardous, night operation in which strict silence was kept by Wolfe's army. It has been imposed under penalty of death. The following is from an article upon Thackeray and the Army by Lt.-Col. C. J. Whitton, C.M.G., in this month's Nineteenth Century.

"A curious error in Thackeray's account," continuous Colonel Whitton, "is his phrase about 'creeping unmarked in darkness and carried silently up the midnight river.' The voyage was of course down stream, for the great part of the troops had some time previously been brought several miles up-stream from Aspay, like almost every English writer, Thackeray appears to be in sublime ignorance of the important part played by Amherst, the British Commander-in-Chief, in the conquest of Canada. Sir John Fortescue, in his 'History of the British Army' calls that great soldier justice; but his is but a voice crying in the wilderness, for within the last four years a well known English military writer has conferred the title of 'Conqueror of Canada' upon Wolfe.

"Nothing will make the average Englishman comprehend that Wolfe's capture of Quebec was not paramount. It was quickly challenged, and the city was rescued only in the nick of time by the British fleet. The surrender of Canada took place, not in 1759, but in 1760; not to James Wolfe, but to Jeffery Amherst, not at Quebec, but at Montreal. So ingrained, indeed, was Thackeray of the army mentality that he actually confers upon Wolfe the credit for the capture of Louisburg in 1758, in which in justice no profound would be the conferring on Pitton or Pon sonby the distinction of Wellington, the credit for Waterloo.

FACTORIES LARGER THROUGH TARIFFS

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 23—Enlarged factories in Canada for a typewriting company and a vacuum cleaning manufacturing company are resulting from the operation of the new British tariff against manufactured goods from countries, D. P. Mackenzie, Canadian director of the Remington Typewriter Company said it would be necessary to secure additional space immediately. He described the British tariff as "one of the best things for Canada. This has happened for a long time.

OLD ENGLISH IS ADMIRED

Baldwin Deprecates People Talking Like Broadcasters

London, Nov. 23 (CP)—Stanley Baldwin deprecates the people of Great Britain "talking like the British Broadcasting Corporation," and in a speech recently he expressed regret at the progress of uniformity of speech. The occasion was the opening of the new buildings of Bellahlu School, Wolverley, Worcester, founded in 1630, which the Conservative leader formally opened.

"We have lived now to a day when most of us try to talk like the British Broadcasting Corporation," Mr. Baldwin said, "and in the sacred name of progress one language is being gradually formed on the model of the captions of the Holywood films. I hope that nothing that rouses a primitive wrath in us more than the use of the half-educated call the old English speech vulgar, in the country, and in London where, I can point to families whose language I deplore, but of any importance, is better than half the present day people. Not one half the present novels are readable. Mr. Baldwin humorously referred to people who would give every other sentence in invented commas, and added that he before I die he make the use of inverted commas in this country illegal. Another thing was, in the House of Commons, when you wished to quote something from Worcestershire from a member from Yorkshire you had to translate it. He cannot do now, and I think more's the pity. We are progressing, and in the name of progress the whole will be brought to the common level. I get my finer clothes from the same slopshop where they all have them. I, like B.C., where they all have them. I, like B.C., where they all have them. I, like B.C.,

Women's Interests in the Home

ONCE LIVED AT COBOURG

Lillie Koeber, Now Famous Actress, Marie Dressler

Cobourg, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—Years ago there lived in this town a little tomboy-natured, impetuous German girl named Lillie Koeber. She had nothing to distinguish her from the average child beyond the order with which she threw herself into everything she undertook and a certain dramatic ability which enabled her to take part in amateur theatricals at the local town hall. Her father professor Charles Koeber, was organist at the Anglican church and she was sometimes called upon to take a turn at the hand pump which supplied the air for the organ.

Little could such humble beginnings have had anyone to dream that this daughter of a poor German musician should one day become a brilliant career topped by being dubbed the most outstanding actress of 1931. For Lillie Koeber is now known to the world as Miss Marie Dressler. Whose clever performances have thrilled movie audiences in the last few years. The screen tribute awarded to Miss Dressler has excited great interest here in Cobourg and memories connected with her childhood days are now evoked by the older residents.

Andrew Hewson, Cobourg postmaster and an authority on local history, remembers the actress as a quick-tempered but well forgiving child, who could hold her own amid attacks of either boy or girl size. She attended private school in Cobourg before taking those with her father and mother and an aunt. Mr. Hewson recalls her dancing anything from jigs to classical steps and chumming with the daughter of the late Hon. J. Cockburn speaker of the Federal House.

"She used to take part in concerts and tableaux vivants introduced here by her father, and she displayed genuine talent in them," Mr. Hewson said.

The mother of the famous star was a Port Hope woman and after she died, during her daughter's early youth professor Koeber and the young girl resided there for some time before leaving Canada.

Poet's Corner

THE LAUNCHING OF A SHIP

The stalwart sound of mauls all winter long
Rang sturdily in chorus, till one day
The scaffolding and the platforms were stripped away,
And there she stood as graceful as a song.
Yet with her bluff, square bow, less graceful than strong.
Pinned by the restless breezes of late May.
Above the rush of an anticipant throng
Poised till she plunged into the restless bay.
With her slow pride of queenly dignity.
At last she started down the sloping tryes,
And as she moved there came a shout of praise
That half a thousand voices' unity,
From men who, having no other poetry,
Made her as strong a song as men need raise.

W. M. S. MEETINGS

CENTENARY W.S. AND W.M.S.

On Thursday Nov. 12th the ladies of Centenary United Church gathered at the home of Mrs. and Mrs. Milton Vanderwater to hold the monthly meeting of the Women's Association and the Women's Missionary Society. There was a good attendance of members and the visitors were pleased to have with us Mrs. N. Farley, Mrs. A. Pricey, Mrs. J. Sergeant and Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Vanderwater served a dainty and most appetizing dinner to which all did justice.

In the course of the day two quilts were quilted. The W. A. meeting opened with Mrs. Roy Tarshis in the chair who is kindly relieving Mrs. James Roy who cannot meet with us because of the illness of her daughter Miss Helen Roy. "Stand up stand up for Jesus", was sung followed with prayer by Rev. F. W. Butler. The minutes and a few items of business occupied a short period after which the roll was called. The meeting closed by all repeating "The Lord's Prayer."

Centenary W.M.S.

Immediately following came the Hymn "Blest Be the Tie That Binds", which opened the W.M.S. meeting. The 23rd Psalm was repeated in unison, the minutes read and the roll called. It was decided to hold an "At Home" on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 1st to which the ladies and their husbands are invited. The invitation is extended to Wallbridge, Foxboro, Stoco, Ameliasburg, Consecon, Bellville, Wesley and Whites. Quilts are being quilted for the needy in the west and a bale will be sent in the near future. Mrs. J. Roy one of the group leaders then took charge and sang hymn 463, Rev. J. R. Butler Bellville with Mrs. Jas. Radford the Scripture lesson, Psalm 105, Hymn 464 reading by Mrs. Herman "The Lower Lights". Duet—Mrs. Hart and Miss A. Adams, reading Mrs. D. A. Thrasher, "A Little Talk Story From Japan."

Mrs. N. Farley then favored with a duet this and a few timely suggestions The meeting closed with the Mission Benediction.

SCOTTS W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the Scotts W.M.S. was held on Thursday, Nov. 12th at the home of Mrs. Morley Sine.

The President Mrs. Morley Sine opened the meeting with the use of hymn 248 "The morning light is breaking." Lord's Prayer followed in Prayer.

Mrs. Ross Dafoe read the Scripture lesson from Genesis 1 chapter 1-5; Rev. Mr. Hall chapter 2.

Mrs. J. A. Lott reported on Temperance and Publicity also sang picture called "The Allocation Winning." Mrs. Wesse read the Scripture lesson from Matthew 28 following which prayer was offered by Mrs. Coon.

Mrs. Daggett rendered a beautiful solo entitled "I Want to be There. Mrs. A. Johnson.

Mrs. (Dr.) Calder took an active part in the program displaying on the C.G.I.T.

BANKS ASSIST INSTALMENT LOAN BUYING

Applications From Insurance and Trust Companies $17,000,000 AWAIT ISSUE

Bank Deposits at High Mark Apparently Seeking Favorable Outlet

Ottawa, Nov. 28—The Canadian chartered banks will assist any customers who are subscribing to the National Service Loan and who desire to pay for their bonds from their income over a period of months. It was stated at the Department of Finance that arrangements in this regard were effected with the Canadian Bankers' Association by Premier R. B. Bennett shortly before he left Canada. The bonds go on sale today.

It is expected that there will be many investors who, in determining the amount of their purchases, would like to anticipate the receipt of certain income or assets and increase their purchases accordingly. It is understood that in all cases the matter will be one of private negotiation between the individual investor and his bank.

The general basis of the arrangement is that the banks will find amounts not in excess of 75 per cent. of the subscriptions of those who give satisfactory assurance of being able to complete their payments within a period of six months. In other words, the subscriber will be expected to have cash of at least 25 percent. of his subscription. The Government will receive the entire proceeds of the purchase at once and deliver the bonds to the bank, which will hold them as security for the loan, as in the ordinary course of banking business. The rate of interest to be charged by the bank upon such loans is five per cent. which corresponds with the interest rate on the bonds.

This is considered to be a most favorable arrangement, which will be of particular benefit to small subscribers, as well as in larger amounts.

Montreal, Nov. 28—Through a great bond-selling organization composed of the leading banks and investment houses of the country the Dominion of Canada will offer to the public its $150,000,000 national service loan bearing interest at 5 per cent.

The price of the issue, which is to be in two maturities, five and ten years, is as follows: The five-year bonds are being offered at 99 1-4 while the ten year issue is being sold at 99. The former will yield approximately 5.17 per cent. while the ten year bonds will yield approximately 5.12 per cent. each to later maturity dates in 1936 and 1941.

Such a yield is regarded in financial circles as highly attractive and it is believed a warm reception awaits the loan. Reports from various sections of the country, as received at Ottawa and here, are stated to be distinctly encouraging.

Not since 1925 has a Dominion bond been issued with such a high yield. In that year a six-year loan was issued with a yield of 5.33 and a 20-year bond with a yield of 5.15.

LIFE INSURANCE INDEX OF WEALTH

The life insurance business in Canada, along with banking, commerce and mining, has grown from small beginnings to its present-day large scale. The total life insurance in force in all companies operating under Dominion licenses in 1930 was more than $3,580,000,000, while in 1930 it exceeded $8,492,500,000.

This striking increase in life insurance in force is evidence of the recognition of increased insurance as adequate protection. Life insurance is looked upon as a thrift as well as a necessary rather than a luxury. This increase is particularly noted since the depression of stock markets.

Stocks, bonds and debentures form more than 50 per cent. of the assets of life insurance companies in Canada, and as stock prices are in a present unsettled condition more attention is being paid to bonds.

This also benefits the holders of high grade bonds. Dominion Government issues, etc., as a stable bond market is maintained. While the smallest depreciation in the price of these high grade bonds, insurance companies add to their portfolios.

INCREASE SHOWN IN GROSS REVENUE

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 23 (CP)—A consolidated gross revenue of $750,000 was realized by the Canadian Hydro Electric Corporation, Limited, and subsidiary companies, including Gatineau Power Company, during the month of September, according to a statement of earnings issued today. This figure represents an increase of $45,819 compared with the same month of last year. After all prior charges, including interest and depreciation, consolidated net revenue amounted to $200,000 and dividends on the cumulative first preferred stock of the corporations, was $123,990.

SAVINGS DEPOSITS IN BANKS INCREASED

On July 31st of this year, savings banks deposits in Canada stood at $1,560,000,000, an increase of $49,000,000 over July 31st, 1930. These figures show that the earnings of the Canadian worker are being set aside awaiting a favorable investment outlet. This is in contrast to the rash speculative movement of the years previous to 1929. Then the excess of earnings was poured into the financial markets for the purchase of common stocks. But, with the deflation in 1929 and the since unsettled condition of the stock market, the investor is looking to the banks—fritiad of the brokers. With this vast reservoir of wealth stored up in the banks earning current savings account interest, the opportunity offered by the Dominion Government of earning five per cent will not be overlooked. The recent conversion loan that was successfully engineered in the summer of 1931, shows that the citizens of Canada made great confidence in her bond issues. And as the National Service Loan is the first opportunity that the government has given for the investment of new money, it will be awaited with a great deal of interest by the investing public.

GRAIN FUTURE LOOKS BETTER

Canada Stands to Profit Most By Wheat Crops

A few days ago, news dispatches intimated that the eyes of official Washington were now turning towards Winnipeg, and that the front pages of the great United States dailies were featuring the trend of activities on the world famous Grain Exchange of the prairie metropolis. Even more so, in the coming twelve-month, will the gaze of the world's financial and commercial capitals be focused upon those great expanses of wheat-lands to which Winnipeg serves as the gateway.

Why? Because, as days pass, it is more and more evident that Western Canada may well in 1932-33 be the trump card in the world's wheat situation. Circumstances quite beyond his control are now orienting themselves in such wise that the Canadian wheat grower may shortly emerge as the dominant factor in the matter of supplying the nations with the chief wherewithal for their daily bread.

World wheat acreages have declined drastically. In three countries alone, Australia, Argentina and the United States, there are going out of production in this current cereal year no fewer than thirteen million acres of wheat lands. This drastic reduction is the equivalent of the entire expansion that occurred in the three countries named, and Canada as well, between 1928 and 1930.

But not only acreage is declining; prospective yields are down. Preliminary estimates indicate a world crop this year (exclusive of Russia and China) which will be some two hundred million bushels less than in 1930. To this may be added the fact that the estimated crop in 1931 is one hundred and fifty million bushels below that of last year.

And what of Canada? Abundant fall rains throughout the prairies; fall plowing under most most favorable conditions; abundance of seed at an unusually high quality; a plentiful labor market; lower production costs than for many years; a new grain-haulage route to a nearer seaboard; probable clean-up in the current year of the 1931 crop, and definite reduction in the carry-over. In short, Canada stands ready to profit more than any other country by the course along which events are now shaping themselves

LIVESTOCK

NO MARKS UPON BODIES OF FOUR

Boston, Nov. 22.—The bodies of William F. Goodale, a Boston Latin school teacher, and his four children, ranging in ages from three months to four years, were found in the Goodale home today. The bodies were found in the kitchen of the cottage where Goodale was said to have been paralyzed as the result of the shooting. Efforts were immediately begun for Mrs. Goodale.

ACCLAMATION IN LONDON

London, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—Mayor George Hayman was returned by acclamation today at the close of the nominations for the municipal after the withdrawal of Alderman F. B. Kilbourne, who was the only other nominee. A. E. Silverwood was also unopposed in the race for chairman of the Victoria Hospital Trust and was accorded an acclamation for the post.

NEW ISSUE IS ALL CANADIAN

Prompt Over-Subscription Will Assist Credit

Seventy-six per cent. of the funded debt of the Dominion of Canada is payable in Canada eleven per cent. in New York and thirteen per cent. in London. With Great Britain off the gold basis, the Dominion's external interest payments are lighter than they were, despite the premium on New York transactions. This was pointed out today by a financial statistician, who used in illustration the fact that between now and the end of the fiscal year the Dominion has approximately $4,000,000 to pay in interest in New York and £700,000 in London. On the basis of today's exchange rates the New York payments would cost about $450,000 for exchange, but as the pound is at a discount the Dominion would save about $600,000 on the English settlements, a net saving of $150,000. It was explained that, as an increasing premium on the U. S. dollar is detrimental to all Canadian public entities, the Dominion buys gold from the mines, thereby relieving the pressure on the exchange market.

While Canada has to pay about $8,000,000 in interest abroad before March 31st, Canadians themselves collect $10,000,000 from the government during the same period. As a matter of fact the latter amount will be greater, due to the fact that the Dominion has in the banks over $24,000,000, set aside to pay matured interest payments which have not been presented, due to neglect of holders of bonds in not presenting their coupons.

The new National Service Loan is to be floated in Canada, and already the Treasury is being quartered by departmental stores and credit agencies as to the date of the coupon. Many of these ask that the interest coupons be payable on November 15th. The reason for this request is a natural one. On November 1st the government pays out about over $28,000,000 in interest. This puts money into circulation, and merchants, as a result, frame prepare for this business but by the middle of the month, some find that they have short-changed; therefore, the stimulus of additional payments on November 1 would give merchandisers a protection against slow moving stocks. While the government has not announced its intentions, the suggestion of a November 15th bond is receiving serious consideration.

Ottawa, Nov. 23—By prompt over-subscription of the issue will assist those provisions of the Bank Act which have obligations maturing in New York or London, as it will reopen avenues of credit, and, in particular, help to break down the adverse exchange existing in New York against the Canadian dollar.

POUND BROKE TO NEW LOW

Deluge of Selling Orders Forced Value of Pound Down

New York, N.Y., Nov. 23—The pound sterling suffered its severest break in years over German financial developments, including passage of the anti-dumping measure, and general business troubles throughout Europe, but caused apparent shifting of balances from London to New York. A portion of this flow of money to this country has found its way into the stock market but probably the larger percentage is being held on deposit.

GROTESQUE TO SEND ARMS

Suggestion to Be Carried to Secretary of State

LONDON, Nov. 23.— (AP)—Rt. Hon. George Lansbury, leader of the Labor Opposition, suggested in the House of Commons today that the League of Nations Council should instruct Secretary Stimson to refrain from supplying munitions to parties to the dispute in Manchuria.

"There is a strong feeling in this country," he said, "that it would be rather grotesque if members of the council, now pledged against war, should assist in carrying on a war because they are interested in peace by supplying munitions of war to them."

Captain A. Eden, under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, said he would convey these suggestions to Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who is the British representative in Paris, now attending the League last week. Great Britain had placed no restrictions upon munitions shipments to Japan or China.

MORE SYSTEM

Jimmie Folwell is Star of Pastime With Hilton Close Second

For the first time in the history of football in Belleville a champion team was realized, when the Belleville Collegiate Juniors defeated the Barrie juniors at Oshawa on Saturday afternoon by the score of 9 to 0.

The local kids are now champions of the Central Ontario Junior Interscholastic Football Association. Belleville won the eastern section and Barrie won the central section. Belleville District Grid League is entitled to Barrie and after the final game Saturday the local kids are now declared champions. It is very doubtful whether they will compete in the provincial finals as they would have to play the winners of Western Central Ontario League in Windsor and the expenses incurred to such a trip would not warrant playing such a series.

Too much credit cannot be given the collegiate kids for their fine game on Saturday. Every boy on the team was right "in the game" from the start to the finish. While as it was clearly shown, when Coach Shiels did not use a substitute all day. Saturday was the first time this season that the Barrie juniors have been scored upon and it might be well to add that the local juniors have not been scored upon in a league game so far this season. This is quite a record for any football team to hang up and the local boys are quite proud of the fact that their goal line has never been crossed in a league game this year.

The locals were a little slow in starting Saturday but once they got under way they showed superior strength in kicking, forward passing and line plunging. If there was any particular star of the day it was Jimmie Folwell, who was kicking the ball play after play for 50 yards every time a kick formation was called. The spectators were astonished at the superior kicking of a junior player and many words of comment were handed out in favor of Jimmie. Hilton, McKinney and Cole were a tower of strength and literally tore the Barrie line to pieces. McBrath, Schrieger, Angell, Andrews, Carruthers and Laughlin also gained yards for the locals time and again. George Osborne at quarter, played the game of his life and before the first quarter was over the mite quarter had solved the Barrie signals so well that he was calling their plays for the local boys.

Tore Line to Shreds

Hilton's line bangs for a touchdown in the first quarter and Jimmie Folwell's kicking rounded off all the points for Belleville. Time and again the Belleville line of scrimmage was called upon to ward off a threatened attack by the husky Barrie team. Barrie ran out the largest team of juniors that the locals had met with and this was due to this fact alone perhaps, that the kids here a little cautious in the first ten minutes of play. Lewis did all the kicking for Barrie but he was outkicked by Folwell on each attempt of an aerial attack. Livingstone, Lawrence and Corbett were all high class football players and gave the local team many a worry when they carried the ball.

The game was played at Alexandra field in Oshawa and the night rain that was falling caused the ball as well as the field to be a little slippery. Belleville kicked off and Barrie ran the ball back thirty yards. Corbett went around the end for seven on the first down. The Barrie team were pressed by the locals hard and it was only the good work of the Belleville line that they were not scored upon. Lewis kicked but Folwell returned and on the exchange Belleville gained some ground. On the next down Coleston fumbled and Wylie crashed through the line to fall on the loose ball. The Belleville team then started a series of bucks and line plunges that netted them yards often. When within six yards of the Barrie line Hilton elected to go through the centre and he was given plenty of help by his team-mates. Hilton crossed the line for a touchdown and on the conversion Folwell then threw a forward pass to Laughlin making the score 9 to 0 for Belleville. Just previous to the quarter the local boys had worked hard to the dead line and the period ended Belleville 7, Barrie 0.

Second Period Dreary

The second period saw some rough playing on the part of both teams, the result being that the game was held up three and again Belleville the players were patched up a bit. Twice the locals had the ball on Barrie's five yard line but they could not seem to score points. Then Barrie were aided by Livingstone and Lawrence, two of the biggest men on the local team, and started a series of end runs that were telling on the locals. But the line was not weakened and stopped the onslaught before the locals could get Merrilles ten yard line. On an exchange of punts the Belleville kids got the ball the Barrie team seemed to sense that they were up against a real high class bunch of juniors. It was in this period that both teams showed some real speed but the locals were far superior as they completed three forward passes to all be complete. On a forward pass Folwell to Laughlin the latter gained twenty yards on the next down Folwell carried the ball around the end and was downed by Ostrom making the score at the end of the second quarter 9 to 0 for Belleville.

Locals Work Hard

Scenting defeat the Barrie team came out for the third quarter like a team that was prepared to do or die. It was in this period that the locals rose to heights and proved to their followers that they were worthy champions. The Belleville line worked themselves into exhaustion in their efforts to stop the crushing Barrie kids, who were determined to at least tie the game up if at all possible. Both lines of scrimmage ripped and tore until at the end of the quarter they were glad to take their much-needed rest. There was no scoring in the quarter but some of the plays brought the fans to their feet. In the closing moments of the quarter Ostrom was on the receiving end of a forward pass and he ran it twenty yards more before he was downed. Then they carried the ball to Barrie's ten yard line but could not score a point before the whistle blew.

The final period also gave the fans many a thrill but the locals now had the situation well in hand and took advantage of their superiority by taking all chances possible. The locals were trying many plays in which they were taking chances but they seemed to sense that they had the upper hand and were worrying their opponents. It was in this quarter that Jimmie Folwell was downed quite hard and it looked as though he might have to retire from the game. After receiving first aid Jimmie gamely struggled to his feet and from then on the locals played like a team that were possessed. White, Cole, McKinney and Hilton were the stars in a series of line plungers that made the Barrie boys look very ordinary.

After they got the ball in position Jimmie Folwell kicked over the line and McBrath downed Shortt for the final scoring of the game. The Barrie team now were struggling to at least score a point and they tried every play possible to try and get at least one point before the final whistle but with no avail for at the final whistle the score stood Belleville 9, Barrie 0 and the local kids were champions of the Central district which also includes the Niagara peninsula.

During the game Barrie tried 22 forward passes and only completed but two of them. Belleville, on the other hand, tried 11 forward passes and completed five of them.

On the Friday Belleville Folwell outkicked Lewis from the start to the finish and after the Belleville line of scrimmage saw that they could break through the Barrie line they showed a determination and strength although they were a bit smaller in stature. The whole Belleville team played smart football and too much praise cannot be handed to them and especially their much thought of coach, Les Shiels, who they all respect and think the world of.

The line-ups:

Barrie—Coleston, Lawrence, Livingston, Lewis, Hooper, Cromland, Beverly, Armstrong, D. Muir, Shortt, Corbett, Smith, Chappell. Begg. Belleville—Andrews, Folwell, Angell, Laughlin, Ostrom, Carruthers, Cole, White, McKinney, Hilton, McBrath, Schrieger, Watson, Hay, Bradford and Graham.

Congratulations are in order to the Belleville Collegiate Institute football team. The kids defeated Barrie by the score of 9 to 0 and annexed the Central Ontario League title on Saturday. The local kids have not been scored upon in a league game, this year. Coach Shiels is quite proud of his boys and has a bit disappointed that he cannot take them to Western Ontario for the provincial finals.

The latest body to get behind the management relief fund is the B.A.A.A. They are playing an exhibition game against the Toronto Maroons on Wednesday evening at the Arena. The gate receipts, after the necessary expenses are taken out, will all be turned over to the relief fund. Tickets will be within the reach of all and it is expected that the arena will be filled to capacity for this worthy cause.

The Marlboros are a smart team and Bill Chritchley promised a new Pennant to the team that will be best team in Belleville for this game. The local kids are quite anxious to get the Toronto boys and the team will be wended set during this game

Bill Rankin sent word from Toronto yesterday that he had made arrangements with Matchmaker Corcoran for a wrestling bout to be staged at the Belleville Arena one week from tonight.

Just who two head-liners Jack Corcoran intends bringing to Belleville next week is not known as yet, Bill Rankin asserted in that he was going to try and induce Corcoran to send down Caraball and Barbaras. This boy Zaharias is the "Canadian" who has taken the place of the late Stanley Pleasant, the Green Lion. In the eye of the public, Zaharias is of the bad-man nature wrestler and it is hoped that Mr. Rankin will be able to land at least two big, rough and ready men for the next show.

The Juvenile Hockey League of which we have spoken before, is beginning to look like something of a reality. Three organizations have been approached and they seem quite eager to see the project get over. It is through such a medium as this that the future of hockey can be saved in Belleville.

On November 30th Harry Robinson is taking Jack Lang and Freddie Parry to Toronto for Maichalenko bout at all-star boxing card. Lang will box Billy Marsh of England, while Freddie Parry takes on George Parry of Hamilton. It seems to us as though Brown is giving Lang some soft spots to oppose. Lang is a clever boy and ready for the next show.

ALL LEADERS WIN DURING THE WEEKEND

Leafs Take it on Chin From Rangers of New York

CANADIENS WIN

Hec Kilrea Sustains Severe Injury to Eye

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP) — League leading clubs in both divisions of the National Hockey League enjoyed profitable week-ends at the expense of second division opposition when they scored four victories against no defeats. Canadiens, Chicago, New York Americans and Rangers were the four successful teams, who defeated of Boston, Montreal, Detroit and Toronto respectively. However, none of the contests had any effect on the league standings which remained unchanged with Rangers leading the American section a game in front of Chicago and Montreal and New York Americans deadlocked for the Canadian group leadership.

Canadiens Blank Boston

What was expected to prove the closest contest of the week-end, the Canadien-Bruin tilt in Montreal, turned into a rather one-sided affair when the Flying Frenchmen shut out their opponents 2-0. Flashing a dazzling brand of speed with which the Bruins could not cope, last year's Stanley Cup champions completely outplayed their rivals and at no time did the Boston entry resemble the club that last season battled the Habitants in the Stanley Cup play-offs.

Canadien goals were consistent efforts, when Morenz, Ledue and Joliat all found the net. Morenz opened the scoring ten minutes after the first period started, when he picked up a loose puck at centre, cruised around the Bruin rearguard and let fire a bullet ankle-high drive at Thompson. "Battleship" Ledue notched the second counter in the middle session, when he sifted thru the Boston defence and tallied a rolling puck into the cage. The final goal came from the stick of Joliat, who after circling three times within the Bruin defence area flipped a high shot past Thompson.

Leafs Defeated 3-1.

Scoring three times before their opponents found the net, New York Rangers won their fourth game of the campaign Saturday, when they outplayed and outscored Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1. The Rangers got their first counter early after the start when Butch Keeling flipped a back-hand shot past Chabot. Frank Boucher and Bill Cook made it two-nil for the Blueshirts when Boucher put the Rangers two in front. Chuck Conacher pulled the Leafs before the period ended when he took a pass from Andy Blair. Boucher scored the last counter for the New York squad, when he banked thru the Toronto defence to beat Chabot.

Pupil of Eye Punctured.

Maroons Trampled On.

The snappy combination of the Cook, Marsh and Adams line on the Black Hawks' formidable forward line, gave Chicago squad a 4-2 victory over Maroons last night. The three-quarter front-liners showed no tricky stick-handling and combination throughout the opening minutes and when they came back to relieve the second string they worked their way around the Maroon defence and March sifted through for a goal. Cook and Adams were both given assists on the play. Less than a minute later the three came pounding in again on the Maroon net and March again bulged the twine. Lowery and Gottselig made it 4-0 for the Black Hawks, but Hart Smith, former on a solo effort, while the latter drew assists on the play. Shortly thereafter, with three successive forward passes, perfectly executed, caused the rarity. However, they lost a point after being within inches of victory when their fourth successive pass was intercepted. Toronto evened the count just before half time when Patterson hoisted a long punt to Cleary who scored.

Adding another point in the third period against an outside kick went for a rouge, the colegs squad really started their drive in the final session when two runs netted 40 yards. Another run by Patterson and then two points when Geary batted the ball and then fell on it for a safety touch. Two long kicks to Hayes within a few minutes netted the Western aggregation two more counters while their final point came fast as the whistle blew when Norman Perry was forced to rouge on one of Patterson's long kicks.

MUSTANGS WILL MEET WHEELERS

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—On the shoulders of Western Mustangs of London, rests the intercollegiate hopes of capturing the 1931 edition of the Eastern Canadian football championship by virtue of their sensational 7-1 victory over the strong O.R.F.U. champions, in the Thanet City tonight. The London aggregation will journey to Montreal next Saturday to meet the Winged Wheelers, Big Four Champions, for the Eastern title.

Stepping on the field in the border town Saturday as underdogs in the betting, the Mustangs played one of their best games of the season and handed the Imperials a big trouncing. After conceding the Wanderers a point in the initial quarter when Stirling hoisted a long punt to Cleary, Western soon settled up their defensive and started their march to victory early in the second quarter, when three successive forward passes, perfectly executed, caused the rarity. However, they lost a point after being within inches of victory when their fourth successive pass was intercepted. Toronto evened the count just before half time when Patterson hoisted a long punt to Cleary who scored.

Adding another point in the third period against an outside kick went for a rouge, the colegs squad really started their drive in the final session when two runs netted 40 yards. What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Capitol

"SPIDER" BERGER, CRIPPING DRAMA

Lionel Atwill Muffles pat to a ruffle, calling her curbs and wives;
Along comes "The Spider" and sat down beside her and frightened Mrs. Muffet away.

The murderer in "The Bishop Murder Case" and "Murder Goes" delights to point the moral to his criminal activities, and they can be used appropriately to describe the delectable goose pimpled Mother Goose rhymes.

We have, on the screen, in the guise of a detective, Richard Dix (Miss Lee Tracy Muffet) Moran and "The Spider" sat down beside her and that her always frightened that had, dead, dead," and frightened her little self away, and everyone in the Theatre as well. For the eerie mystery of "The Spider" is that by the magic of the camera you cannot be in a scene part of that scene on the screen, expecting the finger of death to point your way any minute. When Edmund Lowe, as the tiger magician had a hand in the death meetings you'll watch him breathlessly.

Lowe reached the very zenith of picture acting in "Sporting Blood," when he with him all the way. Helen Twelvetrees, a young and talented girl, brought a laugh and an encore to Georges E. Stone, with the Spanish Theatre, commencing Monday and Tuesday, Lewis Milestone did a wonderful job of direction on this enthralling table version of the famous stage play by Fulton Gunzler and Lowell Brentano.

"Chonquered Africa" the finale of that absorbing series, together with comedy and news completes the programme which will be shown for the last time tonight.

At The Belle

"SIN OF MADELON CLAUDET" DEPICTS DRAMATIC STORY

Helen Hayes, Lewis Stone Leads Union Hall Cast and Co. Produce mate stage's most accomplished actress appears in the screen version produced at the Belle, Wednesday and Thursday, Madelon Claudet. She plays the starring title role in "The Sins of Madelon Claudet," and inevitably every audience that sees the picture will favor it for it is a human document more pitifully, beautifully true to life, one of the true classics of screen writing has been inscribed to the speaking screen with unforgetable artistry.

It is the work of Miss Hayes, in a role that she has at least, of a specially different characterization, that is outstanding. Playing the part of a mother who sacrifices everything in life, while ignorant knowledge of the world in which they live.

Dr. Anita Reed, a director of the Vocational Bureau of New York University, declared that to some extent this system is responsible for disturbing conditions, as it tends to make the child dissatisfied by crowding the system with too many subjects. Consequently, in discarding the child to remain longer in school, it creates a feeling of unrest and discontent to the individual.

Dr. Reed declared that emphasis can go back in some instances to before the kindergarten period is completed, and in others the germ of crime is made evident by a crafty look in the eye.

By realizing that children are equipped by heredity to some extent at the start of school and that the influence in their early years has the greatest personality, will effect their later actions, Dr. Reed declared, and teachers alike can help the children develop their natural abilities and prevent their failure in everything," Dr. Reed declared.

Principal Fred Hall of the School of Education at New York University declared that he felt although we have always looked to the schools and to the courts to prevent crime," there has been not only an increase in crime, but in juvenile delinquency.

He listed as the outstanding cause as of this increase, not "a misguided sympathy which has led to the lingness to follow extreme," the punishment of criminals, but "a racial individualism" and family "too much concerned with its own affairs" the subject matter upon the character of the individual child."

SCHOOLS OF CRIME CHECK

Educators Discuss Problems of Maladjusted Child

New York, Nov. 23.—Efforts to prevent crime were discussed at a meeting of the child welfare committee of the Women's Conference of the Institute of Child Welfare and the Parents' and Teachers' Association of Greater Children Schools, Mrs. Ralph Gutenburg, chairman of the committee on education, presided at the meeting, which was held in the Barbizon-Plaza.

Declaring that the prevention of crime is dependent upon adjusting the problems of the individual to the conditions which surround him, Arthur H. Sherman, a director of the Child Study Association, emphasized the importance of the school and the community "in making social misfits over."

The present school system has failed to bring the child "a part of society," said Mr. Newman, adding that the schools could be made "living centers of human social understanding through which the child may obtain a fuller knowledge of the world in which they live."

BOY AND HIS MUT AT SHOW

Roaring Nightmare in Fiesta Period at Madison Sq.

New York, Nov. 23.—Relative calm prevailed in the Madison Square Garden late the other afternoon. It was an oasis in a desert. It could be with a pet show at which owners of several hundred cats argued with judges and dickered with prospective customers.

It was the atmosphere that was happy peace suddenly came a tumult and a shouting. There came first, however, a small boy and a dog.

The name of the former was never learned—even after order had been restored; the latter, however, was named Jill. She was the offspring of a partnership, the bill for dissolution proceedings being filed by one of the other neighborly spats of Greenwich Village. Jill was a mutt, much of a dog, but she came distinguished by the unofficial heading of "pets." Life had frowned upon her, but there was a certain sadness bores are scarce. She was thin and wistful.

Now Jill and her owner got on at all is a mystery—but one which suggests that it is a fellowship of the Garden are formal. They just regarded it as a place for dogs and politely asked where they should sit. An attendant, who himself had had he had been thinking of something like that, led them to a corner. In that corner whose dogs were being scrubbed.

Mostly they were fuzzy items, with ribbons and prizes and elderly ladies with quilts and things.

The owner placed Jill quietly in the ring. She looked like a mixed-up small police dog, absent at the time. She was given a ribbon and the gilt medals. Jill ambled around, yawning. Then the judge brought her a straw for a bed and then noticed across the way something that delighted her. It was a cat. There was nothing she had ever seen. Feline cats, fluffy cats, cats with ribbons to her patrimony avenue, however, Persians, cats of the boulevards in the big city. Being unmistakably mixed as to ancestry, she decided to investigate.

A curfew must perhaps be drawn over what happened next. Jill discovered that it was a dog and the cat was a dog, and there was a sudden nightmare, awoke. There was a shrill howl. The cat responded in desperate that it could bark, besides playful. It was all a mistake, a mistake; she forgot that her companion was the West looked in school-ing of the sophisticated East. Then there was a high-pitched yelp of pain and anguish—which rose echoes from an owner recalled suddenly to the realization that Jill was while it lasted.

In the middle of the investigation they looked around to banish Jill and her short memory, but they had gone. They had not departed by the usual route. She could not be located in the building. But there was a hockey game last night, upstairs.

MILLION CITY FRENCH PLAN

Large City in Indo-China is Answer to Reds

Saigon, Indo-China — Creation here of a metropolis of a million population is France's answer to Communism activities with the ensuing destruction of her colonial empire in the East.

Saigon is marked for death by Communists, Paul Reynaud, the French Minister of Colonies, states here recently with plans to dazzle the masses of the people by making the two cities of Saigon and Cholon into a modern metropolis.

The French hope that this century will be sufficiently impressive as a sufficient demonstration of strength to stifle subversive activities and to have peace during the entire Orient.

M. Reynaud's long trip was made because Paris had become uneasy and had decided that it was time to take a bold step that would show the force of a nation which, since Sun-Chiocon, therefore is to be worked out in the form of a colonial city of the Mediterranean.

FRACTIONAL POST STAMPS

Montreal, Que. (CP) — Postage stamps of fractional denomination such as are found in the change of a letter bearing two 1½ cent Dominion stamps caused considerable idle interest and led to inquiry at the Montreal Post Office in Montreal recently.

It was learned that the 1½ cent stamp was issued in the United States last September when changes in postal rates made it necessary for consignments of printed matter to bear 1½ cent stamps in letters although the increase of the United States postage from two cents to Canada from 2 to 3 cents was made in June last.

Canada has not had a stamp of fractional denomination since 1912 but a ½-cent postage rate on certain types of reply cards used by commercial houses for the convenience by the sale of such cards with the postage rate paid by the manufacturer on them. These cards can only be purchased in the Post Office in large lots and on a special permit.

HORN IN WALKING STICK IS SOUNDED

Southampton, England (CP)— A tooting "pedestrian" has appeared in the streets of Southampton. Fixed in his walking-stick is a small but very noisy motor horn, on which he sounds warning to motorists and cyclists that he is about to cross the road.

The world's oldest book is said to be a recently discovered stone in China. It contains of seventy-eight wooden leaves, fixed together with string, and dates back to 180 B.C.

PALE AND SICK, BUT DIDN'T KNOW WHY

So she went from bad to worse. But Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic) brought her back to health.

"A FEW years ago I was pale, sick and weak before I was married," writes Mrs. Fred McCleod, Desbarats, Ontario, "I was ailing for two years. I lost my weight, I didn't know what was wrong with me, but some parents, at that time, thought young people should never be sick. I had no blood, and was so pale! If I went upstairs I would have to sit down when I reached the top. Finally a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills ... I took them, and had the color come back to my cheeks, and I looked myself again."

"I looked myself again." (Sgd.) Mrs. Fred McCleland.

There is a scientific explanation for the remarkable health-restoring power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills (tonic). The iron and other elements in them increase the amount of hemoglobin or oxygen-carrying agent in the blood. This has been proven by official hospital tests.

The increased oxygen re-vitalizes the human body as a draft of air kindles a fire. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills bring new health—better appearance —greater happiness.

Go to a drug store today and get a supply of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Take them as directed. Be sure to say "Dr. Williams'" so that you will get exactly what you want. 50 cents a package. It

MEDICAL BOOK NO DUPLICATE

McGill Students Issued New Journal On Medical Faculty

Montreal, Que. (CP) — The first issue of the McGill Medical Undergraduate Journal published by students in the faculty of medicine has recently made its appearance, and is the first publication of the kind to count of the McGill Medical School that has been issued. The journal has been made to copy or usurp the place now held by the established medical journals.

Editorial in the publication states it is hoped that a definite plan of operation may be followed throughout the year. "With this end in view," the text issue, as far as possible, will publish a symposium on the various special subject, as this, the first issue, attempts to deal as completely as possible with systems of undergraduate education. The reception with which these media will determine, in the main, the number it is worthy of continuance."

QUEBEC DOWN IN MEDICINE

Lack of Leadership Seen in Provincial Health Service

Montreal, Que. (CP)— Lack of official leadership in the field of industrial medicine in the province of Quebec was criticized by Dr. Frank G. Pedley, assistant professor of industrial hygiene at McGill University and director of Federated Charities, before the Quebec Social Insurance Committee here recently.

In the realm of general public health, Dr. Pedley stated, there was little doubt that the unsatisfactory public health services but in matters dealing with the health of thousands of industrial workers there was no official leadership whatever. Any progress in the reduction of the serious economic losses due to industrial workers could be expected a bureau of industrial hygiene was created and properly staffed. The activities of this body would include factory inspection, laboratory and field investigation, education of the employer and the employee in the matters of health, and also the initiation of legislation, declared Dr. Pedley.

Occupations could be tabulated according to their healthy or unhealthy character, Dr. Pedley said. Mortality in the various industries pointed to certain conclusions definitely. Some of the industries have especial hazards attached to their work, the healthiest being that of farming, which is followed by that of clergymen, according to British statistics. Industrial workers as a whole have a much higher mortality than those of the farm, Dr. Pedley pointed out.

Will Direct That Rare Script He Priced At $100,000 Be Sold

New York, Nov. 23—Wilfrid M. Voynich, international authority on rare manuscripts, who was in business as 33 West Forty-second St., and his wife, Ethel Lilian Voynich, appraised at $152,784 gross and $107,-784 net, left $100,000 net. The rest was his value of his business, $115,-911, which was formed in 1902, was good-will because it depended on Mr. Voynich's experience and acquaintance. The business had less than $4,036 in the three years preceding the death on March 19, 1930.

The appraisal discloses that the late Voynich cipher, upon which Mr. Voynich placed a value of $100,000 and for which he appointed a committee of experts to pass upon its value, has not been sold, tion, has not been disposed of because of the difficulty of establishing its historical connection. Mr. Voynich in his will named his friends Dr. William Warner Bishop of University of Michigan, and Professor John Matthews Manly of the Department of the University of Chicago, his wife, Ethel M. Voynich, and his business associate, Anne M. Rice as the committee to act. He also directed that each was to receive $3,000 from the selling price if the manuscript was appraised at $150,000.

The most valuable article in Mr. Voynich's collection was the "Alchemic" manuscript, which he bought for $37,800. His will directed that the cipher manuscript should be sold separately and that the balance be disposed of at auction "not in this country, where the books will be measured" but at Sotheby's in London.

Mr. Voynich left 60 per cent. of his realty to his widow, 20 per cent. to his wife, and 60 per cent or $34,236, to Miss Nill. She received $1,000 and Prof. Rowley, widow of Professor William A. Newland of the University of Pennsylvania, should receive 10 per cent. of the net proceeds of the sale of the manuscript when it is sold. The first attempt to deal at once completely as possible with systems of undergraduate education. The reception with which these media will determine, in the main, the number it is worthy of continuance."

DIALECTS MUST BE PRESERVED

LONDON (By The Canadian Press)—"Save the dialect of England" is the cry of the British drama League. The League has no love for "correct" English, and declares local dialects should never be lost. Instead they should be encouraged during a rapid levelling process. For this the League plans much of the blame on the British Broadcasting Corporation, which it accuses of introducing into our villages a mongrel English which is neither "standard" nor local.

The League suggests that grandparents should be made, if possible, to read aloud to their children, and that a regional survey should be conducted of dialect throughout the British Isles. Against these views of the British Drama League it is urged that the English language remains very much alive—that like a tree it is never static, and never arrested by full growth. This process began centuries of years before the B.B.C. or elementary education came to undertake it.

CRITICISM OF DISCIPLINE

By Constance Cameron

It seems to be a humble thing to watch the other fellow go the round, while we stand by and offer suggestions and mentally, if not orally, criticise his method of renewal.

I think we find this particularly true in the case of children are concerned. It is so easy to tell a mother what she should have done or how she could have done it—in the light of results, of course.

Through an interested observation which has extended over years, I've come to the conclusion that there are many times the chief offenders when it comes to telling mothers how the children should be governed, by a fussy observer, who makes Mary and Bobby mind basely if they stagger.

Well, I've met a few fathers who, through a lack of the latter's understanding, a more just viewpoint and better discipline over the children than the mothers have. But on the whole, I feel that the motto remains a pretty good one and that Father would fail—if confronting from a day of rearing a valuable wax with one hand and grabbing a dangling telephone with the other, a day of starting many jobs only to be stopped by the necessity of putting babies on a skinned knee, to a wide awake brat, to find a cookie out of the jar, to restore to peace and happiness among a half dozen fighting, yelling children, to quell the leader in and persuade him that he really hasn't time to bother about to stop shivering from a hurried visit to the bathroom in at the back door which was locked.

Yes, it seems like a long string of things, but there is a long string of them, and the mother who can keep her head and her temper during and day is no mother of a child or two. And if she does she deserves to be awarded the semblance of a smile or any hint of a thank you. I say it's a wonder of a lot more than he'd do under the circumstances.

To the father who repeats, "I'd never do it that way," I say that's how he'd have to. I offer the following as a few days' vacation for mother while the father puts into what he would do with them, while he is on the job, and I'll guarantee, facetiously as a mother does every day in the year.

NO EVIDENCE IS OFFERED BY CROWN

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., Nov. 21 —Arrested recently in connection with alleged Communist activities here, four men were released on the charges of vagrancy in police court this morning as the prosecution said no evidence was submitted by the crown. The men, it is said, were taken custody after they had refused to identify themselves or to raise money for the defence of the Communists recently convicted in Toronto.

PLAYING OTHERS AT THEIR OWN GAME

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 21.— Hugh Hayes, member of the executive of the Hamilton Liberal Association, died yesterday from injuries received when he was struck by a motor car while crossing the road on his way home from work early after he heard that a verdict was on foot to fine him $25.

He was playing the other fellow at their own game," he said, "and the complaint had been made in such right to attend the meeting at those hights as follows."

REARED FROM BIRTH AS GIRLS

"Boys" Ask Court to Designate Their Sex

ANDERSON, Ind., Nov. 21. — Two fully grown young men who have always had been reared from birth as girls, have applied for a judicial decree officially designating them as men.

The brothers, Marion Lee and Geneva Armstrong filed a petition in the circuit court asking permission to assume the Christian names of Marion and Glenn. In effect, attorney said, the action included the court to designate their sex as masculine.

The story was that their mother, who had six sons, longed for a daughter and consequently reared the two boys as girls until her death. The brothers said it was only recently that they dressed them in feminine clothing to satisfy her maternal craving. Until their mother's death, they said, they ago the two boys had never worn feminine clothes.

Some of the more intimate friends of the family were aware of their dual life, but there were others who actually believed them to be girls.

Madoc

Madoc, Nov. 20 (by mail) —The funeral of the late Joseph H. Brady was held on Thursday afternoon, November 12th, 1931, from the Standard Church, the Rev. G. Chilford Price officiating. There was a large attendance from Madoc and vicinity. Rev. W. Rivers of Trinity United Church, Madoc; Rev. Mr. Tomlinson, Standard Church, Ivanhoe and Rev. Mr. Slingerland, (Evangelist of Eldorado, assisted in the service. A vocal selection was rendered by the Rev. and Mrs. Tomlinson during the services.

Mr. Joseph Brady passed from this life to his eternal reward on Tuesday morning, November 10th, after a long and painful illness, at the age of sixty-one years. He was born a few miles east of Madoc, and for many years had been a resident of Madoc village. He served seven months in the Forestry Battalion in the Great War, in which his sister son, Russell, fell on the battle field. He was widely known throughout Madoc and vicinity and was warmly regarded by a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Brady had been in very poor health for over a year and during that time had been a great sufferer, but has been confined to his bed only about six weeks. He suffered intensely toward the last.

To mourn his loss besides his bereaved widow are two daughters, Mrs. Wm. Parks, of Madoc, and Mrs. Spencer, of Bradford, Ontario, one son Arthur, at home; three sisters Mrs. Rose, of West Hill Ont., Mrs. Cayzedall, Flint, Michigan, and Mrs. Conley, of Madoc; and three brothers, Andrew and Samuel, both of Bridgeford Mashoda, and Robert, living near Madoc.

Interment was made in Lakeview cemetery.

The well drilling business of Adams and Taylor has been taken over by J. H. Adams and son of Madoc.

The Presbyterian W.M.S. held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. R. Hallinan. Mrs. Marshall conducting the meeting in the absence of the president.

After devotional exercises, a splendid bale of clothing valued at $200 was reported sent to Saskatchewan. Mrs. Sharp gave a talk on Stewardship and the beautiful poem on "Opportunity" was read by Mrs. O. Wright.

Among those attending the District Meeting and School of Instruction of the Rebekah Lodge held in Belleville last Tuesday afternoon and evening from Oakdale Rebekah Lodge, Madoc, were Mesdames A. J. Watson, P.N.G.; D. Tanner, P.N.G.; N. Embury, P.N.G.; M. Wellman; P.N.G.; Smith; P.N.G.; Mrs. A. McBain, P.N.G.; J. Morrison, P.N.G.; M. Goldsmith; Mrs. M. Smith; W. Hill; M. Moon; Misses A. Smith, M. Wadsworth and F. Stewart, Mr. Wm. McBain and Mr. Bert Bailey.

Mrs. C. H. Whylock attended the Area Convention at Belleville on Thursday and Friday as delegate from the Madoc Women's Institute. Mrs. T. L. Bird, Mrs. Whylock, District Secretary for North Hastings was also in attendance as chairman of the Standing Committee on Education.

At the November meeting of the W.C.T.U. for Madoc and district held at the home of Mrs. Mackintosh in Madoc, the winners of Provincial prizes for temperance essays, Jean Nickle and Temperance Poster, Cecil Taylor, were awarded the cheques presented to them by the Provincial W.C.T.U. for the same. Mrs. George Harris addressed the meeting regarding the necessity of warning and educating the people regarding the increase of the facilities for obtaining liquor.

On Monday evening last a very interesting meeting was held in the Learge room in Trinity United Church when a large audience enjoyed the debate in which members of the young people took part. The devotional exercises were conducted by the president, Mr. C. R. Johnston, after which Miss Darrell, convener of the Christian Fellowship Department, introduced the program of the evening.

Helen Welman rendered a vocal solo, and Phyllis Bird played a piano selection, after which judges were chosen for the debate, namely, Messrs Jas. Irwin, G. R. Johnston and Mrs. Vaughan Jack.

The subject of the debate was: "Resolved that war is a greater evil than the League Traffic." The affirmative was upheld by Grace Travers, Aileen Kelly and Clarence Hale, while the speakers for the negative were Edith Hagerr, Hannah McKeone and Della Plane. All the young people did well and brought out so many good points that the judges found the margin of superiority very small. Mr. Irwin, in reviewing the debate and announcing the decision, said that some of those taking part would surely be prominent in the future and that the affirmative had won by one-third of a point.

While the judges were out, the League enjoyed singing a number of hymns and before closing the meeting, the leaders received thanks to those taking part in the debate and to the judges for their services. The general opinion seemed to be that there should be more of such evenings.

SHORE GAS GRANTED THURLOW FRANCHISE

Thurlow Township Grants Franchise to Ontario Shore Gas Company by 620-17 Vote

In Number of Polls No Votes Were Registered Against Bylaw—Scattered Opposition Restricted to Seventeen Votes—Fine Weather Brings Out Large Vote—Much Interest in Gas Franchise.

The vote in the Township of Thurlow yesterday on the by-law to authorize the granting of a gas franchise to Eugene G. Lang, on behalf of Ontario Shore Gas Company Limited resulted in 620 votes being polled for the by-law and only 17 against. In three of the polling subdivisions, Town Hall, Connaught, Gosnell's Hall, Foxboro and Dunnage Hall, Plainfield, no votes whatever were polled against the by-law. At three other polls only one vote in each case was polled against the by-law. Compared with the vote in other municipalities a large vote was polled in Thurlow due to the fine weather and to the interest in the by-law aroused by the public meeting at Canniffton last Friday evening, when a number of prominent citizens and officials of Thurlow and Belleville addressed the meeting and the by-law was fully discussed and explained. It is understood that of the several elections that have been held in the Central Ontario District on the question of granting a franchise to Ontario Shore Gas Company Limited, the ratio of over 33 to 1 attained in the Thurlow vote is the highest ratio or percentage yet recorded.

THE VOTE IN DETAIL FOLLOWS:

SNOW IN N. D.

Winter Entrenched in West, Mercury Below Zero

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 24.—Some high points of weather history are in the making. A continental battle ground between the elements of winter and summer continued today.

New high November temperatures in the east, abnormal rainfall in the middle west and more and freezing temperatures in much of the west were reports of a disputed and Thanksgiving ray of 1931.

Flowers bloomed at Cleveland and Toledo instead of the usual crop of fruit was being harvested thereabouts. Smudge pots burned all night in the belt of California as orchardists met the hazard of freezing temperatures.

NIGHT PLANE TRIP FATAL

Two Men Die and One is Seriously Injured in Accident

Latrobe Pa., Nov. 24.—A moonlight airplane flight resulted in the death of two men and the serious injury of another here early today, when the ship, being landed by Pilot Lou Strickler, in the dark, crashed into the Latrobe airport.

Robert Penistone, 34, Latrobe, and Phillip Kline, 25, were killed, and Allan Prether 31 also of Latrobe, suffered cycling of a broken head and a fractured skull in a hospital here.

The men were "taking turns" riding with Strickler, police said. The local airport has only minor lighting facilities and Strickler, landing by the light of the moon and the headlights of several automobiles failed to see the ground in the path of the plane.

Airport attaches quoted Strickler as saying that he was about to land with Joe Roddy, companion of the three victims, he felt that his plane had hit something. He "gunned" again. Looked out over the open airport and could see nothing wrong. Then he landed.

The mangled bodies of Penistone and Duffy were found a distance from where the plane struck them.

Strickler has been operating for two years as a private pilot.

Flowers, Fruits Instead of Early Winter Snows

Comparison of Weathers of Present Year and One Year Ago

JUNE WEATHER

On November 27, one year ago this week, a heavy fall of snow over all Manitoba, from the Yukon, claimed the life of one person, crippled traffic on all roads, created thousands of dollars worth of damage, and drove thousands of pleasure motorists dropping with monotonous regularity into the ditches below zero line had been reached, where it has wavered and generally lower for days. Two days later the 20 degrees of the same storm developed Belleville in its icy fold, piled snow in foot deep drifts on the side streets and caused coal dealers to rub their respective hands in joy, small boys to resurrect bob sleighs and dealers in furs to run extra advertising.

This past week Belleville has basking in weather more comparable to mid June than the last week of November. From the counties and the rural parts of the country comes reports of snakes being seen crawling over the snow, butterflies fluttering over and around blooming rose bushes, men and boys swimming in the waters of the lake instead of their accustomed trusty, berries and other products and plantlings budding forth on suddenly lawns. Truly California is not the only state in the union where one may sleep in the open in November.

The mercury stands at 62 this afternoon, 50 degrees being the low.

Rain Coming

Toronto, Nov. 24 (CP)—Ontario today continues to bask under the recent mild November weather with the temperature hovering around the 60 mark to bring the entire province.

The mild weather has been general from Port Arthur to Ottawa while the Western Provinces have been comparatively warm. A heavier with snow reported in several districts.

Tonight the weather man foresees rain, and a possible frost in the springlike atmosphere with the words "becoming cooler" included in the forecast. Rain is welcome from rural districts all over the province, some reports say, for lovers of all kinds blooming outdoors and the sap running in the trees as in the spring.

In some quarters danger is apprehended from this as it is pointed out, a sudden heavy frost might cause irreparable damage.

Boy Claims 3 Millions

New York, N.Y., Nov. 24 —A 13-year-old schoolboy, heir to $3,000,000 entrusted from Great Britain on the Leviathan last night to claim his fortune.

His name is Ian Casimir Lewanhaupt, great grandson of Dr. Clinton Hastings, a pioneer San Francisco lawyer and founder of Hastings Law College. The lad's income is now about $25,000 a year and he is reportedly granted him an additional $1,000 to finance his trip here. He said he was going immediately to the Bellevue Hotel and said that his father be appointed his legal guardian.

DOG'S BARKING IS FIRE ALARM

Farmer Wakened to See Blaze in His Barn

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 24— The barking of a dog which awakened Clifford Almore, enabled the latest mysterious barn fire in Brant county. This latest fire, which completely destroyed a large barn owned by Mrs. Rhoda Almore, member of Clifford Almore, with a loss ranging up to $8,000, occurred early this morning. At about one hour Clifford Almore was awakened by the excited barking of his dog and looking out of the window of his bedroom saw what looked like a light in the barn he at once sounded the alarm, awakening his mother and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Almore, who occupied another part of the house, and worked the farm.

POLICE PROBE RAIL DEATH

Identification of Victim at Port Hope is Almost Certain

The identification of the man, whose mangled body was found Monday on the railway right of way at Port Hope, has not yet been positively established but information received so far has caused the Belleville and district to entertain the belief that the man was an itinerant who left here some time old odd jobs in the city and lately worked on a farm in Thurlow township.

The description of the dead man is: age about thirty-five years, height five feet four inches, weight 129 pounds, brown hair, thin face, heavy eyebrows, hazel eyes and when mostly shaved. This description was today recognized by several people in the town who had been in Belleville and vicinity for some time. The man, who is thought to be a victim of the accident, left a farm in Thurlow on Saturday last and came to Belleville, telling his employer that he would return on Monday. In Belleville he informed an acquaintance that he was going to Port Hope to see a brother. When asked if he had a brother there he replied he would jump a freight train. The body of the left Belleville Sunday night and the body of the man in Port Hope was found on Monday morning. The man's brother in Port Hope has not yet been located, but it is expected that he will be found today. The Belleville police are keeping in close touch with the police at Port Hope and if the identification of the people will go from here to verify, if possible, their assistance as to the identity of the dead man.

PROBLEM OF SINGLE IDLE IS DISCUSSED

Mayor Assures Unemployed They Will Receive Care

AIR DRILL USED

Several Bylaws Passed at City Council Session

The council meeting last evening was enlivened by several tilts between a delegation of the unemployed and members of the council, when some pertinent questions were asked respecting the letting of work for relief purposes. The chairman of Public Works, Ald. D. MacMillan, was the member at which the questions were directed and he held his own with the delegation successfully championing his own cause. Length of time given some employees, why certain men were given allegedly more employment, why an air drill was used to speed up the work on the bulkley main and why a building contractor was given the contract to unload pipe for the water main instead of the men who got a city license to do that work, were only a few of the questions asked.

Work and Overtime

One speaker named a number of men, who, he said, had worked over the week-end, and why this was so and asked why this was allowed and one man was mentioned, who owns a farm in Hillier Edward County, is allowed to work on the city relief. Another man, who was employed by an outside contracting company, was taken on the city work after the work of the

SAYS LETTERS BY SAME HAND

A. Van Horne on Trial For Arson and Writing of Letters

Alex. Van Horne of Prince Edward County charged with arson and sending threatening letters to Alex Calnan of Picton today and late this afternoon the preliminary hearing was not completed but it is expected that it will be finished and committed for trial. M. R. Allison, Crown Attorney for Prince Edward County, conducted the prosecution and Fred A. Ward of Picton appeared before Magistrate A. E. Ked for the accused. The evidence at the morning session was given by Provincial Constable Durnford, Chief Biddell of Picton, County Constable James Lovelace and the complainant Alex Calnan, and Mrs. Payne of Beamsville. The police officers told of the evidence given into the alleged arson and letter writing and of statements made by the accused, he was arrested in Picton.

Mr. Payne has had 30 years experience in hand writing and in that of the accused, he said the letters produced were written by the same hand. There was a short afternoon session by Mr. Ward, the counsel allowing Mr. Payne time to develop his case, which will be discontinued at the morning session. Inspector W. H. Lougheed, who is attending the trial today the press understands, has given evidence to be sufficient evidence to warrant a committal.

POWER PLAN IS BLESSING

Power Authority Predicts Results of St. Lawrence Plan

CANTON, N.Y., Nov. 24.— The St. Lawrence power development will have an annual output of nearly 13,000,000,000 kilowatt hours, which is more than the combined capacities of boulder dam the Wilson dam on the Tennessee river and the Conowingo Dam on the Susquehanna river and the Keokuk station at Niagara Falls, Delos M. Cosgrove, head of the New York State Power authority, said today in an address delivered here and broadcast. He said the dam planned for Massena Point would produce electricity equal to one-seventh of all current used in the United States in 1930.

Mr. Cosgrove predicted the power development would mean a great industrial revival throughout the North Country, especially because, he said, the electricity would be produced at an estimated cost of $9.11 per horsepower, giving the state "cheap power" in abundance.

He predicted many new industries would be drawn to the state, citing industrial growth at the Falls of Niagara neighborhood as an example.

Finally he urged completion of the dam and plants would give work to thousands and that more thousands would find employment in the factories and stores which would spring up once the power was available.

He saw the project as a blessing for hard times, too, pointing it would provide a broader basis for future prosperity. The state's share of the cost would be $100,000,000, he said, shouldering some of the burden now carried otherwise.

He told the farmers there would be new and bigger markets close at hand for their produce, something the north country farmers have needed.

$75,000 WING DEDICATED AT Q. V. SCHOOL

Children Enter Room to Music of Large Phonograph

Inspector Clarke Refers to Part of Newspaper in Education

Queen Victoria's new $75,000 wing built for the accommodation of the future citizens of Belleville now attending that school was officially opened and dedicated by members of the Board of Education and other various trustees at nine o'clock this morning.

In perfect order, although it was only the second time that such a drill had been carried out, the children entered the new beautiful auditorium from their adjoining rooms and marching to the tune of a large phonograph, took their places in the various seats allotted to them, with the skill of old experienced hands. The same methodical prayer was then called by Dr. MacIlwrith who conducted the last chapter of Corinthians and who also asked the Great Maker to

SUSPECTS ARE TWO GIRLS IN MASQUERADE

Are Warned That Such Appearance is Not According to Law

Trenton, Nov. 24 (Special) Some of the people of the town seem to be on edge since the holdup. Reports are made on Sunday evening that two desperate looking gangsters were seen entering the east end of the town. The police investigated the matter and soon located the said "desperate" persons. More innocent looking people could not be found between here and Cuba- go, on questioning, than the two gangsters the fact came out that it was two of the young ladies of the town, one a Jekyll-and-Hyde prank. Nowadays a policeman must act as a guardian angel of the law but as a variety and style specialist, the police have found out that to appear in such costumes is not according to law. Thus ends the tale of 2 desperate looking characters.

Death of Mrs. A. A. Hayes

Mr. Albert A. Hayes aged 60, passed away at his home on West Street on Monday, Mr. Hayes has been ill for some time with asthma and dropsy. Mr. Hayes moved here from Brockville some 12 years ago following the trade of carpenter since coming to Trenton. A large circle of friends and acquaintances were shocked to hear of his death, Mr. Hayes is survived by his wife and six children, Harry, Morton, George, Mrs. Ernest Bell, Marjorie Hayes all of Trenton, Mr. Hayes belonged to the Grace United Church of Canada. The funeral will be held at 2.30 on Wednesday afternoon and proceed to the cemetery at Glen Ross by motor cortege where the interment will take place. The pall bearers will be Bert Campbell, Mr. Bert Campbell, Mr. Howe, Mr. Seth Cook, Mr. John Anderson, and Mr. Cliff Hyslop.

Miss Waldorf Dies

Miss—Annette Waldorf died at the home of her brother, Mr. Wm. H. Waldorf on Henry Street, on Monday. Miss Waldorf has lived with her brother for many years. Mr. Waldorf is the town assessor and many of Miss Waldorf's friends join in his sorrow. Miss Waldorf is survived by a brother and two sisters, Mrs. Jas. Reid of Toronto, Mrs. MacPhail of Trenton and her brother with whom she lived. Mr. William H. Waldorf of Trenton. The funeral service will be at the St. George's Church on Wednesday afternoon and interment will be in St. George's Cemetery.

Major Vyski, Divisional Young Peoples' Secretary of Montreal paid a visit to the Trenton Corps of the Salvation Army on Saturday and Sunday. On Saturday he gave a very interesting lecture assisted by colored lantern slides, on the life of Jacob and Esau. He spoke to Young People on Sunday on Heart Failure. Major Vyski is a very enthusiastic about young people and a fine leader to work among them. He conducted the Sunday service for Rosalie Kennedy.

The contractors are erecting a 6 ft. chain link fence at the Trenton Airport. Steel posts are being put up now and will be set in concrete base. They will erect about 1000 feet to the fence now, which when finished will enclose the entire stretch along the highway and part of the east side. A light will be placed every 20 poles.

Medal Ticket

Mr. Ralph Trull of Bayside purchased a ticket on the Irish Sweepstakes and has been notified that he has drawn 3 horses in the first to wins. Mr. Trull stands to win a fortune. Mr. Trull was born in England, but has lived in Canada since the first Derby to be run and was lucky enough to win $7,000 and put him 60,000 pounds. Perhaps history or luck will favor Mr. Trull in guiding horse racing will repeat itself.

The Canada Creosoting Co., which closed down a week or so ago, has resumed operations again on securing additional orders for ties and lumber. All the former employees were returned to work and will be employed steadily until after the New Year at least.

Mr. C. H. French and wife of Whitby, visited his brothers Clayton French of Trenton and C. French of Belleville, over the week end.

The annual golf club dance was held on Monday evening in the Masonic Temple. A good crowd attended, excellent music making a very successful evening of it.

Presentation of the cups was made, Mr. D. A. Wrena winning the club championship also the Parker handicap. The weekly Christmas Cup won by Mrs. W. B. McClung, Junior ladies, Miss Leah Blewett.

Last week the annual directors meeting was held, Mr. W. B. McClung being reelected president and Mr. Jas. Mc Murtry secretary. It was commended on his work for the past year. Mr. D. A. Wrena chairman of the greens committee. Mr. J. G. Sexsmith, secretary of the entertainment committee.

The course has been kept open and additional two weeks on account of the excellent weather. The players report the course even better than in the summer. The Trenton course is one of the finest courses in this part of the country, having a view of the river, the town and bay. Then on driving on the links you look on the Murray Hills which are superb at this time of year.

Mr. Donald MacKay will be the premier this member and will relinquish office after election day, November 28th.

FRETTS IS FREED ON HARM COUNT

The charge of manslaughter laid against Ross Frette, of Napanee, was acquitted on the technical ingroods at the suggestion of the Crown at the local police court held before Magistrate Mikel this morning. The charge had charged that, while driving a motor car he did cause bodily harm to Harry Liddle. Mr. J. M. Simpson appeared for the accused and elected to have his client tried by the next county of competent jurisdiction. At the conclusion of evidence His Honor discharged the man from custody and he was released on an indictable charge which was enlarged for one week.

The first witness to be called was Dr. Stobie of this city, who stated that he had attended the late Harry Liddle at the Belleville General Hospital on the evening of October 20th. He stated that Liddle was suffering from concussion of the brain, the right side of his skull to the left side of the skull. He also found slighter fractures but stated that these were more scalier lacerations except for a few minor-bruises.

W. S. Clarke, of this city, identified photograph of the scene of the accident. Mr. Clarke stated that he was driving his car to Belleville when Mr. Walter Evans also was called as a witness that he had marked plans and blue prints of the intersection at which the accident happened.

The first witness, who was present at the accident which occurred on the evening of October 20 at the corner of Trevelyan Road and the King's Highway, about two miles west of Belleville, was Mr. Earl Lucas, a chum of Harry Liddle, who died from injuries received in the accident. On the afternoon previous to the accident Lucas and Liddle had brought Littles' aunt to Belleville and taken her home about 7.30 p.m. that evening. Lucas stated that they were struck by a motorcar at the intersection of Trevelyan Road and the highway. LaRue swore that previous to making the turn he had looked behind and that no car was approaching from the east. He thought that Littles had turned out to the left and that just before they could the accident had occurred. He could not say what car had hit them or exactly what had happened as he was dazed from the shock of the accident. The Provincial Police identified all the photographs that were presented and Officer Campbell stated that he had investigated the scene and had the photos taken.

The main witness of the accident was Mr. E. L. Van Alstyne, of Toronto. Mr. Van Alstyne swore that he was travelling from the corner where the accident occurred, and had not seen the two cars approach. The first car started to turn to the left as the second car started to pass it. Mr. Van Alstyne stated that he had not heard a concussion horn and believed it to be the horn of the second car. He was sure that Littles did not put out his hand when about to make a left turning as he was watching and Fretts was in a perfectly normal position.

Traffic Officer Ryles was called and identified all the scene and also photos. Then the Crown presented a statement signed by Fretts to the effect that he was about to pass the car on the Dundas Ave. intersection and after hearing the horn and started to pass the car, suddenly saw the car in front of him he could not avoid hitting it.

Thurlow Case

The second case before Magistrate Mikel was a case of common assault against a resident of Thurlow township. His honor found the accused guilty and bound him over to keep the peace for a period of one year. The accused was also fined $15 and costs.

John Goodall, of this city, was charged with practising veterinary surgery without a license and upon the plea of guilty was given a suspended sentence for a period of three months.

A resident of North Hastings was up on a charge of selling liquor unsafe and was remanded for one week, to appear before Magistrate Casement at Madoc.

COL. ROBINSON IS HOME, BUT IS ILL

CORNWALL, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Absent from his home for three weeks, during which time his relatives and friends expressed anxiety for his safety, Lieut.-Col. F. D. Robinson, prominent Cornwall real estate and insurance broker, returned last night. He motored to his home from Toronto.

Outside of an admission that Colonel Robinson had returned, Police Chief Lalonde obtained little information from the missing man, should he be located here.

"Col. Robinson has returned but he is ill and cannot see anyone," a member of the family told newspapermen. He is suffering from a nervous breakdown and must have complete rest."

POLICE AID SOUGHT

Peter Quirk, aged 28 years, is wanted by the Toronto police who have a warrant for his arrest on the charge of having obtained a car by fraud. He is said to be fish carrying license number PA 215 and Imperial number 19306. The Belleville police department has been asked to arrest and hold this man, should he be located here.

BADMINTON

Members of the Garrison Badminton Club of Belleville paid a visit to the Trenton Garrison organization of Picton. Fine games marked an evening of excellent play. The Belleville teams were handicapped, however, as they have had no practice, as yet, in the Armouries being actively engaged for military purposes but were beaten only by a small margin, the score being 7 to 5. At the close of the games the party were entertained in the officers' mess, as only the Garrison Club of Picton can entertain.

It is hoped that at the close of the present annual meeting of the local badminton club, late in the month of December—the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club will organize a visit to the members of the local clubs have been invited to themselves since its inception several years ago, but only in this immediate district but in tournaments in Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa.

The party who went to Picton last evening was composed of Mrs. Mrs. L. Foxard, Mrs. C. A. Cameron, Miss Irene Keeler, Miss M. White, Miss H. Cooper, Miss D. Ketcheson, Miss A. H. Ketcheson, C. Ketcheson, Jamieson Bone, R. H. Martin, Mrs. P. M. Robb, Mrs. D. Hanna, L. Foxard, O. H. Scott and J. Fisher.

EXPECTS BIG CROP TRAMPS

Annual Pilgrimage To Eastern Seaport Threatens Trouble

Halifax N. S.—With the approach of winter, Halifax is preparing for its annual crop of tramps from central and western Canada. Every winter brings a fresh batch of these men, some looking for work on the waterfront after St. Lawrence and Lake ports are sealed up by ice, some trying to beat their way back to native lands in Europe. The serious unemployment situation in Canada at present means Halifax that this year's crop will be larger and hungrier than ever, and a plan is under consideration to provide a shelter for the transient poor.

It is a mixed gathering that drifts into the old seaport, from the lowliest tramp to the disillusioned artist and disappointed musician. They arrive in couples and trios, usually "riding the rails" with frequent stops along the way to replenish voluntary visits, sometimes forced by the police to board a brake van. While weather is warm in Halifax they are content to sleep in railway yards and sheds along the waterfront, but with the first nip of frost they head for the police station. Here it is their stories, repeated with humor and tragedy, are told before they are allowed to sleep the cold spot for the night on the stern stone floors.

One clergyman who late last winter provoked mirth when he told police he was an artist. They assigned him to a vacant cell for the night. Early next morning the self-mysterious looking stranger had gone, but on the floor of the cell he had left a number of marine sketches done in colored chalk with ability that startled a critic who viewed the picture later in the day.

Another fellow smiled into the local Y.M.C.A., one afternoon. Leering around for a while, he was the object of curious glances because of his ragged clothes. Later he sat down at the piano and for the remainder of the afternoon he held a surprised audience of young men who dropped their billiard cues to listen, not to jazz but to a medley of classical music that should not have been presented by anybody but a bewhiskered professor with fanny letters after his name. That night the wanderer slept in the police station. Next day he disappeared.

But the general run of visitors is the student. The Old Countryman who came to Canada expecting to find a land of milk and honey, travelled west without securing work and returned to the east hoping to get transportation back to the native heath. After unsuccessful attempts to get places on vessels homeward bound, these men often camp about in the hope that eventually they will be deported.

Discussing this phase of the local unemployment situation this week, Chief of Police Palmer told reporters he found a big crime wave in the city during the winter. "You can't prosecute them," he said. "People must pay, and men driven to desperation by hunger or do not get caught twice before committing a crime."

ANCIENT SLEIGH ATTRACTING MUCH ATTENTION

This gorgeous sleigh was built in Paris, France, in 1720 for a French gentleman resident in Montreal. It is typical of the period, with much hand-wrought iron work and gilding. It was recently presented to Mr. R. W. Beatty, president of the C. P. R., and is now attracting much interest as an exhibit at the Art Association of Montreal.

Progress of Work for Crippled Children Told

Rotary Club Hold Annual Crippled Children's Day

STORY OF WORK

Crippled Children's Day was observed by the Belleville Rotary Club Monday with a discussion on the work of the club among the crippled children of Belleville. The principal speaker was Chas. Symons, who was the chairman of the Crippled Children Committee of Belleville Rotary and has always been the leader in the work. Dr. Noel Diskins in introducing the speaker, outlined some of the difficulties and discouragements of the early days and paid high tribute to the painstaking and conscientious work of Mr. Symons in the hundreds of cases of crippled children investigated by him and given treatment at Belleville and Toronto which cured or at least helped the afflicted one.

"This Child, Toronto, and the Home," was the subject of the address by Mr. Symons, who in a very interesting manner described the work for crippled children, which was first undertaken by Belleville Rotary Club, citing "several" cases with their history. When Belleville Rotary Club first took up crippled children work great difficulties and active opposition were met. Parents refused Rotary assistance and almost ordered its emissaries out of the house. Acquaintances of parents of crippled children advised them not to permit Rotary have anything to do with their children, that they sought to send the crippled children away to be experimented upon by medical students, and other nonsensical arguments. Even the medical fraternity were not too cordial at first although now they give one hundred per cent co-operation.

Now, only three crippled children have been helped through the ministrations of Rotary but homes have been made brighter and parents have flocked up and taken a keener interest in life—all through realizing that there was somebody who cared whether they lived or died and were anxious to act as friends. Various instances were given to illustrate the gratitude of the parents, some of which were intensely interesting and dramatic. On one occasion while another member of the committee and himself were trying to fit a little girl of money to a long budget of Christmas gifts for crippled children, an annual custom of Rotary, the best they could do was procure five dollars short of their budget. They lacking the list again seeking where they could get more enough Mensa to make the budges balance when he walked a church of Prince Edward County with the request that they send a contribution from him of five dollars for the crippled children, saying that he had been watching the Rotary Club trying to get the money and much interested and pleased with the great good done. That may not have been the exact words of Mr. Symons, but it sure came mighty near it in the substance of the compaign and himself who had been valiantly trying to get the money for crippled children's Christmas gift appropriation five dollars farther than its extreme limit of elasticity.

Summing up the progress showed how the Rotary work for crippled children in Belleville has benefitted hundreds in Belleville and to a more complete cure, all with improved health, how homes have been improved and parents benefitted by Rotary contact in getting a new perspective of life and new hope and ambition.

CLERGYMAN HALTS SALARY

Lutheran Synod Secretary Shares in Effort to Meet Economic Depression

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—The Rev. Paul Andrew Klirsch has voluntarily relinquished his office as full-time secretary of the United Lutheran Synod of New York, in order that the $5,000 salary he is receiving, together with his rent allowance, may be available for religious education, "work of mercy" and home mission work in the 417 churches comprising the synod which includes New York State, Northern New Jersey and Long Island.

Dr. Klirsch's request was granted at a meeting of the executive committee of the Synod held on November 17, at the Lutheran Church House, 39 East Thirty-fifth Street, where the salaried officers of the synod have their headquarters. The meeting was held after the financial chaplaincy.

The proposal submitted by Mr. Klirsch read as follows:

"Desiring a share in meeting the present trying economic conditions of humanity, as administrative over head expenses of the synod, thus making available for the needy and work in the church the amount budgeted for the maintenance of his office, your secretary respectfully requests that he be granted a total leave of absence, and that he be allowed to enter the active ministry, accepting the call as secretary of the synod in conjunction with his parish work."

Mr. Klirsch was elected secretary for one year at a meeting in June, 1929, and at Rochester in June 1930, he was re-elected for five years.

The clergyman said last evening that so far he had no call to a church, but that as soon as he received one he would give up his $5,000 salary from the synod and the rent of his home at Lynbrook, L. I., and would serve as parttime secretary of the synod for no remuneration.

Mr. Klirsch has a wife and three children. He is a graduate of St. John's Lutheran Church Buffalo, when elected to the secretaryship.

EXPECT DEMOCRAT TO BE RETURNED

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 24 (By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent) — Five Democrats and one Republican contend today for the seat in the House of Representatives formerly occupied by the late Harry Wurzbach of Texas, Despite the fact the Democratic vote will be split, observers here believed a Democrat would almost certainly be returned to the 72nd Congress.

The standing in the House would be: Democrats 218, Republicans 214, and Farmer Labor 1.

PLAY BANDIT ONE KILLED

Shot Through Neck as Playmate Orders Her to "Stick 'Em Up"

ORILLIA, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Four-year-old Ruth Harvie of Orillia was almost instantly killed yesterday when shot through the neck with a small rifle, which police say was in the hands of a playmate, Earl Curran, nine.

Johnny Gordon, four, who was playing with the two children, told police of the shooting. Earl Curran picked up the rifle, a .22, and commanded his playmates playfully to "stick them up", he said. Then Earl is alleged to have pointed the weapon at them and pulled the trigger. Johnny was unhurt.

MONOXIDE GAS CAUSES DEATH

Major Alderson, Kingston, Uses Pipe to Bring Death

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—Carbon monoxide poisoning caused the death of Major Fred Alderson, of Kingston, according to the verdict returned yesterday by a coroner's jury here. Alderson's body was found late Sunday on a lonely side-road about a mile from an automobile.

He had attached a rubber tube 15 feet long to the exhaust pipe of the car and wound the other end around the steering wheel. When the engine was accelerated, the tube blown from the wheel, Provincial Constable R. Clark in evidence, he endeavored to replace it, Major Alderson was overcome by the fumes, he said, according to indications when the body was discovered.

He had received head injuries during the Great War, said Dr. Cromie, house physician at the sanatorium, where the major was a patient. He suffered from arteriosclerosis and diabetes.

The body of Major Alderson was sent to Kingston yesterday for burial.

FULL PARDON IS SOUGHT

Major Walker to Open Plea For Mooney's Release

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 24.—Eighteen years after Mooney was convicted on the preparedness day bombing that killed 10, was the goal of Mayor James Walker as he neared the completion of his visit to the Pacific as a "private citizen" before his old friend, Governor James Rolph, Jr.

The formal plea by Walker for Mooney's release will be made December 1.

Mooney's mother, Mrs. Mary Mooney, yesterday visited her son San Quentin prison, calling it a "life".

Arrival of Walker Marks the first session in the Mooney case since a year ago last summer when the state supreme court refused to recommend a pardon for Warren K. Billings, also convicted with Mooney of the bombing and is serving a life term in Folsom prison.

SIR JOHN APPOINTED GOES TO BENGAL

LONDON, Nov. 24 (CP)—Rt. Hon. Sir John Anderson, former undersecretary of state in the home office today was appointed governor of Bengal to succeed Sir Stanley Jackson, who relinquishes the post this month on retirement.

Sir John Anderson was one of the British delegates during to the British Civil Service. His duties ranged from the supervision of aliens and the protection of foreign royalty in Great Britain to the regulation of incomes. He had a distinguished career in the government service before entering it in 1905. He is a commander of the Legion of Honor and of the crown of Italy.

BANDITS OF CORSICA KIND

Prof. Adair Gives Interesting Glimpses of Napoleon's Birthplace

MONTREAL, Nov. 23—An interesting description of the political history, historic landmarks and scenic beauty of Corsica and studded with many anecdotes connected with his trip, formed the basis of a lecture by R. B. Adair, M.A., associate professor of history at McGill University, before the Montchanter Institute of Montreal Professor Adair's subject was, "Corsica, the Birthplace of Napoleon", and he illustrated his talk with lantern slides.

The speaker told of the delays attending the boat trip from Marseilles to Corsica when after being told to come back time after time, the crowd finally broke into the steamship offices and the staff then calmly produced tickets.

Referring to the bandits who inhabit Corsica, the professor stated that they were very gentlemanly, very cobbling and courteous and very rarely molesting strangers. Professor Adair explained that almost the entire trip through Corsica was made on foot, as the roads were few and far between. He then spoke of many interesting historical connections and recalled that if Napoleon had been born one year earlier he would have been a Corsican instead of a Frenchman.

Camping also had its difficulties continued the speaker for water is practically unknown and it is also difficult to find a flat place on which to make camp each evening. Several times, he explained, it was necessary to lie at an angle of about 45 degrees, propping the body against a tree to prevent sliding. For sleep on a rough mountain side is form where fires had probably been burning for 200 years.

The Corsican looks back upon the first parliament which was formed under the English as their sacred ideal of real independence. He suggested that the natives do not care for the French rule for although the country is very fertile there is no irrigation provided and no markets for their products. The Corsicans also served in the French army during the Great War and, the speaker intimated, are just recovering from their sacrifices and great sufferings during the period.

E. McG. Quirk presided at the meeting.

FAITH IN GOLD STANDARD

CAPETOWN, S. A., Nov. 24.—(Canadian Press Cable via Reuters). —Speaking in the House of Assembly that the prosperity of South Africa depended upon the gold standard and that the House of Assembly that opposed it had changed their minds in opposing the retention of gold as a medium of exchange.

Head On The Street

FRONT STREET SATURDAY NIGHT: Brightly lighted store windows. And the wet sidewalk reflecting the glare of iridescent twinkles. A car with a cardboard license plate. A lady goes by with wide hat tilted ungily over one eye and drags a reluctant off-spring past a toy-counter window. A police dog with head thrust out of a parked sedan window shows white teeth and slavering jaws in a menacing bowl at startled passersby. And then comes a man across the shielding bicycle against the shiny side of another new car and hurries away without looking back. A young lady going by expatiates loudly on the virtues of an absent boy friend. And her companion, a girl friend trills shrilly in a high falsetto laugh. Candy piled high on a counter; and the sparkle of ice in a rag on the assistant's hand. A stout woman pokes a finger into a soft marshmallow and waddles away. Oysters on the half shell in the window — and two young rustics pause in front of what they see. A man drops his Sunday paper on the muddy sidewalk, and swears coldly as he stoops to retrieve it. A girl wearing a green party dress, speeds trailing the ground, goes hurrying by with head in the air. An elderly lady unmindful of pedestrians stops in the centre of the sidewalk and shows another grey haired companion some bridge work which has just been completed. A lost spaniel sniffles eagerly around a store door for scent of his owner.

Near the corner three men complete a business deal concerning a car load of cattle which will be shipped some place on Wednesday. And the saunter of the three produces a small side book and pencil and adds up a block of figures while the crowds jostle by. A policeman standing near by notices the details of the passing car but the driver is wise, and speeds along. An invalid with eyes closed is slowly wheeled along and a young man stands on a nearby corner wearing a green party dress, and ends trailing the ground, goes hurrying by with head in the air. An elderly lady unmindful of pedestrians stops in the centre of the sidewalk and shows another grey haired companion some bridge work which has just been completed. A lost spaniel sniffles eagerly around a store door for scent of his owner.

Three small boys, one with steel-heel clicks on his shoes, go clattering by. And walk precariously on the curb edge nearest them. Further up a little girl with a loaf of bread under her arm looks wistfully at an electrically lighted doll house in a window. Passing by a man carrying a suit carrier, and his wife eager in apparent enjoyment now. An electric light bulb in a sign flares brightly for an instant and then goes out. A young man comes out of a store with arms loaded with parcels. A bog of what sounds like canned goods falls to the sidewalk and a young man hastens to pick it up. A dazzling smile from the girl and he raises his derby and hurries off. A down-at-heel and raggedy old man with a bundle under his arm and a week's growth of beard on his stubble of whiskers, enters a news store, buys a ten cent cigar and a financial magazine, and slowly saunters off in the crowd. The shoppers in the store and noses. Will rub a nose, or wash a nose and buy making up their daily receipts; and out on the curb of the sidewalk a line up of young men wait for them.

FASHION NOTE: Now they manufacture a face powder for the outdoor girl and it will stick in the color.

Those who are still under the impression that prohibition is on the wane in the United States may be disillusioned by a glance at the advertising on page 61 of November 21st issue of "Billboard".

An advertisement in another American commercial journal by a young musician reads: "Wanted—Young fellow interested in music. "Beer" single or fake double, up to heaven. Tux, toes and swipe. Can low down go to town and not noose. Will rub a nose, or wash a nose and buy Rhythm and how! Can join on wire." All of which sounds as if it could be very efficiently done by the prohibition era.

DID YOU KNOW THAT: A Belleville man was having his biography ghost written by an American journalist; the new music for television performers will be printed with luminous characters because darkness is essential in their studio; that there is another Belleville man who buys hundreds of snakes a year; that the reason you can skate on skates with sharp edges of your boot heels is that the pressure under the skate as you go along and the water really is what you skate on; that an elephant can swim out two of Oregon Lake week and end in at twelve dollars; that one young man from Belleville was playing "the big time" in New York under a different name; that you will soon be able to buy nicotineless cigarettes; that dealers very seldom stock a size six and a half but, and that the records say this weather is no warmer than it was a year ago!

SNAKES BASK ON SIDEWALK

Bleecker Avenue Walk Provides Warmth For Reptiles

An interesting scene observed late yesterday afternoon was that of two medium-sized snakes sunning themselves in the middle of the sidewalk on Bleecker avenue near Bridge street.

The warm sun had evidently given them the impression that winter had come and gone as they were coiled up quite comfortably and at peace with the world. One of them had recently dined well on some luckless victim, for it had captured as there was a distinct protuberance evident in its middle.

The reptiles were black on the back and head, with a vivid yellow stripe running down the under part of the head was tinged with two scarlet spots just back of the eyes. Both appeared to be still lazily off into the nearest hole.

Sac County, Iowa, raises more popcorn than any other county in the United States and probably more than any other similar area in the world.

ALFONSO

Alfonso looks lovingly back to his native land while the Spanish republican government brands him as traitor and passes his banishment when he is out of the country.

He is not the first king to meet his fate from his own people. Early English history tells of revolts against kings. The traitor is the one who lost out in battle.

Yet in spite of this English development went forward. The monarch who overthrew the reigning sovereign was at least a more powerful figure and a great administrator as witness King Edward Fourth as well as Henry VII. Passing from kings to the people, there is of course a difference. Will the many-headed republican government prove a greater administrator than the king?

Nations yet seem to progress despite the overthrow of governments though how they would compare with what they might have been is of course impossible to realize.

Alfonso, many believe, would not have suffered the fate of King Charles the First and Louis Sixteenth, or even the fate of the Emperor Nicholas of Russia, for Spanish revolt does not seem to have taken on the unreal sombreness of the Russian overthrow.

New York Times suggests that Alfonso could contribute one of the greatest scenes in history were he to walk into the hall of the National Assembly at Madrid, deny the existence of treason and demand a fair trial. Such a scene would be too much to expect, the writer comments, though it would make a Hollywood director's heart skip a beat.

RESEARCH

Money spent upon research is not money wasted but is the best form of investment. Research can best be carried on by government and industrial concerns in collaboration for money which is spent is often so large in amount that the private individual cannot see his way to carry on his experiments. And then the gains are always communal blessings.

Two German chemists have been honored with the Nobel prize and from reports of their work, it can easily be seen that what they have done has added immensely to the wealth of their country. German agriculture was saved in war years by the efforts of one of them in producing fertilizer at low price while the other has spent his time and energy in liquifying coal and in producing sugar from wood. Surely with how what experienced chemists can accomplish when they have the opportunity and the means. The laboratory is one of the greatest blessings of humanity.

THE PREMIER ABROAD

Premier Bennett is in England and it will be strange if he does not play more than a minor role there though this is a holiday on which he has gone across the ocean. The times are momentous and several to be, which are bound to have a very great influence upon the course of the future in recovery of the world from the depths of gloom and fear, over-production and whatever other woes from which it has been said to suffer. Premier Bennett is one of the spirits of the political and economic world at the present and may not only be able to offer something which will solve some of our problems but may also be able to bring back something of value to his native land.

SUPPORTING THE LOAN

That the wealth of Canada was in some measure going to be represented in the new National Service Loan is plainly seen by those using their facilities for assisting the purchasers of bonds by lending money on the payments, and the insurance companies the repositories of much of the wealth of the country have taken up a good share of the issue.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Ontario's growth in the past decade according to the recent census is cause for gratification because it means that Ontario will receive new representation in the federal government, namely eighty-two seats unimpaired. Ontario has a growth of almost half a million in the ten year period.

More than ordinary interest is becoming aroused in the forthcoming municipal elections as there are signs that a good number of new aspirants for office are coming forward. There are two votes at least to be taken—in the mayoralty field and in the daylight saving question, and the constant reiteration about the streets of names of possible aldermanic timber suggests a race for the twelve seats.

POSSESSION

By Aline Michaelis

We are groping after beauty,
We are grasping after power,
We are hungry for the loveliness
Which must wither in an hour.

Silks and satins, cars and villas,
Jewels, paintings, ivory
We are panting to possess them,
Things we touch and taste and see.

City shops are lined with splendors,
Pearls and jade for our desire,
Lights a-glint on grass-green emeralds
And the rubies' hearts of fire.

Yet the joy of these may vanish
In a moment, at a word;
They are less than wisps of sea-foam
By the tempest's fury stirred.

We are groping after treasures
Which will crumble in an hour.
Yet imperishable splendors,
Viewless, voiceless, are our dower.

ONE OF THE MEMBERS of the Sidelight Family suggests that great good would follow if the Saturday marketing and shopping day be abolished and Friday substituted. Stores could remain open until six o'clock and all business transacted that day which ordinarily is left until Saturday. Of recent years we have seen large city stores closing at one o'clock Saturday, also banks and other business places without injury to anyone. If Friday was substituted for Saturday as the big business day of the week business people could arrange for better week-end holiday rest. However, there's the idea, what do you think of it?

MOTORISTS, mostly young people, who anchor at the Bridge street curbs evenings, and sound their horn whenever they wish to attract the attention of some friend passing, or some girl they would like to flirt with, should abandon this practise. Citizens who are getting tired of having a blast go off in their ears every few steps on Front street are going to lay complaints for disorderly conduct. In the meantime policemen on patrol duty should warn these shieks that such conduct is not good form in Belleville.

HEARD IN A BARBER SHOP—Funny isnt it that a man who would beg your pardon if he brushed ever so lightly against you on the street will argue about something fearful if you so much as touch the fender of his car with yours in passing? I'm sure the difference is between walking manners and riding manners.

PARKING SPACE for automobiles is often scarce in Belleville particularly on Saturdays, but parking seems to be scarcer still in Greater New York where a survey revealed 123,000 cars parked all night in the open. Thirty colleges students were hired to do the checking and each area was checked twice from midnight to 6 a.m. for three successive nights. The total number of cars parked all night in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx was 123,460 of which 102,679 were parked without lights. Traffic congestion, of which auto parking is considered one of the factors, causes an estimated loss to the business men of New York city of one million dollar a day. Traffic congestion as we have it in Belleville is also a detriment to business.

NEARLY FIVE HUNDRED NAMES are now on the civic employment relief list for work on the corporation. The list is steadily growing and but about one hundred extra men can be taken on public works at once, which means that the man who is fortunate enough to get three days' work on the corporation this week will have to wait some time before his turn comes round again, unless considerably more work is undertaken.

NEW YORK CITY citizens have set an objective of $17,000,000 for its Emergency Unemployment Relief Fund. At the end of last week-ender of the drive over the sum of $12,108,000 was received in subscriptions, of which two million dollars was the result of a city-wide canvass directed by Ex-Governor Al. Smith. The first subscription was $15,000 from Miss Helen Clay Frick. There was one anonymous donation of $10,000 and one for $5,000. The Women's division of the drive organization collected $3,065,000. Times may be hard in the United States but there is still plenty of money over there.

Other Papers' Opinions

BOLD ROBIN HOOD

Folklore has ever been a generous well-spring of literature, which lasts long and spreads its influence far afield, even if the old earth at it does. And romanticists had this source of refreshment with joy, the more so in that the medieval lay breaks through drab prose and things modern and unreal into ballad ditties and a strain of cheery song. And such has been the case with the sprightly legend of "Bold Robin Hood and His Merry Men." Six centuries or more have passed since this gay party haunted the green-shaws of Sherwood Forest. Judging by the number of mighty sentinel oaks in that enclosure which are pointed out as landmarks of the days of sundry cornbread haunches of good venison, duly hanged up for sun-cure by Friar Tuck. Little John, Much the Miller, Will Scarlet and Gilbert-a-Green, it seems hard to believe that this harum-scarum band was ever enlisted. Surely a pleasant thought—just that and nothing more. Nor does any reader care a straw whether the tale of their existence be true or otherwise. It is good enough to be true. Among the Nottinghamshire Castle and Kirklees Convents are still in evidence, and at the edge of the park, not far from Huddersfield, the furze and scrub still grow around the ruins raised entirely which marks Robin Hood's last resting-place. And any Middle of the Nottinghamshire village of Locksley whether Robin was a real, living, and-blood personage. He will spon tell you that the famous outlaw was born in that locality, where he where about 1160 A.D. And this gentleman's claim is supported by the "Lytell Geste of Robyn Hood," which was printed by Wynkyn de Worde in 1493, then about any or all the questions of the period. Not upon the world concerning Lock-ley Hall or any other romance. Then again, we have Sir Walter Scott has in Ivanhoe given a niche in the rock. Indeed-strength stature to this chuckling chaplain of ... London Green forest, a man who could swing "a quarterstaff with the best," and after the good rew bow with any of them. Robin Hood's death and some others have had their out in upon this toothsome cake-Mat Mr. Green's version, the strangest opportunity? There is still room for amusement in this respect. Messrs. Wright and Grimm and Thorpe may say what they please about Robin Hood being a poetical abstraction, one amongst the mythological figures of the Teutonic people. But Mr. Stokely and Mr. Green have set forth other views and have gone to a great deal of trouble to ferret out some details which bear in a different direction, and we incline to their historic stamp.—Montreal Gazette.

NATURE LORE

While on this subject of bird migration, an interesting event is recorded which does great credit to the people of Austria and Hungary. Last autumn, returning south from their summer stay in northern climes, the birds of central Europe this year were caught in the grip of storms. Two were perishing from the cold and could not find the necessary food—the insects being buried under the snow. So the Austrian Protection league came to the rescue, declaring that though Austria was financially in difficulties, still the little visitors "should not be abandoned and to starvation." Accordingly, airplanes were hired, into which bird-laden boxes of the specially constructed cages, and then flown to Venice. There the birds were transported over the mountains in motor trucks, motor cars, and it was noticed after their flight that many of the swallows, restaining on the way, were straggling behind, made an effort to fly to their necessarily destination in south and east. This humane act of "one of the smallest of God's creatures" deserves to be put on record.—Hamilton Spectator.

BRITONS DONATE JEWELRY TO NATIONAL TREASURY

According to advices from London, Queen Mary, as mentioned in Christie's next month, a collection of gifts in the form of valuable jewels, rings, combs and oddments of personal adornment that their owners, mostly peoples have turned over to the good of the nation. This collection of gifts to the public treasury is described as "more elaborate" than any of the British people than whole libraries of letters.

The donors of those precious personal possessions, it is understood, covered the question "What can I do for Britain?" and the delight in this important people for the most part have been answered by the profounded sentiment of gratitude. This gratitude is reflected in the verse, "If England lives."

We emphasize this example of how cold hearted people understand by their own country and the English men of strength, humanity instances it is a case of the that was Canadians have proved the magnificent spirit thus displayed. It is a spirit which every people everywhere should keep in mind on the eve of the forthcoming domestic loan. The government wants $150,000,000 to meet the cost of public works, employment relief and other emergency purposes. The people have the money in the banks and elsewhere They will not be reduced to parting with their personal jewelry and heirlooms. There should be no question as to the loan's speedy over subscription. There is no such question.—Mail and Empire, Toronto.

"What are you cutting out of the paper?"

"Just noting the divorce of a man whose wife always went through his pocket-book."

"What are you going to do with it?"

"Put it in by pocket-book."

VALUE OF LEAVES

The annual controversy about what to do with the leaves is on, and the contenders are defending their positions with an exhibition of resourcefulness inspired by something more general than scientific curiosity. Many tons of leaves are burned in cities every fall. Most city dwellers see no wrong in this practise. Piles of leaves line the streets, and should be removed in the interest of municipal tidiness. What happens to leaves after they are hauled away is a matter of no interest to the family that has piled them in the street and seen their departure to the city truck.

The value of leaves in building up the soil is recognized by all people who keep gardens and farms. They add little to enrich the soil, but they improve its physical condition very materially. The value of a good carpet of rich, black soil opened to the sunshine when the state was stripped of its forests lay in the combination of leaves which the trees made. It was porus and spongy—a natural mulch such as is kept on fine lawns and gardens by raking and timely plowing. But it was no match for extensive farming methods and the rain washes. Most of it now contributes to the great fertility of Mississippi delta regions.

A mulch of leaves, if discretely used, helps sandy soils and gravelly ones. A good thing, it did not keep it to itself, but the next year it brought another pigeon friend and this year the number of diners was increased by two more — now there are twenty-two tame pigeons — fat and sleek which enjoy the bounty of Mr. Smith, at the open mouthed bags of grain, and a rich mixture of corn, wheat and buckwheat are the favorite feeds of these pigeons, who are "out on their own" — not being the property of any Belleville bird fancier.

Pigeon Spreads News of Kind - Hearted Merchant

Three years ago a Siegen located the display bags of wheat, corn and buckwheat, which Mr. R. J. Smith, for the greater part of the year, places on the receiving platform in front of his flour and feed store on Front street, a short distance south of Bridge street. At first the bird watched for a favorable opportunity and then swept down to the bags, but long before it came to realize that the "welcome sign" was hanging out so it made itself right at home and made its every move. No one was tempted to disturb it — in fact it made friends with the people of the store and finally became a sociable thing. It did not keep it to itself, but the next year it brought another pigeon friend and this year the number of diners was increased by two more — now there are twenty-two tame pigeons — fat and sleek which enjoy the bounty of Mr. Smith, at the open mouthed bags of grain, and a rich mixture of corn, wheat and buckwheat are the favorite feeds of these pigeons, who are "out on their own" — not being the property of any Belleville bird fancier.

Letters to the Editor

ONE IDEA.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

In the north-west corner of Belleville stands a big wedge pointing down rich in memories and dearer to more hearts than any other in the city. Its brick wall are darkened by time and dust. Its windows stare fixedly at the street. Its doors are all dilapidated emptiness pervades the building not long ago filled with youthful laughter. But it is a solemn thought, sir, to walk by it when whole city blocks were not long ago filled with life. Now it stands the storms which blow upon it, and waits for the day when its fate is outlook upon the passing years.

On the streets of this and many other cities, at the present time, walk men who would be glad to get a day's work of dispair, that look of "we do not know from whence our help cometh, we do not know whither we are going." But they do know that the cold winter will soon be upon them, that they have no work, no money, and consequently no lodgings.

Is it not a reflection upon our so-called Christian civilization that the last clause of the preceding paragraph had to be added? True Christian though people may be, they must look after their own and families first, and salaries will only go so far. But, if people would put their ideas for the good of humanity, the way they spoil their funds, and remembered that "in unity lies strength" many of the knottiest problems would be solved.

Waste is sin. The church's continuous fight is waged against it therefore, we may say, against sin. Yet all the while Christ stands vacant and unused in a building which could be used in preparation for a shelter through the long winter.

During the years of the war, Church and State united against the common foe which sought to destroy men's bodies. Now, the Church and the State are uniting against another foe, less deadly perhaps to the body, but one which seeks to destroy men's faith, men's souls. They are using every weapon at hand to fight this menace of unemployment, with its many tragic evils. Could not old Albert be opened as a shelter throughout the Winter, where single men or small families could be housed, with a good caretaker employed to look after the building?

EXPLORER'S STATUE IS DEDICATED

STOCKHOLM—A solemn and inspiring ceremony took place in the old Swedish university town of Upsala recently when a magnificent statue of Finn Malmgren, young polar explorer, who lost his life during the trade Nobile expedition, was solemnly dedicated. The Rector Magnificus of the University, Professor T. Unden, in his speech recalled how the young hero gave his life by remaining alone on the ice in order to enable his two Italian companions, Mariano and Zappi, to go on and to be saved. Malmgren, when hearing that his strength gave out, despite of the protests of his comrades, forced them to continue their march toward safety, waving Godspeed to them as long as they were in sight. Mariano and Zappi in a state of utmost exhaustion were finally saved, but Malmgren remained alone to die in the icy wilderness of the polar cap.

His heroism so fired the imagination and the admiration of his fellow countrymen that when a subscription was started to erect a monument there were single men of small families could be housed, with more than 10,000 persons responded. In this way a far larger sum than was needed for the statue was brought together. The surplus was made into a fund named "Finn Malmgren's Memorial Fund", the proceeds of which will be used for supporting the scientific research of which he was an exponent.

A sensational and touching tribute was added to the celebration by the arrival immediately before the ceremony of an aeroplane carrying Commandant Mariano, one of Malmgren's two companions on his last journey, who with deep emotion deposited a wreath on behalf of the two Italian comrades for whom the Swede gave his life.

UNEMPLOYED TO MEET WEDNESDAY

Owing to a misunderstanding the meeting of the unemployed announced for last evening was not held. The assembly however will be held in the city hall at 7:30 in the main chamber of the building on next Wednesday. The ladies of the auxiliary will meet first at the above mentioned hour, and immediately following the transaction of their business the men will occupy the hall.

WIFE OF THE SMASH-AND-GRAB THIEF: "Dad's had nothing but bad luck lately. Seven times he smashed in sptcklin's window, and yet he ain't grabbed a pair of glasses to suit him."

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

"I'll let Corbie tell the Gaffer himself."

"I will let him do exactly as he likes," his sister said.

He shot her a swift look.

"You don't want to be too easy on the blighter. Let him see that he's getting as much as he's giving."

Priscilla's eyes blazed suddenly in her white face.

"I wonder if you ever realize how utterly contemptible you are, Hugh," she said in a low voice. "He started on that honeymoon. She had ever spoken to him like that before.

"I don't know what the devil you mean!" he bluffed.

"I mean what I say."

Priscilla insisted passionately. "You owe it to me, and beg me to save you from the consequences of your own criminal stupidity. It is criminal, and I've repeated as he tried to speak. "You pay what you will go to prison if I'm not help you. And then when I do what you want, when I give up everything I want myself, you sit there and sneer at the man who has to be made to pay your debts. What do you think is going to become of you? You're not a child, and if all the rest of your life—"

Hugh started up, kicking his chair over.

"I don't want you to preach at me," he stormed. "You don't have to marry Corbie if you don't want to. I can go to prison, or blow my brains out, if you say so, it's one for me and two for yourself. You like money and luxury as much as I do, in spite of all the rot you talk about love. You must have led Corbie on pretty or he wouldn't have come up to scratch so soon. Don't preach at me, I tell you—I won't stand it!" And he banged out of the room again.

Priscilla covered her eyes with her hands, fighting hard for composure. It would never do to give way. After all, she had spoiled Hugh all his life, and protected him. What was the use of turning against him now? She had put the past behind her once and forever.

Jonathan Corbie was a decent man... It was not her fault if he chose to idealize her; she could not help it if he set her up on a pedestal. She would treat him fairly; she would give him gratitude and loyalty, if she could not give him love.

Brave resolutions, when the mercy of her heart was "Clive—dear Clive, dear Clive!"

INSTALMENT VII

It was characteristic of Jonathan Corbie that he said nothing about Priscilla to either his father or mother, though he appeared at breakfast the next morning unusually because he had been unable to sleep, and had been up for some hours. Both his parents were already at the table, Mrs. Corbie disliked meals in bed, though she was unconfortably sure that it would have been part of her role to take them there occasionally.

She had never gotten over the habit of her early married days of pouring out her husband's coffee, and seeing him off to business afterward.

There was no business to go to nowadays, though once or twice a week he went up to London to attend board meetings or other functions, the meaning of which she did not understand. Had she only known it, her husband would far rather she had stayed in her room and allowed him to read his paper at the table in peace.

When Jonathan came into the room neither of them answered his rather nervous "Good morning". A sudden new fear swept through her, but through his mind as he took his seat.

Had Priscilla and I ever 'get like this—if we marry?'

He could not imagine being himself to believe that the events of last evening were not just something he had imagined. Ever since daylight he had been wondering how he would find enough courage to wake up to the fact that Priscilla loved him! Priscilla again; what he would do if she calmly informed him that she had been serious after all, and had no intention of marrying him.

He moved restlessly and doubt and fear drove him to his fe.t.

"Do you mind if I go?"

Outcoors Jonathan breathed more freely. He walked the longest way round to the Moorland House; across fields and through a wood. He was trying to recall exactly what had happened last night, and was all he could remember were Priscilla's words to him:

"And if it is—only you money?... Supposing she said she had been serious? He refused to consider the thought that came to him again and again.

She wanted his money—well, she was welcome to it. It would give him happiness to restore the old place she loved. He looked around the neglected drive with new eagerness and interest.

There was age here, and tradition. It was not like his father's brand new estate on which the paint seemed hardly yet dry, so to speak, and which was filled with every expensive and modern convenience possible to human ingenuity.

And then he was in the house, and the dark library where last night he had found the temerity to tell Priscilla that he loved her.

It looked ever more shabby by daylight, and yet Jonathan recognized that there was an air of honest linens and dignity about it that did not exist in his father's house.

He stood with his back to the fire wondering what he could say when Priscilla came in; if she would allow him to kiss her again—if she would even expect it; how she would receive him.

He felt terribly nervous and awkward. And then the door opened and she came looking a little pale. But she smiled.

"You are an early visitor."

"Yo! early?" he took a hesitating step toward her, and she gave him her hand.

"I'm afraid I haven't slept very much," he apologized.

"No?" She did not ask why; but he told her.

It was afraid that this morning you would tell me that you dreamt—"

"Dreaming?" How silly only to be able to echo his words. She took her hands from his and moved near to the fire. "Why were you afraid?"

"It was too wunderful to be true."

She had laughed, half sighed.

"Don't flatter me so much," she said rather pathetically.

He stood near her, looking down at her with humble adoration. "You will make me?"

She laughed more naturally now, shaking her head.

"Oh, Didenus! Didenus," she teased him. "Don't you realise that every one will be saying what a lucky girl I am?"

He frowned a little. "I never care what 'every one' says," he answered rather bluntly. "People don't interest me."

"Oh, but that's foolish," she said lightly. She was afraid to let him be serious; somehow she had not realised that he was such an overwhelming personality. He like people and so many of you." She touched his coat sleeve. "I don't believe you've been here yesterday," she said half shyly.

The blood rushed to his face.

She turned her face away as he should see the sudden pity that filled her eyes. His humanity made her feel as if she was deceiving a child who trusted her, and yet, he must know, surely he must know that she could not love him? How could any one love a man to whom one was a complete stranger?

She said with an effort:

"I want you to see father some time, and tell him."

"Yes."

"And I suppose— what did your mother say?"

"I haven't told her."

"Oh!"

She had made up her mind to say so many things to this man, and yet now that he was with her she could not remember one of them.

There was a little silence, and then in desperation Priscilla turned.

"I want to be quite honest with you, she said, even as she had said last night. "I couldn't bear it if some day you told me I had cheated. Even if be truth—hurts, I want to be honest."

"You won't hurt me," he said.

She made a little helpless gesture. It was so much more difficult than she had anticipated.

"If you hadn't been a rich man, and if I hadn't wanted money desperately—"

She broke off, and he completed her sentence for her. "You mean you would have accepted me."

Tears rushed to her eyes: tears of astonishment. It seemed to her so horrible, so cheap; so different from everything she had wanted and hoped for.

She shook his head.

"No more than you will—when you see it."

"How can you tell what I like?"

"Perhaps because I see more than you give me credit for seeing."

She laughed. "What does that mean?"

She found him easier in this mood perhaps things would not be so difficult, after all.

A waiter had been passing through the cloud-filled sky, turning the countryside—and his—to gold. Priscilla fell her spirits rise.

She had so much to be thankful for—when she did not think of Clive. Her brother was right in her own future assured. Not that she cared a great deal for that. She had never found the joke she would have had Jonathan believe; there had always been a beggy of worry and striving and uncertainty; a beggy which this man staking contentedly beside her would be able to banish.

It seemed unfair that money should be such a power in the scheme of things. And yet was it had the power to give her the only happiness she craved, and it was withheld. Next week Clive would have sailed for the other side of the world—out of your life.

"You are very serious," Jonathan said, and she woke with a start and a little laugh to say that at the moment she had many serious things to consider.

"Of which I am one," he suggested.

"Of which you are a very large one," she agreed.

There was a vaguely troubled note in her voice, and he said, struck with a sudden thought:

"You are afraid of me?"

"Afraid!" She considered the question gravely. "Perhaps I am—just a little," she admitted.

She walked on. There were in a deserted part of a country lane where the trees with their almost leafless boughs met overhead.

"I hope you'll never need to be afraid of me," he said, very earnestly. "I loved you when I first saw you. I would give my life for you."

She answered wistfully. "Some day you may change."

"If ever I could will be time enough to begin to be afraid of me," he said.

They walked back over the fields, and at the gate Priscilla stopped. "Don't come in with me now. Come to dinner to-night—if you care to," she smiled up at him. "You won't get such a good dinner as I am sure your own cook can give you, but you will be very welcome."

She walked slowly up to the house, her old weariness and misgiving descending upon her. Just now that she was alone. It seemed such madness; such a love dream with little reality while she had come in from her walk a little flushed, with eyes that were almost starry, and it was as if in a flash some one had passed a hand across her face, blotting out everything but a great dread.

Her lips moved, but no word came from them; and Hugh said with a touch of impatience:

"He's not staying. He's in a hurry —just come to say good-by. Says he can't even stay to lunch."

"I—see." Priscilla drew her hand from his, and began to fumble with the buttons of her coat. "I'll just take this off."

LOST 30 lbs. FAT IN 3 MONTHS

AT THE AGE OF 40

"I was very stout, and I have taken Kruschen Salts for 3 months, and have reduced from 218 lbs. to 182 lbs. (age 40). I am a hearty eater, and have always enjoyed my food. Why, do I have never felt any ill effects whilst I have been taking Kruschen."—W.W.

That is an instance of Kruschen producing without assistance. But if you say fat person will be satisfied with a half-measure. Just a daily half teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water before breakfast every morning—they can lose fat in just the same way.

It is what Kruschen Salts does— It helps to get the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fills you with a vigor and tireless energy you'd almost forgotten had existed—you get the youthful outlook.

As a result, instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment and letting flabby fat accumulate, you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and needed to do to keep you in good condition.

"I quite understand," Jonathan said quietly, "and as I told you last night, I am content to take the risk. I'm not a conceited fellow, I never thought—even with my money—that you would look at me for any other reason than because I am rich."

She cried out vehemently.

"Why will you persist in talking like that? Most women would be very glad, very happy—"

"I'll make you happy enough," he said confidently.

"Will you?" she looked at him with softened eyes. "I'll do my best, on she promised.

"I know." And again the little silence fell which to Priscilla seemed impossible to break with words. She knew must be spoken.

How much was it Hugh wanted? Three hundred—four?

At last she spoke, brokenly, her voice nervous and a little high pitched.

"I know you'll hate me, but—I want money so terribly."

She could not look at him now. She stood twisting her hands together, her face hot and ashamed.

Before he came she had meant to take matters with a high hand; to tell him calmly that he must pay, for what he wanted; to put things on a merely business basis. But with him standing there so kindly and gentle, it was not possible. It was as if all unconsciously he stood down her best weapon of defense.

"I can be arranged as soon as you like," Jonathan said gently. "I'll write to-day to the man who are your bankers—"

Priscilla almost laughed. Her weakness had forced herself to look at him, but she could not control the trembling of her lips.

"It's a great deal of money, Three hundred pounds—"

She had hardly spoken the words before she realized that he had expected to be asked for at least ten times the amount, but he only said:

"You can have it to-morrow if that will be soon enough."

"Thank you." Then suddenly she broke out: "How can you be like this? Why don't you ask what I want it for? Why don't you tell me to mind my own business?"

"Because I don't think so, and because I love you, and because in the future I hope it will be my privilege to give you everything you want."

Amazing eloquence for Jonathan! He saw the anger and agitation in her face and he said casually:

"Suppose we go for a walk? A breath of air will do you good."

Priscilla got a little sob.

"You're too good to me. I don't deserve it."

And yet she was almost despising him for it, she felt she could have admired him more had he said ruthlessly:

"I know you're mercenary. I know you're only marrying me for what you can get, but I happen to want you so I don't care."

If only he wouldn't look at her so humbly—as if he were not fit to black her shoes.

But she felt she could say no more. He knew the worst and if he was content it was not her fault.

"She said stupidly: "I'll get my hat."

What a courtship! What a farce. And for Hugh, who cared nothing for her happiness as long as he himself was safe.

Was she doing the right thing to help him? She had done it so many times in lesser ways, and it had been so unavailing. And yet how could she stand by and see him go to prison as he assuredly would if Dawson had his way.

"I'll get my hat," she said again and went out.

Jonathan stood looking out of the window. He felt a little confused. She was going to marry him—she had meant to be she was going to be one clear thought in his brain. The question of the money passed him by. Of course she want money—everyone knew that the Gaffer was practically penniless and he had so much to give.

He had given her more than three hundred; his mother's new car had cost him seven times that amount. And yet for such a small sum this girl whom surely she was worthy of, to call his wife, was willing to sell herself to him.

And he could make her happy—he was sure of that. Not just at first, perhaps, but some day—

INSTALMENT VIII

Strange that there was no other thought in Priscilla's mind for—or than of Jonathan. She was like a flame, suddenly absorbing Jonathan's heart.

Some penniless fellow perhaps—

His face looked almost ugly as he stood frowning at the garden.

He could bear anything but that thought. Priscilla should be happy presently he heard her come into the room and he turned to her.

"There is something I want to ask you."

"Yes?"

She had fought the smile back to her face again; she looked almost serene.

"I promise to tell you—whatever it is." But she had not dreamed that it was to be meant to be like.

"There isn't—is there—any other fellow you care for? I won't say more than me, because I know you can't care for me as I do, but is there any one else who has need of his money?"

Bluntly put, but Jonathan was no juggler with words. He felt as if his whole life depended on the next few moments and on her answer.

Did her eyes flash? Or was it his imagination that for a moment she closed her lids as if to veil them? Surely he could be sure she was smiling again.

"Nobody," he said. "I'm not a very romantic person."

"Thank God—"

He believed her just as he would have believed anything she told him, and the little flame died down in his heart.

She was free for him to love; to make her love him.

"Well, shall we go?" he said.

She was grateful to him for attempting no demonstrations of affection, though as she walked beside him across the garden his heart she was saying angrily: "Fool! Fool!" and then with real remorse: "But a kind fool—a good fool—too good for me."

Jonathan kept their conversation to personal matters. He told her about his life, how lonely it had always been, how difficult he had always found it to make friends.

"Even at school—and afterwards up at Cambridge. I don't think I'm a man's man, and as I'm certainly not a woman's man I don't quite know what I am."

She laughed at that. There was something so naive and boyish about him in spite of his size.

"You'll be different now," she told him. "I want you to like people. I want people to like you. You're too serious. You want to learn to take life a little as a joke—"

He looked down at her gravely. "Do you think it is?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders. "I try to think so," she said, then broke off.

"Yes, if you didn't?" he repeated.

"Well, it would be difficult to get through," she said, "I suppose we all have our troubles—"

"I hope that yours are over," he answered.

She looked up at him with a little smile.

"You're a very brave man, or a very foolish one."

They walked a little way in silence.

"This once used to be such a beautiful place," he said with sudden irrelevance. "I can remember when I was a child—"

"It's beautiful now," he broke in. "It's old, and I love things that are old. They seem to have something to tell you. Not like new bricks and mortar that haven't any history."

"But your home is so wonderful," she said generously. "Hugh says it's the finest place anywhere around.

"It all depends on what one likes. "Don't you like it?"

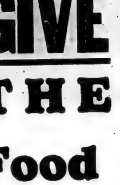
They walked back to the house in her own.

"I've been out—walking with Jonathan Corbie."

She knew she changed a little; he followed her into the hall as she spoke. "What a mistake! He caught her hand and detained her. "Clive Worston's in the library," he said.

If Hugh Marsh had been capable of such a thing as remorse he must have felt it as he stood holding his sister's hand and looking into her face, which had gone suddenly white. She had come in from her walk a little flushed, with eyes that were almost starry, and it was as if in a flash some one had passed a hand across her face, blotting out everything but a great dread.

Her lips moved, but no word came from them; and Hugh said with a touch of impatience:



"He's not staying. He's in a hurry —just come to say good-by. Says he can't even stay to lunch."

"I—see." Priscilla drew her hand from his, and began to fumble with the buttons of her coat. "I'll just take this off."

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 29. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As the voice died down, the raiders stood as though turned to stone. It was Tarzan's commanding the cannibals to their tents. The fear remaining Arabs drew together. Their sheik ordered the blacks to march. Instead they threw down their loads and rushed fiendishly upon the Arabs.

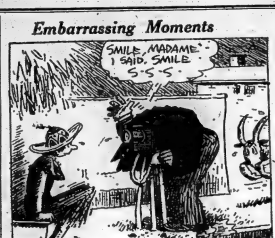
Instantly the scene became a howling mob of demons fighting with knives and guns. In ten minutes the last Arab lay dead. Then Tarzan showed himself. When the cannibals saw his mighty figure, they were struck with awe and admiration. He ordered them to return to the village with the stolen ivory. In fear they obeyed.

At the end of the third day they reached the village and were greeted by the surviving warriors from tearing the cannibals to pieces. That night the village held a big palaver to celebrate their victory.

They wanted also to choose a new chief. Busuli spoke from the solemn circle about the council fire. "Old Waziri is dead, leaving no son," he said. "There is only one fitted to lead us. It is the white man who has brought us victory." Then he sprang to his feet. With speed unlifted, he began to dance slowly about Tarzan.

DRAFT PLAN IS PREPARED

League of Nations Believes Resolution Will Restore Peace



Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 23—Japanese military intelligence reports said today that the situation in the Chinchow region, 150 miles south of here, was growing acute as the Chinese concentrated there.

Paris, Nov. 23—The League of Nations Council, at a short private session shortly before noon today, completed a tentative draft of a resolution it hoped would be acceptable to Chinese and Japanese governments as a basis for restoring peace in Manchuria.

Tokyo, Nov. 23—The Japanese government today forwarded a note to Ambassador Debuchi at Washington asking him to reassure the United States government that the occupation of Taitsihar and the crossing of the Chinese eastern railway in Manchuria did not involve any infringement on the nine-power treaty and the Kellogg anti-war pact or the League covenant.

London, Nov. 23—A Harbin despatch to the London Daily Mail yesterday quoted Japanese as saying that Japanese troops who occupied Taitsihar were advancing along the railway line to Koshan, which is 75 miles northeast of Taitsihar, in Manchuria.

Psychoanalysis as Aid to Study of Human Conduct

Know Yourselves Better — is Dr. Bridges' Advice

EDUCATIONAL URGE

Montreal, Que (By The Canadian Press)—Human nature is really a grand affair add instead of hiding it under a lot of sham and pretense, people should learn to build their lives soungcy upon it, declared Dr. J. W. Bridges, professor of abnormal psychology, McGill University, at a meeting of the Westmount Women's Club here recently. Taking as his subject "Psychoanalysis as a Means of Understanding Human Behavior," Dr. Bridges showed how it supplied the key to the existence of the Puritan, the Latin temperament, the political agitator, the woman who suspects her husband of infidelity and the friend who "forgets" to come to your party.

While psychology had considered man wholly as an intellectual reasoning human being, psychoanalysis had found him to be an irrational animal driven by instincts, emotions and desires and then creating "reasons" to explain his behavior, Dr. Bridges stated. As a result of these emotional drives he was often pulled in two directions at once and, in trying to harmonize them became enmeshed in mental conflict. Such conflict was very common and when it became too difficult it was tucked away into the unconscious or repressed. Thus the soldier in a dangerous position feeling fear and wanting to carry on, repressed his fear; or the woman dreading a dull social engagement, put it out of her mind and forgot to go.

Another discovery made by psychoanalysis was that people projects their own emotions to other people, Dr. Bridges stated. They felt that those they loved, loved them; and those they hated, hated them. In extreme cases the person who hated the world developed a persecution mania in which he felt that the world hated him. Again, he pointed out the commonly occurrence of the husband, angry with his office staff, who came home and was cross with his unoffending wife. Or again, the wife who suspected her husband of infidelity did so, either because she was unfaithful herself or because she had an unconscious hankering to be.

Psychoanalysis also explained political attitudes by the fact that people transferred emotions and attitudes from one subject to another very easily. The boys whose instincts had been strongly curbed at home, hated his father and his inhibiting agent. When he went to school he carried this antagonism to authority to his teacher and later transferred it to all law and order, becoming a politicgl agitator. So the conservative was the child who had adored his parents and not objected to their disciplines, or he might be the man who had never overcome the childhood fear of and aversion to the inevitable acceptable thing to admit this fact and people instead gave all sorts of plausible, but untrue, explanations for their religious beliefs, there political tenets, and their professional interests, Dr. Bridges averred.

"We should know ourselves better," said Dr. Bridges, "for the more that is brought into consciousness, the more can be controlled. We must accept ourselves and not kick against the pricks. If we have certain elements of the tiger and the ape we must accept them—they are rather fine things and it is wrong to think they are undesirable. We must also accept our limitations. And having accepted ourselves we must build upon that foundation and be ourselves."

Natives of Kwango, Belgian Congo Dress Up by Daubing Bodies, Hair

"Kwango, also known as Kwango Oriental, is a southwestern district of Belgian Congo, its southern most extremity deeply indented into Angola, Portugal's huge West African colony.

"With an area about that of Oklahoma and with 800,000 inhabitants, among whom there are only a few white men—missionaries and traders—Kwango is a region of thick forests and broad plains, the latter usually covered by tall grass alive with game that has brought many hunters to the district. The only mountains are those that form its north, east and southern borderlands, and a few inland peaks.

"Native villages are scattered throughout the district, but a large part of the Kwango population lings the shores of the numerous rivers, all of which are branches of the Kwango River, from which the district gets its name. The Kwango flows into the Kasai, which is a tributary of the Congo.

"Kwango natives are Bantus, that race of swarthy natives that is widely spread over Central and Southern Africa," a recent bulletin of the National Geographic Society says. "Chief among the Kwango tribes are the Balangas, who are among the most intelligent of Congo tribes. Now and then the Balangas the Belgians recruited some of the first native soldiers in their colony.

"While customs in neighboring villages differ, the Balangas usually ear few clothes. The loin cloth is the wardrobe of the men, while a Balanga flapper is fully dressed when she dares forth in a brief skirt of palm leaf fibers, not unlike the 'hula' dresses of the gent of Hilo, Hawaii. Now and then an aged native woman, reluctant to ape new fashions, strolls through a village street with a gown of bark cloth, made by soaking and beating the bark of a fig tree until it became thin and pliable.

"Often both the men and women daub their bodies with clay, including the hair, which falls in plaits about their shoulders. Women adorn their sticky tresses with ivory skewers and brass-headed nails procured from white traders.

PASSENGERS MAROONED IN FROZEN NORTH RESCUED BY PLANES

Aircraft went to the rescue of ocean travellers recently when the ship Baychimo was frozen in in the Arctic ice southwest of Point Barrow. This photograph shows one of the planes of the Northern Air Transport, Fairbanks, Alaska, which rescued eleven passengers and eleven members of the crew. Two planes made two flights each to bring out the party and portion of the Baychimo's fur cargo. This photograph shows the ship in the ice (marked 1) and the winter hut erected by Captain S. Cornwall and eighteen members of the crew who will winter on the Arctic ice.

MARLBORO JRS. TO PLAY HERE

Game Will Be For Unemployment Relief Fund

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—The O.H.A. junior league season will officially open Wednesday night at Belleville when Marlboros of Toronto clash with the Bellevilla squad. The proceeds of the game will go to the town's unemployment relief fund

The game between Marlboros and Belleville's fast and aggressive collection of puck chasers promised to be class and much speculation exists as to the outcomes.

Seats for the game are much in demand and the artificial ice arena is expected to be filled to its three thousand capacity.

In addition to the game at Belleville Marlboros have been invited to London early in December where a proposed game in aid of the million dollar hospital drive is planned. While definite arrangements have not yet been made it is altogether likely the Toronto team will make the trip.

150 TEACHERS PUT IN JAIL

Planned Protest Against Failure of Salary Payment

Mexico City, Nov. 23—Approximately 150 school teachers, men and women, who planned to march to Mexico City as a protest against not having been paid for months were in jail in the penitentiary at San Luis Potosi today and protesting telegrams showered upon President Ortiz Rubio, General Plutarco Elias Calles and Narciso Bassols, Minister of Education.

Word received here said the teachers are being held incommunicado by the state government at San Luis Potosi as a result of their announcement that they intended to march the 300 miles to Mexico City to demand their pay.

20 AMENDMENTS TO WESTMINSTER BILL

(By George Hambleton)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Nov. 23.—(Canadian Press Cable)—Government back benches rumbled again today over both the statute of Westminster bill and the land value tax, and it was intimated about 20 amendments to the statute of Westminster would be on the order paper when the bill comes up tomorrow before the committee of the whole.

FIRE DESTROYS SPRINGBROOK BARN

On Saturday evening at seven-thirty fire broke out in the barn owned by Thomas Moore, one mile east of Springbrook. The barn, a frame structure with steel roof was destroyed. Mr. Moore has been moving to another farm and had his crop stored in the new barn. No hay or grain was destroyed but a better part of a number of bags were burned. The house on the property escaped the flames. It is occupied by Mr. John Wicken. No cause for the blaze is known.

SO CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM HE HAD TO GO UPSTAIRS ON HIS KNEES

Here is a most interesting letter from Mr. John McGhee, Toronto, Ont. He says: "About 12 years or so ago I had a bad attack of Rheumatism and Sciatica. My feet and legs were so sore and stiff I had to go upstairs on my knees at times.

"Fortunately I heard about T-R-C's and decided to try them. They got rid of the pain for me and got me out of bed and back at work. Not long before Christmas, 1930, the rheumatism came in the small of my back and were very painful indeed. The first bit box of T-R-C's was sufficient to make me entirely better. A friend of mine in Scotland has been using T-R-C's with wonderful results.

"Deep-rooted, stubborn cases of Rheumatism respond faster and correct use of T-R-C's for a reasonable length of time; so you are sure of relief if you persist with T-R-C's. Repeatedly they have been safe, speedy relief from Acute Rheumatic suffering; also Sore Sciatica, stabbing pain in hip and thigh), Sciatic, Neuralgia and Lumbago (Lame back). No harmful or habit-forming drugs.

"T-R-C's do this—enter the blood stream and help your body throw off the miserymaking poisons which have accumulated in your blood. When these go, health and happiness return. T-R-C's are 50c and $1 per box at your dealer's.

"You owe it to yourself to try

ALFONSO STILL LOVES SPAIN

Although Banished For High Treason, Thinks of Native Land

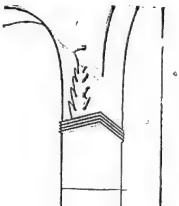
PARIS, Nov. 23.—(AP)—Former King Alfonso of Spain, outlawed and banished by the Spanish National assembly last week on a charge of high treason, has "only one thought—love for the Spanish fatherland," he told a reporter for Le Journal, Paris newspaper.

The reporter caught the former King as he was on his way to attend mass yesterday at the little parish church of St. Pierre D'Avron where his ancestor, Louis XIII of France was baptized.

"I am sad," Alfonso, "since I left my native land I am, and intend to remain a silent citizen. Not even an event affecting me personally will lead me to break this rule of silence I have imposed on myself.

"But", he added in a graver voice, "in exile, warmed by the fire welcome of the great and generous French nation, the queen, my children and myself have one and the same thought—love for the Spanish Fatherland."

CANADA GEESE AT KINGSVILLE



Kingsville, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—Jack Miner's missionary birds, the Canada geese, are flocking to the sanctuary as usual this season. The naturalist one morning recently caught 173 birds and tagged them with verses of scripture before they were liberated to pursue their way south. Several of these birds bore Jack Miner tags of previous years — 1925, 1928, 1929 and 1930.

MONEY IN SAFE ESCAPES BANDITS

Stratford, Ont., Nov. 23—After smashing a lock, forcing their way through a window and then smashing the handle and combination of a safe, thieves, believed late Saturday night and early this morning, failed to get any loot at the British American Oil Company headquarters here.

The safe contained a fairly large sum of money, the receipts for the week-end, but trace of the thieves has been found.

CONVICTED 40 YEARS AGO

Old Counterfeiter Back in Prison, Now at Portsmouth

KINGSTON, Nov. 24.—With a record of convictions that extends back more than forty years, Joseph Paquette, aged 74 years, arrived at the Kingston Penitentiary on Saturday to commence a seven year sentence, handed out at Windsor on two charges of counterfeiting. Paquette had pleaded guilty at Windsor to having counterfeiting apparatus in his possession and to making silver coins.

Paquette was first convicted of counterfeiting in 1890, when he received fifteen months in an Iowa jail. In 1897 he was sentenced to three years in Columbus Penitentiary. On November 24, 1900, he was sentenced from St. Louis to Leavenworth Penitentiary for ten years, and on January 31, 1911, he was sentenced to five years in Leavenworth from Joliet.

On Oct. 16, 1916, he was sentenced to fourteen years in the Alberta Penitentiary and was released to the Manitoba Penitentiary, March 31, 1923, and released November 9, 1923. On July 3 1923, he was sentenced to thirty months at Edmonton, Alberta and on July 13, 1927 he was sentenced to five years at Regina.

Before he was sentenced at Wind sor Paquette told the court he had been his purpose to earn an honest living but that he had found it impossible to do so because of his age. He is a native of Anderson, Ontario, he said, and had applied for the Ontario Old Age Pension but was refused aid because he had lived for so long in the United States. He had been told that he must live in Canada on the one meal per day he was able to earn.

Magistrate Smith asked Paquette why he had not tried to secure work.

"But when he was first caught counterfeiting four years ago," the prisoner's answer was that he had turned over many new leaves during his sentence.

TRADE BOARD WILL MEET

Important Resolutions Affecting Basic Industries will be Dealt With (Canadian Press Staff Writer) — Important resolutions affecting the basic industries and transportation systems of the province-by-the-sea will be considered at the annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade, to be held in Halifax on Wednesday and Thursday, it was announced by Mayor O. H. Blakney of Moncton, N. B., president of the board, will preside.

On November 19, K. A. Saunders of Halifax, secretary of the board, announced that 23 of the 65 local boards in the province had responded that they would be represented by delegates. Thirteen of these were from New Brunswick, eight from Nova Scotia, two from Prince Edward Island. He expected to receive many more notices before the date of the meeting.

Members of the Halifax board, of which Colonel H. H. Wickwire is president, will be hosts to the delegates. During the two days' session there will be a luncheon at noon on Wednesday and a dinner Wednesday night, at which distinguished speakers will be heard.

Among the matters that will be W. McL. Clark, secretary of the Canadian National Railways, will deal with matters slated for discussion at the annual meeting of the chamber in Halifax next month and subjects relative to Canadian business.

Resolutions to be considered by the Maritime board are being received daily by Mr. Saunders, and the committee appointed to draw up until shortly before the first meeting.

The Association Boards of Trade of Prince Edward Island has prepared a resolution dealing with the accounting of the Department of Railways and Canals in connection with rail transportation on the island and ferry service between the island and the mainland. From the Canadian National Traffic League comes a resolution on freight rates, while the Saint John board makes suggestions in regard to internal trade statistics, registration of the Maritime Transportation Commission, changes in the method of placing matters before the Board of Railway Commissioners, and several other subjects. A resolution from the Sackville, N. B., Board of Trade, expected to precipitate a discussion of the proposed new scale of the Tariffs of Chignecto. Aid for the fishermen in the salt fish business is sought in a report from Riverport, N. S., and the Glace Bay Board of Trade is presenting the problem of the coal industry for discussion. Amendments to the Bankruptcy Act are proposed by the Moncton Board.

LANTERN FIRES BARN

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 24.—A large barn containing the season's crops of hay and grain was destroyed by fire on Monday morning on the farm of Henry Deur, four miles west of Omemee. A shed and henhouse also were wiped out. The loss, estimated at $3,500 was partly covered by insurance. A lantern exploded and the fire spread quickly beyond Mr. Henry's control. It is considered, however, in releasing his horses.

Embarrassing Moments

8 Wayfarers Straggle Into New Home on First Night

Four Guests Arrive Early and Four Register at Ten O'Clock

Transient Station No. 1 under Memorial Hall was officially opened early last evening to the many guests who use this city as their temporary stopping place during their trek through the highways of Canada in their ceaseless wanderings. At eight o'clock there were four tired and hungry wayfarers; and at ten o'clock the total had reached eight, all stretched out on the long wooden bunks — washed, fed and absorbing the comfortable warmth the building provided.

On a gas plate in the kitchen stood two large boxes of vegetable soup simmering away and permeating the whole inside atmosphere with the delicious odor. On a nearby table stood two or three bowls of it ready for the next hungry visitors to make their appearance, while the light in the ceiling reflected a cheerfulness and comfort that can have been indeed comforting to those lads who have buffeted cold, whipping winds all day as they crouched above the bumpers or hung on with stiffening fingers to the grab iron on the side as the long freight thundered interminably into the night, and the weary hours passed until the next station was reached.

Some of these transients were well dressed. One or two had the appearance of men who had held good jobs in their time. Others of a type that had stacked the cards against them on that particular deal, and as if aware of that soup wouldn't do them any harm. All seemed cheerful though, and glad to be able to be there and enjoy the benefits of one night's sleep provided by the hospitality of Belleville.

Tomorrow is another day.

51 CHURCHES ARE ADOPTED

TORONTO, Ont. Nov. 24.—(By Canadian Press)— Fifty-one western parishes of the United Church of Canada have been "adopted" by eastern churches in connection with the emergency relief measures taken by the United church to meet drought conditions in the prairie provinces. In addition, the sum of nearly $20,000 has been donated or promised in special collections for emergency relief.

Announcement to this effect was made last night at a meeting of the National Executive of the church's board of maldonment fund, and the moderator, Rev. Dr. Edmund H. Oliver of Saskatoon, presided.

H. W. Ackerman, Belleville, R. W. Trevlevaren, Hamilton; and Rev. A. E. M. Thomson, D. D. London and F. J. Maxwell, Oshawa were spokesmen for the Ontario conferences at the meeting, which received a strenuous autumn campaign in 2,900 churches in this province and Quebec.

SEEING WITH CHILD'S EYES

By Constance Cameron

"John didn't make the football team," sighed his mother, "and I swear, there's no living with him. You'd think his life was a total failure. I can't quite get the immense importance of it, when he's getting good marks in his studies and is popular and should be enjoying life. But all life seems to have been wrapped up in this one ambition."

To make or not to make a football team does seem—at the first glance of an adult—unimportant. But we must remember we are looking at the affair through the eyes of older people, older in experience and old emotionally. We are view ing it as a small part mingled with all the larger parts of life. We see it as relatively unimportant because as a swift glance we appreciate it's actual relationship to bigger affairs of life.

But here's where it will be a kindness to the adolescent boy or girl, who seems broken-hearted over something we term trivial if we will pull ourselves up short and try to focus on the disappointment through their eyes.

All the emotions, the joys and tears of life's youth, are of romance passed in each incident of life! Where to us failure to make the team is but an incident in the long novel of life, to youth it is the whole complete story!

We can say easily, "Oh, you'll never know it a hundred years from now," or we can go farther and be direct in saying, "You won't grieve over it five years from now," but they can't make youth believe that.

So, to show understanding between parent and adolescent children, it is wise and kindly to look through adolescent eyes upon the "marvelous" and "rotten" situations alike, and remember that they are the whole of life—the whole story. Cancer cannot as yet see them in their relative positions in the big scheme of things.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman
Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

My young girl friend has entrusted me with the wording of her wedding invitations which are to be most informal and written by hand, to be issued by herself.

She has no relatives here in this city. She will be married in church and there will follow a reception at the bride groom's mother's home.

I have tried my best, trying several different forms, but they all sound awkward to me, and it just occurred to me that it is probably because the thing lacks precedent in my limited experience. Being written in the first person. Sometimes it seems that a church wedding—as it is such a formal affair—the invitations should partake to some extent of this formality, even though we want to sound informal.

This is, as you say, a most unusual note to write, even more since it is not customary for the bride-to-be to be told at the home of the mother of the bridegroom. A charming way to do, I think, would be for the bride-to-be to write notes of invitation for the marriage ceremony, indicating that the friend will also receive an invitation to the reception, and then for the bridegroom's mother to follow up this invitation with her own as hostess for the reception to follow.

Then the bride-to-be would write something like this:

Mary:

Tommy and I are to be married in the Unitied Church on Saturday, the first of November, at four o'clock, and we both want very much to have you come to our wedding. You will—won't you.

After the ceremony, Tommy's mother is to give us a reception at her home, and she will, of course, send you an invitation.

Dearest wishes from Tommy and me, and the anticipation of seeing you on "the" first at the ceremony and later at the reception.

Devotedly,

Then the groom's mother would write something like this:

Dear Miss Wells:

It would give my husband and me great pleasure if you will come to an informal gathering of Jane's and Tommy's friends at our home.

Now That Its Cooler-Hot Savory Dishes Are in Order

By Hannah Wing

Now that we are feeling cooler, it is quite all right to wonder what we can do about some good hot dishes for luncheon, supper and dinner. Oysters are in again. There are R's in these months you know. And oysters taste so wonderful after a summer's parting! Sweetbreads and chicken and all the good things that make the hot dishes we like, and haven't been serving for months, are now waiting for us.

Thinking of nuts, as I was a moment ago, leads me on to tell you about sweetbreads or chicken breasts done with slivered almonds, such a dish is always popular on the surface; but simple underneath.

Grapes make into it, too, and other items such as jellied apricots and mushrooms and artichoke bottoms. I can this entree after my favorite Empress—Sweetbreads a la Custom—and you know.

Prepare the sweetbreads as I've often advised, by soaking in cold salted water for an hour, boil into a kettle with cold salted water and bring to a boil. Parboil for twenty minutes. Then throw them into ice water and let them get really cold. Trim off all membranes. Put under a weight and press. Shape with a knife or cutter. Make a cream sauce of the consistency of thin cream, and season well with salt, pepper, and paprika. Heat the sweetbreads in this. Heat the artichoke bottoms in a little butter and put them on a platter a round of sauted bread. Then arrange the sweetbreads on these on a hot plat ter. Cover with sauce and garnish with slivered almonds and seeded, slivered grapes. Around the platter arrange brandied jellied apricots and halves of green figs to repeat the color.

To prepare the slivered almonds, blanch a cup of almonds and dry. Cut into thin strips or slivers, Put in a pan with a piece of unsalted butter or a little salad oil and fry. Put into a slow oven and toss occasionally until all are slightly browned. Do not salt. Drain on brown paper.

Now for a variation of the above dish, this time making it with the breasts of broilers or young chickens. Steam the chickens until plump and tender. Remove meats carefully. Put about two tablespoons of fat in a large skillet and add one half cup sherry flavoring. Fry in the fat and add simmer a few minutes. Add two cups of cream or evaporated milk for six portions of breast. Season with salt, pepper, and paprika. Cook very slowly until the sauce is well reduced. Do not thicken it. Remove the breasts and proceed as for the sweetbreads, adding a cup of peeled sauted and chopped mushrooms.

Oh, yes, I do. I use canned mush rooms, and in such dishes as those the little button mushrooms are grand. I like them better chopped, but those—there—whole is perfectly good practice if you prefer them so. They add a good deal to many entrees. You'll observe that these dishes are easy to make and they are most delicious to eat.

Do You Know?

Do you know that there is a disease which, because it is of such infectious nature is regarded by many as being intescapable and of but little interest to you?

Do you know that this disease is serious in that it causes the death of several hundreds in this country each year?

Do you know that this disease takes its toll chiefly from among little children and that the younger the child is, the less resistance he has to the disease?

It is about measles that we are asking these questions—a disease which is so commonly considered because we are all susceptible to it. Measles is serious. In the year 1929, this disease was the direct cause of 619 deaths, a number exceeding the number of these due to typhoid fever or scarlet fever in the same year. A recent publication shows that seventy percent of the measles deaths in Ontario for a period of years were of children in the first three years of life.

These are the facts which we want parents to understand so that they will realize that measles is a serious disease and that they should know how to protect their children from its dangers.

Children should be safeguarded from infection. The younger the child, the more serious is the danger and hence the greater the need for care. No child should be carefully exposed to disease. If one child in the home is ill or if a neighbor well, the other children should be kept away from him. Unfortunately, the most infectious period of measles is before the rash appears, and so in many cases the children are less fearful of it. The result is that most children are likely to be exposed to infection.

Until recently, the best advice which could be given was to watch the exposed child and put him to bed on the first appearance of watery eyes. Even better would it be to put the child to bed eight days after his exposure, because the child who develops his attack of measles when he is in bed is likely to escape complications.

Nowadays we are able to do more than this. If the exposed child is given a dose of serum drawn from persons recently recovered from measles, he will either be protected from the attack, or else the attack will be so mild that danger will be practically eliminated.

If blood serum from recent convalescents is not available, then the blood from the parents may be used. As nearly every adult has had measles at some time, blood from an adult will likely contain sufficient power to prevent or modify the attack.

Measles is a serious and not infrequently fatal disease. It should be known for what it is and dealt with accordingly.

HOLIDAY MENUS

By Hannah Wing

Kumquat Cup. — Quarter the small egg shaped oranges known as kumquats. Mix with an equal quantity of pineapple cubes and sprinkle with powdered sugar, arrange in sherbet glasses and garnish with maraschino cherries.

Sauerkraut Cocktail.The canned or bottled sauerkraut juice is very convenient for serving as an appetizer, or the canned kraut itself may be used. In this case, strain the liquid from the can, season it spicewith lemon juice, salt and pepp rika, and serve very cold in small glasses, accompanied by a tiny toasted wafer.

Apricot Stuffing.— Steam half a pound of evaporated apricots till tender, cool, and chop fine. Make a bread stuffing of two cupfuls of soft break crumbs, half a cupful of cracker crumbs, a quarter of a cup ful of butter, one and a half teaspoonfuls of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of paprika. Add a quarter of a cupful of chopped celery, one tablespoonful of chopped onion, and the apricots. Heat the butter into the bread crumbs before adding the other ingredients.

Sausage Stuffing. — Break half a pound of pork sausage into small pieces and fry crisp and brown. Add a quarter of a cupful of mixed mushrooms—canned or fresh—and three tbsp. minced onion and a half cupfuls of soft bread crumbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley and one teaspoonful of chopped onion, and a well beaten egg. Mix well. Add enough savory and other seasoning as required.

Pineapple Slaw.—With a very sharp knife cut slices of pineapple into points, marinate in French dressing made with lemon juice, paprika, chilli sauce, salt and a little tips of lettuce leaves or endive. Pile the cole slaw and with shrimp salad. Serve very cold. Garnish the salad with pimento.

Piquant Sauce is made by adding to the browned gravy one table spoonful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of grated onion and a table spoonful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of grated onion and a tablespoonful of finely chopped pickles. Season.

Cider Sauce—Make like turkey gravy using cider and half and half water for the liquid. Season as preferred, adding one or two grains of Cayenne.

Baked Kumquats—Parboil and drain them. Remove a thin slice from each little egg shaped orange, but do not peel. Scoop out some of the pulp and fill the kumquats with sugar. Place upright, close together, in a shallow baking dish and pour a little pineapple juice over them. Bake in a moderately hot oven fifteen minutes. Use as a garnish.

Pumpkin Parchonedes.—Mix together one and a half cupfuls of sifted cooked pumpkin, half a cupful of sugar, a quarter of a cupful of maple syrup, half a teaspoonful each of ginger and cinnamon and nutmeg, a quarter of a cupful of melted butter, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of rich milk, and three well beaten eggs. Line very small pie tins with rich flaky pastry, building it up wet about the edges. Fill with the pumpkin custard and bake twenty to twenty five minutes. Cool, ice with a thin layer of strawberry jam or quince jelly and top will whipped cream.

FINANCIAL NEWS

CANADIAN BANKS FIRM

Failure in U. S. Banks Shows Ours in High Light

The financial press of the United States during the last weeks of September and throughout October has had remarked on the number of banks that have suspended operations. Weakness in the banking structure have been accentuated by loss of confidence among depositors. Solvent banks have been forced to close along with unsound ones. The currency circulation has increased to a new high point; Public confidence, shaken by bank failures, has resorted to hoarding.

In comparison with the United States' banking structure, Canada's system might be described as one that has been one of evolution and growth rather than that of creation by the Government. It has developed along the branch bank principle which is peculiarly adapted to the growth of a young country. Its keynote is centralization rather than the partially centralized system of the United States.

The elimination of weaker banks, amalgamations, co-operation between individual banks and supervision by the government have resulted in Canada having today a banking system that has withstood serious shocks and which is ready to help Canada on her way to prosperity.

Confidence in her banking system will be a prime factor in her early recovery.

WALL STREET IS SOMEWHAT EASY

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 23.—A further downward drift developed in the stock market at the start of the new week today.

Afresh reaction in wheat, a easy in silver bullion and a wide decline in the pound sterling, together with failure of the railway executives to reach an agreement with the brotherhood heads, combined to depress the stock market.

Selling of shares was in moderate volume, but several new lows were registered, particularly among the rails. Issues off 2 to 3 points or more, minimum levels included Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, New York Central, and Rock Island; Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio also reached new lows, as did Gulf, Mobile and Ohio, preferred; U. S. Steel, which declined recently two points, getting well under 60. American Tobacco "B" was sold in some volume, losing more than 3. Allied Chemical lost about as much, and issues of a public or more included American Telephone, National Biscuit, American Can, Westinghouse and Alaska Juneau. A murmuring rally was short lived.

ENDOWED WITH WATER POWERS

Canadian Wealth in Hydro Possibilities is Phenomenal

Canada is richly endowed with water-power resources. Their development belongs to every region of the country, with the exception of the coastal part of the prairies. The development of these resources from the standpoint of this country has been phenomenal. Hydraulic turbine horse power installed in Canada has grown from 172,223 horse power in 1900 to over 4,000,000 in 1930. Average kilowatt hours generated daily has increased over three-fold since 1923. This development has conferred a "national service" for the manufacturer, the miner, the farmer, or in reality for every citizen of this Dominion.

As the investors in the public securities have helped Canada to progress, so the investors in the National Service Loan will make for a bigger and better Canada. The proceeds of this loan will be used for the orderly financing of national undertakings."

GRAIN PRICES TEND TO FIRMER

Chicago, Nov. 24—Grains showed an early trend upward today, influenced by Freezing temperatures and by firmness of wheat quotations at Liverpool. Price gains, however, were checked by official announcement that United States Government financed wheat holdings on November 1 totalled 189,456,167 bushels, showing 1-6 cent —64 higher, wheat afterward rose 1-8 cent to 1-4 cent, corn 1-8 to 3-4 up and continued to mount.

INTEREST AT LOWEST EBB

Movements on Standard Exchange Move in Narrow Range

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 24 (Mining lead)— Interest in the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market was at low ebb in the forenoon session, trading being confined to a few issues and movements to a range of a few cents.

Teck Hughes firmed 10 to $3.35 but an odd-lot of Lake Shore came out at mid-day at $28.50, off 25. Other higher priced golds were in the dizzard. Among cheaper issues Moffatt-Hall saw improved interest and a fractional gain of 9½, while Macassa was off a couple and Big Missouri and Alexandria down a cent each.

Noranda, adding a few cents to yesterday's gain to sell at $15.75, showed the only chance for a substantial move in the oils.

In the oils, Chemical Research reacted 5 to 6, to 50, Noranda a cent to 16, and Homestead advanced 5 to 75 on progress reports from the Thora Field.

STANDSTILL ON TORONTO EX.

Toronto, Nov. 24—Trading was almost at a standstill on Toronto Stock Exchange here today. Only a very narrow list of stocks was called and most of the business showed but one or two transactions. One reason given is that the financial community is entirely taken up with the new Dominion loan and is letting the stock market drift for itself.

Despite the lack of interest the market was firmer. International Nickel firmed above 10 for a net gain of almost ½ point. Consolidated Smelters rose nearly a point, C.P.R. firmed to 17⅞, up more than ½ a point, and Ford at 18¾ was up ¼.

Bradshaw, Bell Telephone, Loblaw, Page Hersey Tubes Canada Malting were unchanged. Wayagamack, however, recorded in Noranda up until mid-day.

In the oil group B. A. Oil was slightly better at 10⅞, Imperial off ⅛ at 11⅛, and International Petroleum was not called.

which over this new enterprise and to protect the future undertakings the children might have in store for them. Mr. Lapsley, Chairman of the Board of Education, chairman of the school occupied the chair and introduced the various speakers to the intent children. The first speech was the formal opening of the wing was Mr. Harvey, chairman of the Board of Education, who eulogised the good work accomplished by the authorities in the past years. "Who," he asked, "little friends do you think the two happiest men in Belleville tonight?" The answer was given unanimously by the shouted reply from the little boys and girls present: "Mr. Barlow and Mr. Williams." Then he concluded with an exhortation asking them to always remember that they had a wonderful reputation to keep up and he expected them to fully fulfill the records now established by the older scholars who had graduated but who still remembered the 'old school'.

Inspector Pleased

Mr. H. J. Clarke, inspector of Public Schools, when called upon said that he was glad he had been greatly pleased by being able to assist in any small way he had been able to in further the aims and interests of this particular school. "Many years ago", he stated, "I asked the Hon. George Ross to build a public school for this district but I was told then the it would cost more than eight. Now we have this new addition, and it is a credit to all and I expect that another addition will be necessary in a few years time. I especially beautiful and although some people have still other things were not necessary in any school I think that the need for a large public assembly hall is quite add really indispensable. There is nothing in the world like a hall of this kind as a place for them to get up on their feet and speak for a few minutes having to resort to awkward fumblings and loss of speech over bashfulness and not knowing what to say. Also I think that the present school called Memorial Hall, in Hamilton, a new departure from ordinary lines of school buildings is being undertaken, the one with which I fully agree, that is the idea of separating the teachers bring all children into the assembly hall when school starts in the morning and reading them the beautiful sentiments from leading newspapers. In this way they acquire incalculable benefit and knowledge of happenings all over the world which is really an excellent training and one that should be carried out locally. "Of course it is a radical departure from established customs but then all things must some time have a beginning." Then he stated that the calibre of students now attending that school could not be excelled anywhere in the province and of inspection is also very much higher in this district than any other place in Ontario.

Response

Mr. A. B. Collins, K.C., was the next speaker called on, and who represented the Separate School Board, admitted that the pleasure of being able to address such an interesting gathering was solely his. He had received word at a late hour this morning that he was expected to speak on behalf of the Separate, and although it was a complete surprise to him he had no other course to carry out his original motto of never being late or trying to miss an appointment, and that he hoped that the children present would try and carry out that little tip all the time they will be put to use when the occasion presented itself. He was succeeded by Mr. Ernie Dickens, member of the Board of Education, who stated that it was an inspiration to see so many happy children. He was glad to be present and was taking a part in this formal opening. The boys who won the different prizes and cups should be proud of the school they represent, and the school proud in turn be proud of them.

Mr. Lent, also a member of the Board, stated in reference to the medal awarded for shooting, that he had not had the chance for shooting such as the children he was speaking to had and he thought they were fortunate indeed to have such a beautiful school. "When I was a boy," he said, "the only chance for shooting I got was stalking a gopher out in the back lot of my home."

Also he commended the boys for the excellent high marks they had all received. Mr. Joe Shortt, secretary of the Y.M.C.A., also spoke and gave one of his animated little talks on the subject of playing the game with yourself and your school. He complimented very highly the excellent work the boys and girls had done and hoped that he would be able to assist them at any time.

During these interesting little talks the various names of the scholars who had 'variously distinguished themselves in their respective classes in nearly all branches of sport and athletics were called and they filed up onto the rostrum where they were presented with the various cups and medals won collectively and individually by themselves.

The Marsh Cup, won by Queen Victoria School for marksmanship, was presented by Mr. Dickens.

The Y.M.C.A. Hockey Cup was presented by Mr. Shortt.

Cup for the juvenile championship in the hockey competition of the M. T. League was handed to Inspector Clarke.

The silver medal for the best shot among public school competitors in district number three was won by Robert Hope and presented by Dr. McTavish.

Cup for junior skating championship trophy was won by Garnett Adams and presented by Mr. A. E. Collins, K.C. This was the prize awarded by the Kiwanis Karnival.

Medals for cadets and officers of the corps were tendered in the boys by Mr. Lent and Mr. Harvey.

The ceremony was concluded by the assembly singing God Save the King, and after it was concluded the children filed back into their class rooms to complete another day in their step towards final education.

It may be noted that the social entertainment of the auditorium are excellent and the music and speech are amplified and greatly.

The following prizes and trophies won by Queen Victoria School were presented:

The Marsh Cup won by the Queen Victoria School was presented by the other cadet corps in marksmanship. Members of team: Thomas Nunn, Robert Hope, Wilbert Hammett, Victor Hall, Reginald Leuteneant; Arthur Angell, Lieutenant; Wilbert Hammett, Lieutenant; Thomas Nunn, Lieutenant.

Medals to the boys on the team won by Queen Victoria Public School at the first Canadian Cadet Corps Rifle Meet. Robert Hope is the only school in military district number three (3) to have a team at this meet: Robert Hope, Thomas Nunn, Reginald Pringle, Victor Hall, Wilbert Hammett.

Winner of junior skating championship trophy, Kiwanis Karnival: Master Garnet Adams.

Medal for the best pupil scholastically and best shot among Public School Cadet Corps in Public district number three: Robert Hope.

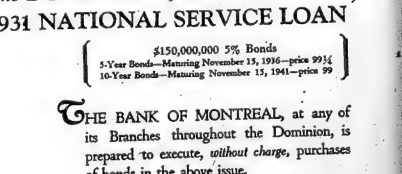
Air Drill

Another speaker wanted to know why an air drill, which is speeding up the work that is used when the money being spent was for relief but the question remained unanswered. The same speaker complained about a local contractor getting the contract to draw the pipe for the new water main, when carters in the city pay a license and have never had a chance to tender on the contract. This question came under the chairman of waterworks, but he had to leave the council before the session began. Each chairman is responsible for his own department and the members could not enlighten the man who put the question. It was also asked why certain men were given preferable jobs and Ald. MacMillan took responsibility for appointing one of the men as it came under his jurisdiction, while Mayor Reid explained the other man was appointed by the Finance Committee and not by Administration and had nothing to do with the City Council. In both cases it was stated that the men could not be relieved of their work for another man as that would break the continuity of the position.

Single Men's Relief



Unemployment for the single young men was taken up and one of the delegation wondered why so much waste was made by the up to date canteens available, while the single man was not given work and relief. Mayor Reid explained that the single man would not go to work because arrangements are being completed. Those single men, who are living from home and living in Belleville will have their board paid, while the others living at home will be looked after. That does not answer the question," said the spokesman but the subject was allowed.

Lights

Little business was left for the council to consider and the meeting was necessarily short after the delegations had left. A letter from Mrs. Ross ordered placed on the first pole on the easterly bridge on Coleman Street and also near 31 Cedar Street. The Parks Board was asked to carry on tree trimming for a short time in order that work may not be given to the unemployed and also provide wood for needy residents. Aldermen Hollingsworth, Walker and Marshall will be a committee to meet Chief of Police Ellis regarding the complaint of a certain property on South John Street. A letter was received from Mrs. R. [illegible], secretary of the Bones and School club at King George School respecting the placing of a sidewalk on the west side of North Front Street from Ridgeway Avenue to the school in order that the school children might be protected from the heavy traffic on North Front Street. The matter was referred to the chairman of the Works and the city engineer for a report. The request of a delegation to have a bubbler run at the corner of Bleecker Avenue and Emily Street was granted and will be complies with the regulations set by the city engineer and signing the agreement drawn up by the city.

A number of by-laws were passed during the session all being by-laws for the payments of sewers and side walks confiturated in the city. The by-laws amounted to $108,200.00 and were passed without comment. Under the head of enquiries Alderman Locke asked if the stop signs on North Front Street had been placed and Ald. MacMillan explained they had been ordered and would be placed as soon as possible. Under the head of inquiries Alderman Ald. MacMillan answered the query of Alderman Marshall from last meeting respecting the amount of road work in Bleecker Ward. Mr. MacMillan explained that an amount of $5,877.53 was spent on Station Street, $2,637.00 on Lingham Street, and $383.33 on Chalk College Street, $180 for sewer at St. George's Church and $710.00 for catch basins on Cedar Street. Alderman Marshall thought that the large amount should not be included as the road was for the Swift Company and the whole city benefited while Lingham Street was done under relief of last year. Mr. George Church had to be done and all that was done in a catch basin at $75.00. Emily Street should be fixed as it is an important street and much traffic goes over it and it is a disgrace to the city in its present condition. "It could cost you a dozen like it in the city," said Ald. MacMillan. On account of election day falling on a Monday the day of meeting of council was changed to meet the following Tuesday night.

HAWK-RANGER CLASH TID BIT

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP) — Two hockey bookings appeared to indicate an on the program for tonight when the National Hockey League renews its week-end hostilities in Montreal, Boston and New York. The schedule lists together the Maroons and Detroit, Canadiens and Bruins and Rangers and Rangers.

The Black Hawk-Ranger clash in New York seems to slightly overshadow the other league fixture of the evening as to date the Hawks are undefeated in four starts having won two and tied two games, while the Rangers have only dropped one game in five engagements, winning their other four encounters. A victory for the windy city squad over the fast travelling Patrick crew will perch the two clubs tie for the top rung with the Hawks having a game in hand. However, the Rangers, who boast a three straight win record are certain they will end their streak to four games at the expense of Chicago.

Saturday's battle between Canadiens and Bruins left Montreal well shift to Boston tonight, when the two Beaver City clubs of the past two years engage in their second game of the season. The Spring Frenchmen, who whipped the Bruins 3-0 Saturday, are prepared for stiffer opposition tonight for the home city squad did not show their best in Montreal. Defeat is never pleasant, however, will send the Habitants into the Canadian group leadership by two points in front of New York Americans. A Bruin win may pull the Boston club out of the American section cellar.

After three straight defeats, two of which were incurred on the road, Maroons return to the home ice today to tackle Jack Adams' Detroit Falcons. The Montreal entry will be at full strength for the battle but Detroit will be minus the services of Hec Kitrea, regular left winger, who had the pupil of his left eye punctured in New York Sunday night.

OLD GLORY SALE OPENS TODAY

Number of Marktd Animals Will Go on Auction Block

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Trotters and pacers, who already have made their marks in the light harness world and their offsprings who have yet to make theirs will go on the auction block in the Old Glory Sale opening day at the squadron "A" armory.

Leading all the rest is Calumet Butler, winner of the $50,000 Hambletonian. Others on the block include Keno, runner-up in the Hambletonian, Peter Manning, Calumet Pluto, Calumet Adam, Calumet Alden, Calumet Brownie and Mac Aubrey.

About four hundred yearlings also will be sold.

High price of $18,500 was paid last year for Guilty, 2:01, The record price for yearlings is $13,500.

Hamilton Dairies are Suspended

Use Three Ineligible Men on Saturday in St. Catharines

TORONTO, Nov. 24 (CP)—Hamilton Dairies, Ontario rugby union quarter-finalists, have been suspended for using ineligible players, Harold Bailey, secretary of the O. R. U. announced today. They used three ineligible players in the game against St. Catharines Saturday, it said. The three were from the Moodie-Tigers team of Hamilton.

Suspension for Hamilton Dairies leaves only three teams in the running for the O. R. U. honors—St. Woodstock, Argonaut Juniors of Toronto and St. Catharines.

Ontario laws prohibit the carrying of loaded guns in motor cars or other vehicles.

Current Sport

By The Observer

The stage is all set for the opening hockey game of the season, which is Thursday night. Every sportsman in town is behind the issue as all the proceeds will go to the relief and employment relief committee. Ralph Allen, director of sports at the rink, the band will be there and no charge is being brought forward by them, the junior team are donating their share of the gate and the Mayor will officially open the hockey season when he drops the puck. The scene is all set for a real evening's entertainment.

Coach Tommy Thompson will have a grist of players in uniform to throw over the boards against the selection of Trenton Saturday. Matchings McGee and Chambers will be in the nets, Bill Sherry, Carl Morgan and Hank Gallagher will share the defence duties,...The first forward line will consist of MacDonald, of last years Park dale Canoe Club team in Toronto, Glenn Sheridan and Harry Morgan of last years Belleville Juniors. Jack Gallagher will be Murray, Nichol and King will new comers to the line-up. There will consist of Riggs and two more players yet to be named. Coach Thompson is quite optimistic of the chances of his juniors and feels that they will do themselves justice against the Trenton aggregation.

Coach Bounce Holway had the Intermediates out for a real hockey practice again last night. The senior squad will be taking their turn this night out. Les The had the net and pads on last night for the first time and we noticed that they were well fitted in the line of equipment. There was a slight fog hovering over the ice surface last evening showing the marked difference between the temperature of the air and the coolness of the ice surface. Both should have a tough job on his hands in picking a front line as all the boys are out trying to land such a position. Murney Green was out last evening for the first time and the hard going was kind of heavy on Point Anne's star defence man.

Coach Holway made the boys step on the gas all evening and the boys are real fast got an eye full during the week end. The first line players like Smith, McMeekin, Lachance, Campbell Pete Morgan, St. Denis, Hull and Norbert were travelling pretty fast while the defence of Green, Cole, Holgate and Alex Weir were giving no quarter. Summer expects another defence player out in a few days.)

On account of the junior game tomorrow evening the annual meeting of the Belleville City League has been postponed until Thursday evening at the Y.M.C.A. The out-come of city league hockey will be decided at this meeting. Another team has came forward in the proposed juvenile league and it is thought that this will be the most ripe for the formation of a juvenile city league in Belleville.

The Arena directors are throwing the arena open on Saturday mornings for the public school kids to play hockey on. We commend the arena officials in this movement as a decade or more ago the public hockey players to the front than anything else has been in Belleville in recent years.

The announcement of what wrestlers are to come to Belleville will be made tonight. Bill Nankin stayed in Toronto after the O. R. U. meeting to make the final arrangements for the wrestling bout here next Monday night.

The B.C.I. junior football team arrangements of every kinder picked from love to Woodstock, the Niagara district an dthe Quinte Bay Territory Naturally the kids are quite proud of the fact that they have at least realized a first championship in Belleville. We congratulate them.

Chick Haley of the St. Louis Cardinals won an unenviable distinction. He is the only champion batter of a major league team who ever was benched in a world series. He gave way to Orsatti in the last game with the Athletics.

TURNS TO MASTER-MINDING

Leads Last Year's Champions Into Play-offs

If Balmy Beachers, champions of their group in the Ontario Rugby Union and Champions of last year show, the same speed on the field as did their coach Alex Ponton in his early days then you would hardly be able to follow them with the naked eye. For Alex to his youth was one of the world's leading sprinters and we can remember the day that he used to run the century in 10 flat with a yawn. In 10 flat in 1924 when he represented Canada at the Olympia was going some—and still is for that matter, despite the starring blocks and electric timing which aid the present crop of 9.3 men. During his football days Ponton's speed made him possibly the fastest football man in the world in running back punts. But Ponton was more than a fast man, he was a heady man and for that reason was a first rate quarter-back, like Cherry Puran of the Montreal Winged Wheelers. Now he has turned coach as has Puran. He deserves great credit for his work this year. His 1930 team was riddled by retirements of several of his stars. But he has built up another great team, and in Ab Box, Beachers have one of the greatest kickers in Canada. Box's trusty foot did not carry the Beachers to victory last Saturday as they were eliminated for the C.R.F.U. by the Sarnia Imperials by the score of 10-1.

LIBERALS TO BE ORGANIZED

Convention Passes Motion of Loyalty to the Leader

OTTAWA, Ont., (By The Canadian Press)—A committee on finance and organization, which will report to the full body, was appointed at the meeting of the National Liberal organization committee here today. The committee comprises one representative from each province and Yukon. Its members are:—P. F. Casgrain, Montreal; Hon. Peter Smith, Columbia; D. Sinclair, Nova Scotia; Hon. J. A. Gardiner, Sask.; W. E. Scully, New Brunswick; S. A. MacLeod, Prince Edward Island; Hon. Chas. Stewart, Alberta; T. C. Thorson, Manitoba and Mrs. W. C. Kennedy, Ontario.

Passed Loyalty Motion

As its first act to continue the National Organization committee passed unanimously a resolution of devotion and loyalty to the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, of full confidence in his leadership and in the deep gratitude for the great service he has rendered to the country and the cause of Liberalism.

This resolution was moved by Hon. Ernest Lapointe former Minister of Justice, and seconded by Hon. T. A. Crerar, former Minister of Railways. In support of the resolution addresses were given by Provincial Liberal Leaders present as well as by other representative members of the party. Mr. King expressed his thanks for the confidence and loyalty indicated in the text of the resolution.

Press Committee Formed

The purpose of the meeting of the National Committee was summarized this afternoon as being to bring into effect the programme of organization laid down at the 1919 convention. It is hoped to arrange for the establishment of a Publicity Bureau in Ottawa, as well as a central organization office, with organization centres in all the nine provinces of Canada. For this purpose financial provision must be made, and consequently one of the main purposes of the meeting is to arrange for raising funds. It is probable that a national organizer will be selected during the course of the meeting which will last throughout today and tomorrow.

A press committee composed of Hon. Fernand Rinfret, Mark Shiboleine, of Winnipeg, and Thomas Millar of Saskatchewan, was appointed. This committee will have charge of any announcements which are made.

WOULD PUT COAL ON MENU

Halifax, N. S.—You may make a meal, an adequate meal, out of the subterranean wealth of Nova Scotia if the eminent German scientists in the service of the Gesellschaft fuer Kohlenchlief are right.

"It is cordially announced that they have succeeded in producing protein substances from coal, most protein, as we know (or think we know) is the food ingredient of eggs, meat, cereals and milk. Already a surprisingly long list of medicinal and even food substances have been discovered in coal. Sugar and saccharine are lower, as th case may be—as the moment of the use of various coal tar preparations. Pain is wonderfully abated by coal tar products, drugs, indeed, come in some shape from coal—benzol and benzine, synthetic indigo, carbolic acid, various hydro-carbons. Why not protein? If coal-derived foods here are the proteins already. Why not a breakfast that begins with your coffee, and a truce to the cow the ham and the hen?

"It has been a common aspiration to substitute a synthetic pill for the usual nourishing meal three square meals a day. Instead of three squares and hundreds of meals a day why not a little box of pills in the vest pocket, of which you take one, if you are a moderate eater, and two if you are especially hearty, at the usual meal time, with no need at all for a cook, or a kitchen, a dining room or even a breakfastnook"? The trouble about an exclusive pill diet is that owing to the alimentary history of our species, there is need for bulk—for what, in the feeding of (other) animals, we designate as roughage in order to make digestion and assimilation normal and complete. We cannot digest even highly concentrated foods. But is it not possible that the newly discovered coal protein products will overcome this difficulty, if some of the original coal is combined with the derived protein? There is bulk enough, assuredly, in coal; and—if some of the original field of life and other substances in the subterranean, be really ground up, nicely mixed and served with the proteins, the problem of "roughage" may be met. Indeed we can see the breakfast nook neatly and sufficiently served with a dish of anthracite or bituminous.

"The economical question—the one, for instance whether the breakfast of coal will be less expensive as the one which is chiefly composed of oatmeal mush and a soft-boiled egg—may be answered by the apparently established use of coal for industrial and heating purposes. We are heating our homes with it, driving our wheels with hydro-electric power. So much the less for our food, but if we can eat this coal, a new and glorious outlet for the products of the mines is indicated. All hands for the coal breakfast!"

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Capitol

BUSTER KEATON IN "SIDEWALKS OF NEW YORK."

Complications and kid dog Buster Keaton's footlings in his latest comedy of the screen, "Sidewalks of New York," now playing at the Capitol Theatre.

The screen-faced Buster is seen as a millionaire's son who tries to reform the youngsters of the tenement districts. He starts gymnasiums and other means of juvenile uplifts, falls in love, learns the wrath of gangsters, and has to dodge more trouble in a few days than most men face in an entire lifetime.

He comes to grief when he tries to stage a wrestling bout—and when he takes on a prize fighter for a boxing match he gets into even more serious trouble. Then he tries to produce a show with amateur juvenile talent; the gang takes after him; and mad chases, hair-breadth escapes and other adventure follow at a furious pace.

Jules White and Zion Myers directed the new production, staged on an elaborate scale at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Anita Page who played opposite the comedian in "Free and Easy," is heroine, as a tenement girl with whom Buster falls in love and for whose sake he gets into all the laughable trouble. Cliff Edwards appears in the comedy role of Foggie, the valet, and the principal juvenile part is played by Norman Phillips, Jr. Frank Rowan is the gang leader.

Several hundred small boys of all ages and sizes are seen in the hilarious new story, and thrills and laughs in a gymnasium, street fights, a comical basketball game on the pavement and other incidentals add to the fast pace of the fun.

"TRAFFIC KING" IS COMING TO REPORT

London, Nov. 23 (Canadian Press Cable)—Lord Ashfield, who will arrive in Canada in a few days as a member of the commission appointed by the Canadian Prime Minister to investigate the railway transport system, has sometimes been described as "The Traffic King."

When Lloyd George, as Prime Minister in the period immediately following the war, brought in non-parliamentary business men to assist the Government in the reconstruction of the country's essential services Sir Albert Stanley as Lord Ashfield then was one of the Prime Minister's earliest selections.

"GIRLS ABOUT TOWN" CONTAIN MODERN GOLD DIGGERS

A sprightly and saucy play, with well-balanced proportions of dramatic interest, is "Girls About Town" the Paramount expose of big-time gold-digging among the hectic moods of New York, which was presented before a large audience at the Belle Theatre last night.

The cast is headed by Kay Francis, Lilyan Tashman—who share the role—Joel McCrea, Eugene Pallette and Allan Dinehart. But that there are many others whose work contributes importantly to the success of the show—and we may as well say right here that it is a success. "The others are: Lucile Webster Gleason, Anderson Lawler, George Barbier, Robert McWade, Lucille Browne, Judith Wood, Claire Dodd, Louise Beavers and Adrienne Ames.

In fact, these players do their work so admirably, so interestingly, so entertainingly, that the production seems to fall into the category of a players' show rather than a pilot's show.

But do not get the idea that the plot is not glamorous, for it is. You have two very alluring modern-day girls, Lilyan in more hard-boiled and she continues her efforts to spoil Eugene Pallette, wealthy banker, of his life's savings.

Kay's romance with McCrea faces the rocks when she tells him that she is already married to Anderson Lawler. But other difficulties are smoothed out at the finish, and much general merry-making on the part of the other players and not a little fun-spilling on the part of the resourceful Lilyan.

It's a great show; fresh, lively and piquant. Recommended to all.

FIRE BREAKS OUT IN DOG'S HOUSE

At 2.30 p.m. this afternoon the local fire department was called to the premises of Mr. Reg. Arnold, 72 Cedar street, where a small fire had started in a small dog house. No great damage was reported but as the structure was of cedar a hot fence the department was called to extinguish the blaze. Little or no damage was the result of the blaze.

$3,000 DAMAGE

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 23—Fire of unknown origin early this morning did about $3,000 damage to the Standard Bakery in East Windsor.

Though there were several men at work in the plant the flames were first noticed from the street. Almost simultaneously there was an explosion of heat and gas which appeared to lift the warehouse roof from its position.

No person was injured by the explosion or fire.

NEW LOW RATE ON RAILWAY

Round Trip Fares On C. N. Railways For Holiday Season

Toronto, Ont.—New low round trip fares for Xmas and New Years which will be available for those Canadians who pay wish to spend the holidays at home and considerably reduce the cost of travel, are announced today by the Canadian National Railways.

This year special privileges are being extended to non-resident school teachers and students where by they may enjoy low fares to their homes and return during the term of their official Christmas holidays. These fares which are offered at the rate of 1 1-4 times the regular single fare, may be obtained by any non-resident student or teacher in Canada on presentation of "vacation certificates" procurable from the school principal.

Similar concessions are offered the general public over the Christmas and New Years holidays although the period during which tickets may be used in these cases is more limited. To enjoy the Christmas weekend rate, for instance, travellers must leave on December 23rd, 24th or 25th and return not later than December 28. For the New Years holiday the special tickets will be good going on December 30th, 31st, or January 1st and returning up to and including January 4. In addition, ordinary week-end fares will have been in effect throughout the sum mer, will remain available till the end of Fbruary so that round trips between any stations in Canada may be made any week-end before that time for 1 1-4 times the regular single fare.

These tickets are good going from Friday noon until Sunday noon and returning up to the following Monday at midnight.

ROYAL LODGE IS NEW HOME

Duke and Duchess of York Occupy New Home in Jan'y.

LONDON (By The Canadian Press)—It is expected that the Duke and Duchess of York will go into residence at their new country home, Royal Lodge, Windsor Great Park, early next year.

Built on Crown Land in 1810, this beautiful old mansion is situated in the heart of the Park amid extremely picturesque surroundings. George IV, used the lodge extensively, but on the accession of William IV, it was partially pulled down and rebuilt. In the reign of Queen Victoria a number of important personages resided at the mansion. In recent years the late Major Pretyman-Newman, manager of the King's racing stables, lived there.

Royal Lodge is near Cumberland Lodge and within three miles of Windsor Castle. Fort Belvedere, the residence of the Prince of Wales, is between two and three miles distant, and Smith's Lawn, the Prince of Wales' private residence, is in close proximity.

Last year the Duke of York occupied Thorny Grange, near Northampton, as a hunting box, and hunted from there with the Oakley and Pytchley packs. This year, however he decided in the interests of economy, to sell his hunters, although he has not disposed of the lease of Thorny Grange. In these circumstances it is considered that the Duke and Duchess could make their country home nearer London.

PEACH MOTH NOW ON WANE

Delegates to Entomological Society Convention is Told

The sixty eighth annual meeting of the Entomological Society of Ontario held in Toronto from Thursday until Saturday, November 21st was successful in accordance with the statement made by Dr. A. Baird in charge of the entomological laboratory in this city. When asked today if any report on results following local interest was available Mr. Baird stated that very great results were being obtained on the peach moth had given them considerable trouble —that the suppression or the extermination of the peach moth was the object. According to W. A. Ross Commion entomological expert at Vineland, near Grimsby, who has given his undivided attention to the matter, a marked reduction in the last year of the pest has been shown.

The corn borer, according to Professor Ceasar, provincial entomologist is on the increase in every county in the province except that of Norfolk county, which is attributed to the fact, that corn growing is practically done away with by the farmers in that county who are now concentrating their attention on the planting of tobacco. Weather conditions also have done much to eradicate the pest, the warm summer particularly helping in the control.

As to his own particular line Mr. Baird stated, that he had been engaged in the developing of new laboratory apparatus for use in new experiments which were constantly cropping up. Many of his newly developed weapons in this never-ending fight with the parasitic world are being used all over the dominion in the men mailed laboratories of which this one is the parent and the only one of its kind in Canada. There are only four others of that type in America also.

MUSICIANS CLAIM ARE NEGLECTED

By Theresa T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, (By The Canadian Press)— British musicians again raise the bitter cry that they are neglected—simply because they are British. A manifesto, published by the Incorporated Society of Musicians, of which Sir John McEwen, principal of the Royal Academy of Music, is President, says there has existed for many years past, and still exists among certain sections of the community, the idea that only a foreigner can possess the true qualities of a musician, that a foreign composer and a foreign performer must necessarily be the superior to British musicians. While welcoming the great musicians of the world who belong to foreign countries, the Society says it is not reasonable that foreign artists of no repute and of mediocre attainments should be employed in this country when there are so many British musicians who lack employment.

The Society suggests firstly, that some plan be adopted, such as is in operation in the United States, whereby foreign performers must declare the amount earned in this country and cannot leave until the appropriate income tax has been paid. The Society also suggests that some safguard be devised which will limit the British musician the proper consideration which is their due, and thus help to lessen unemployment.

The Ministery of Labor has expressed its sympathy with the movement but undertaken on be half of British musicians.

Manitoba U. F. Organization Opposes Production for Profit

Twenty Point Future Policy Adopted in Short Order

AS TO MORTGAGE

Brandon, Man.—(By The Canadian Press)—Social ownership and abolition of production for profit have received the approval of United Farmers of Manitoba.

This anti-private ownership and anti-capitalist stand was taken in approval of the last cause in a sweeping 20-point "future policy". "In the opinion of the United Farmers of Manitoba the present economic crisis is due to inherent unsoundness of the capitalistic system based on private ownership of resources and capitalistic control of production and distribution that involves payment of rent, interest and profit".

Action by Manitoba body places it beside United Farmers of Canada (Saskatchewan section) in support of socialism, ownership in non-profit production are components parts of the platform of the Saskatoon United Farmers.

The entire 20 points were approved within an hour in a rush of voted support, clause by clause.

A mortmation of all mortgages and purchase agreements retroactively at seven per cent was backed by the meeting. Decision was reached to have the executive study the approved principle of "nationalization" of land to provide security at terms.

Ban on political affiliations in Manitoba's legislature was also urged by the U.F.M. The convention took unanimity in favor of development of the idea of provincialization of the legislature "to the first that it be a superior municipal council without political affiliations.

GOVT AIDS NEEDY INDIANS

and Supplies to Hunting and Fishing Indians in North

Ottawa, Ont. (CP) — A remarkable economy in the economic position of Canadians this year is that the 100,000 Indians in this country, those engaged in agriculture, particularly in the prairie provinces, have a better position than their white neighbors, while those Indians who are dependent for their living on the precarious and their in peculiar occupation of hunting and trapping are worse off than their white neighbors from the standpoint of cash income, while other parts has driven game into increasing numbers into Indian territory. Word has come to the department of white trappers being dumped by airplane in the northern parts of Ontario and Quebec into the hunting ground formerly used exclusively by the Indians. The scarcity of furs and low prices paid for them has also lessened employment for Indians who act as guides for sportsmen.

A special emergency hunting ration consisting of ammunition, twine for nets and snares and certain staples for food such as flour, tea and sugar being distributed among the Indians on the understanding that they will go back into the bush and hunt and not loiter about the trading posts and railway lines seeking charity.

One condition that makes the provision of unemployment relief for the Indians less difficult than for their white neighbors is that the administrative control of the Indian problem is central and united for all the Indians of the Dominion, and, under the Indian Act, vested in the Dominion Government which has established a separate Department of Indian Affairs. The reaction of the Indians to the economic depression varies with location, and generally, the savings for the worse in their economic position is relatively less marked than among the white population of the Indians, for the most part live on reserves in settled communities and are free from taxation. In a majority of cases they own their own habitations free from encumbrances and do not pay rent. Moreover, schooling and medical attendances are provided for them by the Government. As a result their absolutely necessary expenses are confined to food and clothing.

In the long-settled parts of the Dominion, such as the Maritime provinces, Ontario and Quebec, the Indians on the reserves are in close contact with the community but large, many of them deriving their livelihood as mechanics, labourers and industrial employees. Those on the Caughnawaga Reserve, west of Montreal, get much of their employment with architectural steel companies, their fleetness and sure sense of foot being invaluable in the work done at dizzy heights on modern skyscrapers. Lack of employment in the industrial communities has hit this class of Indian hard and for them the department is obliged to provide direct relief in food and clothing. Wherever opportunity offers however, the department provides work for them in connection with road repairs, ditch digging and building operations on the reserves.

Ever since Confederation it has been the aim of the Government to and the policy has met with considerable success, particularly in the agricultural areas of the Prairie Provinces. Following the disappearance of the buffalo fifty years ago these Indians were left destitute and wholly dependent upon the Government for maintenance. Today as a people they are self-supporting. The extent of destitution among them is very small. Unlike most white farmers the Indians have no taxes to pay and they have been left reserves all in the matter of farm implements and breeding stock.

An amount estimated to be sufficient to provide relief for the Indians is voted annually by Parliament and the sum appropriated for the current fiscal year is $366,300, an increase of only $45,500 over the previous year. Many Indians throughout the Dominion have made a comfortable living from the sale of native wares, such as bagskin and moccasins, also lacrosse sticks, hockey sticks and axe handles, but the market for these products is now quite thus adding another group of formerly self-supporting Indians to the department's direct relief list.

Canada's Indian population according to the 1929 census of the aboriginal race, was 105,611, divided amongst the provinces as follows: Ontario, 27,432; British Columbia, 25,107; Quebec 12,835; Manitoba, 15,363; Saskatchewan, 13,764; Alberta, 8,546; Northwest Territories 4,618; Nova Scotia 2,632; New Brunswick, 1,941; Yukon, 1,261; Prince Edward Island 293.

The average cost of a year's instruction in attendance at a Canadian university, exclusive of board and lodging, is placed at around $424, of which $231 is paid out of provincial funds.

30 Year Old Lady Kelvin Sails on

Still is Ready to Sail The High Seas on High

Boston, Mass., Nov. 24—The Lady Kelvin has started another chapter of her long career. Built in Gloucester in 1896, she served for years as a fisherman, as a yacht she was long familiar in Cohasset Harbor when her name was Cynthia, and now, rebuilt and refitted, she was moored off the Boston Yacht Club this summer—a forty-foot black schooner, new in appearance but with a certain old-fashioned air that is emphasized by her high, ranchboned rail.

Willard G. White, by profession a compass maker and by avocation a yachtsman, rescued the old vessel when it had seemed that her useful days were over. Rebuilding up from the original hull-of-oak, he had her restored to make her again fit for the sea.

"Cynthia was one of those boats that you see only once in a lifetime," said White, "one that creates a yearning for ownership and a picture that is ever in your mind when you think of boats. I first saw her just before the war. That was enough to stay with me until the spring of 1930 when she came on the market, and after several sleepless nights thinking of her and what could be done with her, I found I was the owner."

Late spring, 1931, found the Lady Kelvin in dry dock, her deck and cabin fittings ripped out. "What a sight we saw," said the Owner. "Double oak frames 3 1-2 inches square, sawn from the natural crook and with the locust tree-nails showing through in the good old fashioned way. Several builders of these old oak vessels told us that the topsides up under the deck and in stern and stern where ventilation was poorest would be the place to look for rot, and sure enough, we found it. But only in spots, in the ceiling and deck beams. It was interesting to see how tough the oak planking and frames remained."

Orders for rebuilding were as follows: clean the hull thoroughly and paint the whole inside with Stockholm tar; replace pieces of frame here and there and put in a new ceiling throughout; raise the deck and in stem and stern where shelf fore and aft right on top of the old shelf, fitted against the frames, and fit the deck beams to this shelf. A new deck of 3-inch fir and a large cabin house gave great by increased room below.

In putting in the new ceiling oiled with linseed galvanized nails, the strength and toughness of the oak frames were revealed by the way the nails took hold. The old ceiling had to be chopped out, the old nails cut off, for they held too firmly to be pulled out. To match a fine old teak skylight, the cabin was given a teak hatch on the port side forward and a skylight companionship aft to starboard—two points of exit in case of emergency. Between the deck and outside planking ten inches wide were fitted planking two inches thick and nailed on edge across the keelson and fastened to the sides of the vessel, making deep cross floors tying the sides together. When the vessel was run in between these two natural supports the whole bottom of the boat.

The old boat builder who worked on the job told the owner he had never worked on such tough oak "in all his life," he added. "He could his tools would hardly touch it and that today it is almost impossible to get this blue oak planking."

CANADA'S LITERARY FUTURE IN HANDS OF YOUNG WRITERS

MONTREAL—When Canada has more clearly expressed her national intentions and when Canadian writers revert to the Canadian scene in turning their eyes from the glitter of London and New York, this country will be on the way to possessing a truly national literature, said John Burroughs, English traveller, painter and writer, in a recent interview here.

"I really don't know a great deal about Canada; I've crossed the continent several times on my way to and coming back from elsewhere," began Mr. Burroughs, "so you mustn't take too much stock in what I say. But as I see it, there is certainly a well-developed Canadian literature meeting a certain demand, for I think that literature, like most other things, is regulated by the law of supply and demand. This literature of yours, however, is of a surprisingly high average. I doubt if there are any very compelling and impressive books, with the possible exception of "Mile de La Roche"; but here you seem to have escaped the brand of "drug-store" fiction that is so popular in England, and there is little of the crime stuff that permeates the literary output of the United States. The reason for that may be, of course, that Canada imports little of fiction, with a consequent curtailment in her own output. There exists a mean which may not be a golden mediocrity but which is invaluable on which to base the future.

"But whether this Canadian literature is a national literature, as in other story. If writers portray their own locale and situations with which they are eminently familiar their works may have only a geographic distinction from those of others. I believe that writers in this country have paid too little attention to the Canadian scene and have allowed themselves to be distracted by the delights of London and New York in particular, very probably for market reasons, as their cultural focus, and if they continue this there never will be a national literature. The Canadian people are evidently discerning even reactionary, and have a deep distrust of anything startlingly new, and I believe it is for this reason that many Canadian writers have turned to the French regime to produce works of the musical comedy stock stuff with most artificial situations and dumb characterization, and that they have been forced to turn their backs on excellent material for the novel, such as religion, politics, intrigue and love.

"The future of Canadian literature is in the hands of the young writers of the country themselves, but they need leadership, not only by a dean of critics but by a dean of critics of writers but by a dean of critics to act as mentor and literary adviser. If they will hold fast to their ideals of artistry and not be bulldozed or browbeaten by a lagging spiritual development I am confident that a national literature will emerge, indigenous, belonging wholly and only to Canada, to flourish from the soil of the country," Mr. Burroughs said.

John Burroughs was educated at Petes and Cambridge, worked for two years in Fleet Street, and has since published several essays on a variety of subjects, with considerable travel studies and popular fiction interspersed.

BELASCO'S VIEW

New York, Nov. 24.—David Belasco believed life was a lie. That was his swan song and he never sang it to a truer listener. In the hands now of Achmed Abdoullah in the form of "Pantaleon," a play —and it may well yet rewhile until actors worthy of the Belasco tradition are found.

The great producer—until his death last May the dean of them all—wrote the play in collaboration with Abdoullah, and, so says the latter, he meant it to be the symbol of his own philosophy.

His philosophy was: Remorse and forgiving will in itself do away with evil.

"It play concerns the theatre. Two of the characters the theatre man drew upon his ancestors, and made Pantaleon and Harlequin the chief dispensers of his philosophy. Belasco's father was a famous Parisian actor and his grandfather was a prize-fighter, and ancestors before him back to the Middle Ages have been showmen of one type of another.

"It's good theatre" says Abdoullah. "Nothing highbrow; symbolic, but interpreted in strict terms of life—it's a play for the masses."

Frozen Dessert

Frozen desserts are a simple matter with an electrical refrigerator. It's surprising how many delectable dishes can be planned when electrical refrigeration aids culinary skill.

An electrical refrigerator is a great economy as well as a convenience, foodstuffs keep their freshness longer thus minimizing waste. Space does not permit us to recount all the features of electrical refrigeration. Ask the salesman to explain and demonstrate the various features that distinguish individual refrigerators.

ROTARY PICKS CANVASS TEAM

Mayor Reid and Mr. G. A. C. Weir Speak on Relief

Mayor Reid and G. A. C. Weir addressed the Rotary Club, Monday making co-operation on behalf of the Unemployment Relief Committee in reaching the objective planned at $18,000. The Mayor spoke briefly outlining the need as it has been found to exist locally, the number of men out of work and the efforts being made by the city council to provide part time work on civic undertakings.

Mr. Weir explained the various steps which led up to the formation of the Unemployment Relief Committee and the progress to far made. Pressure methods were not being used, and the subscriptions were purely voluntarily, it being felt if all took hold and did their bit as citizens the raising of $18,000 would be but a bagatelle for Belleville, considering what other Ontario cities have done. Brantford with an objective of $75,000 went over the top for $82,000 and other cities have made splendid records in the providing of emergency relief funds for the winter. Mr. Weir described a high-pressure drive put on in a western city some years ago. With a population of less than twenty thousand an objective of one million dollars was made, five per cent cash and the balance in installments. A specialist came from a distant city and organized the drive, his fee being a commission which netted him ten thousand dollars. Fifty thousand dollars was raised in two days in cash, and the entire million dollars objective subscribed. Then the high pressure specialist stopped over an extra day and raised $40,000 for a local charity organization putting up a new building. No high pressure methods were being used here, four hundred cards were sent out, and only about fifty returned in the first few days. He thought more pep could be put in the campaign and intending contributors could help the drive by acting promptly.

Mr. Weir asked the Rotary Club for a team of ten workers to give a day of their time to putting this campaign across. Volunteers were called for and ten teams selected.

A similar team will be asked from the Kiwanis Club.

SERMON NOT ALL OF SERVICE

Rev. Mr. James, of Peterboro, Preaches at Christ Church

Rev. Mr. James of Peterborough preaching at Christ Church on Sunday morning spoke on the paramount importance of the realization of the presence of God. He made reference to the man who declared he could find God on the golf links, on a boat, on the Great Lakes or anywhere, but said Mr. James, the trouble is that those who say they can find God everywhere generally find Him nowhere.

Further stressing his point as to the realization of the presence of God, the speaker spoke of the importance of a proper attitude in prayer. Kneel upright, don't lean over on the bed, he said. "It may take you a long time to realize the presence of God but that is really the all important thing."

In regards to church going, Mr. James pointed out that undue stress was attached to the sermon. He would not decry the importance of the sermon in the service but the person who had to wait until the sermon to catch the feeling of the presence of God had already missed a great deal.

Once he met a man who spoke to him of the need of saving his soul, that he did not want to lose his soul. Life is more than saving one's soul from hell fire. The aim must be to have one's life radiate throughout society at home and wherever that others may see what the presence of God means in life and through this influence be led to realise God in their lives.

3 DAY CONVENTION OPENS IN OTTAWA

OTTAWA, Ont., (By The Canadian Press)—Starting with a luncheon at which Professor W. C. Clark, director of the School of Commerce, Queen's University, was the speaker the annual three-day convention of the Professional Institute of the Civil Service of Canada opened today.

Leonard B. McAulay, retiring President, who is to be succeeded by Dr. H. S. Archibald, Director of Experimental Farms, Department of Agriculture, presided at the luncheon, following which the business sessions got underway, the hundred members of the institute attended.

A special educational programme is being given Tuesday evening in place of the usual convention dance, a collection being taken up for relief of the unemployed.

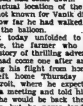
Canadian Academy of Art Exhibition Most Balanced

Fine Canadian Works Seen at Royal Academy

SOME PICTURES



Montreal, Que.—The best balanced show held in Canada in recent years, the 52nd exhibition of the Royal Canadian Academy is open here. Widely representative of the work done in practically every province of the Dominion and offering a broad range of styles, it deals with the individual approach of the Canadian artist to the work in all its phases.

The academy was opened in the presence of a large number of artists and guests. Among the artists present from outside Montreal were Alex Jackson, the painter and Miss Florence Wyle, sculpiress, of Toronto; Archibald Brown, of Lanark-er, Ont., and Mas Elizabeth Nutt of Halifax.Wyly Grier, President of the Academy, and Mrs. Grier welcomed the guests.

In his variety of styles the exhibition shows the Persian-like legend of "Hunting in the XVIth. century in Russia". A gem of imagery by the Russian Valentin Shebaeff of Montreal, and its oddly Thibetan and in some respects, Japanese old fishermen, as well as the wet, muddy, almost gluey countryside of "Wrapped in Winter," a dramatic landscape by Homer Watson. It includes the modern "My cactus," by Eric Bergman of Winnipeg, serious and thorough in the achieved craftmanship of the cactus, of the pot and of the earth in it, as well as in the texture of the draped curtains in the foreground and it presents in the very same collection the theatrical, over-spectacular nude "Figure standing" by Randolph Hewton, who is more ably represented in another room with a rich piece of mural decoration, presented between frames and called "Spring."

It offers its academic auspices of the startling and very subtly arbitary description of "Hangars et Elevateur" by the artist Adrien Hebert of Montreal and to the remarkably well felt and well composed landscapes of the French Canadian Paul Nash; Marc Fortin also of Montreal. In the same wise it gives its blessing to the good barn-like "When autumn winds" by Paul Earle of Westmount, Quebec and to the distinctly English one of interior "The room at black Rives," by Arch. Barnes of Toronto.

Like a discreet uncurlying theme you find, here and there, scattered rather far apart, a note of clarity, freshness and simplicity, a little bit of French Canadian landscape, that is, a church steeple, towering above the fields. And the whole to realize there is a romance in the art of Canada, as there is in

PART LIQUOR IS RECOVERED

Sectionmen Found Hard Stuff Strewn Along Tracks

London Ont., Nov. 24—Forty cases of liquor, valued at approximately $1,600, part of the loot from the hi-jacking of a freight car on the Canadian National Railways have been recovered.

Sectionmen and police discovered the liquor strewn along the railway right-of-way in the vicinity of Komoka and Mount Brydges.

The hi-jacking occurred Saturday when a freight car loaded with whiskey consigned to the Ontario Liquor Control warehouses at Toronto was raided while the train was travelling between Windsor and Toronto and cases dumped out along the right-of-way.

A large number are believed to have been picked up by a waiting car or truck and taken away. Most of those recovered were broken.

BALLOONIST HAS THRILLING EXPERIENCE

Spends Three Days in Flight Before Landing At Dean Lake

HAS MANY "RUNS"

Gas Bag is Coated With Ice and Snow Forcing it Down

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. (By The Canadian Press)—After a harrowing three day flight, which started out as a little jaunt from Cleveland to Detroit, George Vanik, 22-year old balloonist of Cleveland, Ohio, landed a few miles north of Dean Bridge, 78 miles east of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

He was found by Jack Rutledge, a farmer near Dean Bridge at 7 o'clock Saturday afternoon after he had made his way through miles of slashing to where the polka dotted his balloon had come down.

The actual location of the balloon is not known for Vanik did not know how far he had walked after leaving the balloon.

Vanik, today unfolded to Jack Rutledge, the farmer who found him, a story of thrilling adventures which had come one after another following his flight from home.

He left home Thursday night for Detroit, where he expected to attend a meeting and tell his employer he would be back the next morning. But he never landed at Detroit.

Winds Blew Balloon

Contrary winds carried him out over Lake Huron and as he came close to the lake to see where he was a rope on his balloon began to trail in the water and threatened to drag him down. He cut the rope and the balloon shot up to an altitude of 10,000 feet. Then its surface was encrusted with ice and snow and he drifted until Saturday, when he came down and lodged in the tree tops briefly. When found by Mr. Rutledge he was making his way through the slashing, his feet encased in two canvas bags to protect them from the cold and from the underbrush, for he was wearing only oxfords. His coat soaked with rain weighed 25 pounds and he was completely exhausted when found. He sent a telegram to his mother in Cleveland, assuring her of his safety. He is understood to be in the Michigan Soo, this afternoon and is expected to leave at 5.25 for his home in Cleveland.

George Rutledge, a brother of Jack Rutledge said that he and his brother were going to make an effort to discover the huge gasbag and if they did would send it to Vanik in Cleveland. Vanik left Cleveland at eight o'clock, Thursday night, he told the Canadian Press today when located in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., there was a tremulk an hour wind blowing and in 10 minutes he had passed over Edgewater Park and over Lake Erie. At 12.20 he was over Sarnia.

Over Sarnia he encountered rain and he began dumping the ballast of his balloon. Then he became entangled in fog and did not have the slightest idea as to his location. At three minutes once he gas to fall and the ice and snow encrusted balloon began to sink He kept the ballast ever heard to keep in flight. Several times he thought he was going to drop into Georgian Bay.

"No less than five times he experienced what are known as "runs" in balloon parlance.

The balloon sinks near the ground and the pilot throws overboard some ballast and the craft shoots up. After the first "run" he had thrown overboard all his ballast and from a height of 15,000 feet his balloon, the gas contracting rapidly in the cold, crashed to the ground.

RELIEF WORK UNDER ONE AUTHORITY

The following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of the City Council:

"That such an organization has been formed from among the Citizens of the City of Belleville to be known as Belleville Unemployed Relief Committee, the objects of which are among other things to devise ways and means and to make recommendations as to the raising of funds for Welfare Relief Work, to receive such funds, to keep account for same, and generally to supervise the methods and system adopted for raising funds in any public or semi-public manner.

"Therefore the Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville resolves:

(1) THAT those who shall engage in the soliciting, collecting, and, or, raising funds by any method whatsoever on behalf of the general public for Welfare Relief Work in the City of Belleville do so in co-operation with said organization;

(2) THAT the Mayor, be and he is hereby authorized to issue in his official capacity a Proclamation directing that all those soliciting, collecting, or raising funds by any method whatsoever from the general public for welfare relief work, shall do so in co-operation with the said organization and under the patronage of His Worship the Mayor."

WANTS PARLEY TO CONTINUE

Believes a Solution Can Be Reached at Round Table Conference

By George Hambleton, C. P. Staff Writer

London Nov. 24—(CP Cable)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald today was making strenuous efforts to save the Round Table Conference from dissolution as a consequence of the split between Hindu and Moslem participants, which still remains unbridged.

Work of the various committees is proceeding, but the Moslems, since there has been no settlement of the communal problem, decline to participate, although they are represented at the conference. The extreme wing of the Conservatives in Parliament is still pressing that the conference be terminated. Mr. MacDonald today was interviewing all groups of the Indian delegates in turn and will continue to do so throughout tomorrow. At number ten Downing street today he met representatives of the Moslems, Sikhs the depressed classes and the Indian Liberals.

This was Mahatma Gandhi's day of silence and he did not participate in the discussions. Early in the day, however, he met the Prime Minister who later received representatives of the Indian Princes and the Europeans in India.

MISQUOTED SAYS THE ARCHBISHOP

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 25—(CP) — "The reporter who quoted me to the effect that there was no distress in Western Canada other than in Southern Saskatchewan misunderstood me," Archbishop C. L. Worrell, Primate of the Church of England in Canada, said last night.

"What I said was that while the northern part of Saskatchewan was all right, southern Saskatchewan was in very bad condition and Manitoba and Alberta were fairly well off for relief. Do not let it be said that the west is not in need of help."

BOY PRODIGY LIKES HOME

Plays Before Audience of Famous Music Critics

New York, Nov. 25—With a twinkle in his eyes, Grisha Goluboff, a curly-headed 7 year old violin prodigy from the west, played his Stradivarius violin last night before an audience of famous critics and music lovers in Carnegie Hall.

As amazing as his musical ability, however, was the serious-mindedness of manner in which he talked to reporters before the concert.

"I think New York is a very wonderful city," he said, as no weighed critic ever actually did love the lights of Broadway at night. There are many amazingly adorn in people who live in New York. I like San Francisco—that's where I live, you know—much better. It is a home city and I want to go back."

He admitted he wanted to learn, to box. But he said he didn't ever fight with other boys. His favorite pastime is reading the many volumes he has in his library, mostly on the masters of music, on history and on science.

He was three when he started his signature and 7 when he first played Mendelssohn's concerto before a New York audience.

DRAB OUTLOOK SUMMER GONE MUSE CITIZENS

Bleak Blows Late Autumn Blast With Flurries of Snow

HOWLING WINDS

Cautious Anxious Look-out Maintained By Citizens

Citizens poked exploratory heads from beneath the blankets this morning and viewed a drab, cold countryside through their windows. June had given away to the cold fury of a December morning. The flowers which had seen blooming lustily on roadsides, gardens and bushes turned wilting heads to the wintry blasts which made their appearance early this morning. Overcoats are being brought off the closet, the wheels of coal wagons are again heard—and the man who sort off the storm windows will replaced them with screens tomorrow. It is the time-worn routine of autumn and winter. The calendar says it is still autumn. Like, however, soon a snow storm is being brewed and a long period of fine gusts of powdery white particles, all leading one to the realization that while we are in Belleville Autumn still it could not have been ushered in more definitely.

Belleville, alone, however is not the only city to succumb to this sudden change of weather—a Canadian Press despatch which is appended shows how conditions now are in various parts of the country Wednesday.

Toronto, Bitter Wind

Toronto, Nov. 25—(CP)—A bitter Northwest wind last night ant-ice-covered streetcars, jammed switches and banished the balmy weather which characterized the first week of the past week.

The weather bureau predicts the end of the mild spell forecasting weather below the freezing point tonight and tomorrow. Rain fell today, tomorrow "fair and cold."

The highest temperature that was 37, in striking contrast to the week's high of 60 and the 58 registered at eight o'clock at night, in Toronto and vicinity.

From Northern Ontario came reports of snow and dropping temperatures between North Bay and Sault Ste Marie. The temperatures tumbled there yesterday's maximum of 56 to last night's minimum of 18 in that district.

Lake Ontario was still rampant under the thrash of the Northeast gale which started yesterday but with the gale moderating today the waters were subsiding from the peak of their fury.

MOON ONLY ONE OF TWENTY-SIX NOT JAZZING

Satellite Declared By Scientists in its Own Class

PATH OF MOON

Other Moons Do Plane Glides, Loop the Loops

(By Howard W. Blakeslee)
(AP Science Editor)

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 25—Of the 26-known moons in the sun's family, our own is the only thoroughly decorous one with no jazz tendencies in space in annual flight around the sun.

This "unjazzy" absence of the modern tempo was reported today by H. M. Petrie of the University of Michigan in a mathematical treatise. His calculations show that our moon is in a class of its own.

All moons have two motions, one of them travels around their sun, and the other the courses in space which they describe while being dragged around the sun by their respective worlds.

Analyzing the resulting path of our satellite, Mr. Petrie finds that it is always seen with respect to the sun. In a diagram the moon's annual course would look like the curvature of an egg shell, with the yolk representing the sun, and second of this path whatever would be curved away from the sun, like any fragment broken from the egg shell.

All other moons do anything from mild aeroplane-like glides toward the sun, to real "loop-the-loops. Ganymede, one of Jupiter's moons, does a very tight little loop. Callisto, another of Jupiter's satellites, makes a big looping curve, passing in space a gigantic scrip letter "E."

All the other moons belong to planets farther from the sun than earth; planets whose paths around the sun are less sharply curved than earth's. Furthermore some of these satellites make immense and larger circles in travelling about their respective worlds.

The other moons are distributed as follows: four belong to Jupiter and to Saturn nine each, to Uranus four and to Neptune two. Venus, Mercury and Pluto alone have no known moons. Pluto is so distant that if he has a moon telescopes probably are not sufficiently powerful to detect it.

WAGE CUTS ON WEST LINES

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 25 — Organized employes of four railroads with headquarters in the Twin Cities last night were under consideration regarding wage reductions ranging from 5 to 10 ten percent.

DISMISS APPEAL ON NORTH BAY

Ottawa, Nov. 23 (CP) — The Supreme Court today dismissed with costs the appeal of the city of North Bay from an Ontario Appellate Court decision upholding a lower court award of a claim of J. H. Marceau for breach of contract. The dispute arose over a bridge across the Chippewa River at North Bay for which Marceau was awarded the tender in 1928 at a price of $11,980 where-upon he was down carrying out the work the city threatened the contract to Frank Munro who completed the work. Marceau brought action and was awarded $5,250.

Railroaders Endorse Four For Aldermanic Seats

Retain British Control Over the Indian Army

NEW YORK, Nov. 25 (CP)—Retention of British control over the Indian Army is urged in a draft report based by Lord Lindsay, chairman of the federal structure committee of the round-table conference, says the New York Times today in a special cable from London.

"The report also recommends that Britain, through the viceroy keep control of India's political relations with foreign countries and her relations with the British empire commercial economics, and other relations, but frankly suggests, should come under the jurisdiction of India's new federal legislature and the responsible ministers," the cable states.

"The report if necessarily vague, in view of the disagreements among the conference delegates, is the result of the Moslem's refusal to express their views. Even in their present tentative form it is far from certain that they will be found acceptable to the British parliament.

"Nevertheless, the report is an attempt to find the consensus of opinion among leading Indians as to the drafting of reserved powers subjects, for which the British insist on keeping responsibility in view of the new submitted to the committee for approval and then presented to a plenary session of the conference.

"Lord Sankey's report mentions that while Mahatma Gandhi and other Nationalist delegates that India's self-government will not be genuine unless the army is placed under control of the legislature. It proceeds, however, to state that a majority of the committee considers it impossible to vest in an Indian legislature during the period of transaction the constitutional responsibility for controlling defense so long as the duty of actual responsibility cannot be simultaneously transferred.

"The report suggests that the viceroy "assisted" by an army minister of his own choice responsible to him and not to the legislature. To the viceroy is left the decision as to whether he shall be an Indian or a European.

"The only crumb to Indian sensibilities in the report is the suggestion that the legislature should discuss and thus influence the defense budget presented by legislature, it proposes, should be consulted by the British administrators in such problems as the Indianisation of the army. It reserved that the army in civil administrations in India the suggestion is made that a body be appointed in India analogous to the British committee of imperial defense, which is composed of civilians and soldiers."

Bang, Bang, Ring Shots as Boys Take Place of Pied Piper

Guns Blaze at Rodents Scurrying Through Garbage Pile

DUMP OVERRUN

Those splutering barrages of rifle fire you have been hearing over in the southern part of the city on these days are not sounds of an invading army knocking at the city's gates. They are caused by a scrawny pressed and beleagured garrison. The garrison is caused by rats. Big rats, little rats, and just ordinary common rats.

The Pied Piper has evidently fallen down on the job of ridding and overrunning the city dump on the Sidney Street road of the rodents defying squadrons. Big wistful boys give chase to small whiskered squirrels, but in turn formerly held the daily meditations carried out the orders and duties and followed the usual daily routine. Consequently, no rhyme there however, owing to the appearance of innumerable rats, has been left at the place with trusty rifles in their hands ready to shoot at every whiskered face that shows itself momentarily.

Altogether the boys seem to enjoy themselves hugely in this new game that has all the thrills of hunting fierce and wrestled lockin; old war-like generals and their rats are having a pretty thin time of it trying to maintain their dignity and discipline in the face of this new and unlooked for intrusion.

FIGHTS OFF THREE THUGS

Garage Night Attendant Puts Up Heroic Scrap

RICHMOND HILL, Ont., Nov 21.—(By the Canadian Press)—Battling three thugs in front of his garage here in the employer's cash, Donald Tennyson, night attendant at the Yonge Street Garage, was successful in beating off the attempted robbery today.

The three men drove up to the garage and under the pretext of buying oil, attempted to attack Tennyson as he bent down to pour it into the car. He ducked and but was borne to the ground by a few of the men held him while a third reached into the register.

After a bitter struggle Tenhyson broke away from his assailant and ran across the street to the home of Ernest Bridges to raise the alarm. Upon the return of the men they became alarmed and drove away leaving north toward the city. Police obtained a good description of the men and all highways are being closely watched.

JACK HORWITZ OTTAWA, SHOT IN HIS STORE

Ben S. Edelson is Arrested Shortly After Shooting

WIFE PRESENT

Injured Man Makes State ment Before His Death

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—Fatally injured by a revolver bullet, Jack Horwitz, 32, died at one o'clock this morning and Ben S. Edelson, 40, was arrested charged with murder. Horwitz was a prominent jeweler, and Edelson is engaged in the same business.

The shooting took place in Edelson's Rideau Street store, about 9.30 o'clock last night but police were not advised until shortly before Horwitz died. It was on the statement to them and Edelson, arrested shortly after at his home, refused to talk.

Horwitz, Edelson and the latter's wife were present when a doctor reached the store. Horwitz was lying in a pool of blood from a wound in his abdomen and Mrs. Edelson was holding the gun.

Rushed to the hospital, Horwitz was given a blood transfusion in an attempt to save his life. Realizing he was dying, he obtained a will to Sam Beemer, his solicitor and, according to the latter, stated he had been examining a revolver when it discharged, the bullet entering his abdomen. He made other statements to Mr. Berger, as his solicitor, which he did not make public.

The inquest was opened this morning and adjourned to await the report of an autopsy to be held this afternoon.

Police found a revolver in a drawer in the jewelry store. On the floor were a cartridge shell and a cartridge. Mr. Edelson also made no statement regarding a motive for the alleged slaying.

Horwitz is survived by his widow and a young child. Edelson has six children. Mrs. Horwitz stated to reporters: "I was fighting the dog and he but I fought a losing battle. He was only a kid and they were super experienced kids. He did not explain the statement.

MARCH, APRIL AVERAGE UP

Beware of Next Spring to Pay Up for Fine Weather

New York, N.Y., Nov. 23.—November 1931 will be remembered by Clyde Erwan Kerrigan grudgingly admitted, as a month with a March and April. Briny autumn-like fury of its own, but the Clyde said.

"Yeah I got for this," said the veteran seaman, who has known weather on the seven seas during a long lifetime. "It's hard to tell to even up on the weather.

"I remember the blizzard of '88?" he asked, gentleculating with his big fist. "Well, that came up that morning and looked pretty fierce at first. But it was all had had such a warm winter."

"Yeah, I guess you've been touched on the African coast long enough," Reporter Ben Hur has at ventures there.

"No, we've had it with our weather like this," he said. "We'll have to pay for it later. It is nature's way."

The application of fertilizer increased alfalfa yields by 27 per cent on tests made at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

27TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson Honored By Fair Board

On the occasion of a call on an emergency meeting of the Belleville Fair Board yesterday afternoon, Fire Chief Walker Hardware was a rather interesting witness.

Yesterday was the twenty-seventh wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Ketcheson and also Mrs. Ketcheson's birthday. President C. E. Hanna informed the members of the fair board of the fact and suggested that the call be a meeting for the purpose of arranging a mild-way for next year's fair they presented Mr. Ketcheson with a token fit for the occasion.

The joke was carried as far as possible before the actual presentation took place and as all the men had been "in the know" they were on the fun" it was enjoyed all the more by the men present. On behalf of the fair board President Hanna also sent a bouquet of roses to Mrs. Ketcheson, who is at present visiting her daughter in Toronto. The arrangement were that the flowers would arrive in Toronto at the same time of the presentation in Belleville.

After the actual presentation the members of the fair board wished Mr. Ketcheson, secretary of the board many, many happy returns of the day.

Support Pledged to 4 Aldermanic Aspirants by Railroad Workers

Daylight Saving Dropped as Issue, Proposal Now Favored

ORGANIZATION

No Stand Taken in Regard to Mayoralty Contest

At the second meeting of the local railroad employees held at the Engineer's Hall last evening for the purpose of organizing for the forthcoming municipal election the prospective railroad candidates for aldermanic honours presented their views.

The four railroad candidates are Aldermen Lodor, Marshall, Armstrong and Mr. Wm. Ross, who is a newcomer in the aldermanic field. Mr. Ross is sub-foreman of the rail-saw department of the C.N.R. The four railroad employees have pledged their entire support to the four aldermanic aspirants.

The present three members of the council gave an account of their years stewardship and were commended and solicited as the meeting saw fit to dispose of them at their convention. The question of daylight saving was brought up and after considerable discussion it was decided to drop the question as an election question as the railroad employees were always behind sport and it was thought based on this would be a benefit to the sporting fraternity of Belleville. The mayoralty contest will not be brought in as an issue by the railroad employees as they are only interested in the matter of aldermen.

After the organization on behalf of the four railroad candidates the following ward committees were appointed for the coming municipal election. Ward: Thos. York A. Cole and Wm. Michaud; Coleman Ward, P. Richardson, Mr. Taggert and H. McClarke; Bleecker Ward: Chas. Naylor, W. J. Ford, G. J. Gorman and Rodt. Foster; Baldwin Ward: F. Bowling, C. Ballard, Ketcheson Ward: Geo. Adams, and J. Hall; Sammon Ward: R. Carr, P. White and Pat Collins; Foster Ward: Wm. Whalen, C. Tuttle and R. Bleecker.

Mr. A. Kennedy occupied the chair during the course of the evening and Mr. A. G. Meagher was secretary.

TORCH MURDER ATTEMPT FOILED

Schenectady, N.Y., Nov. 23—Police of this city were confronted today with what appeared to be an attempted torch murder.

Elbert Hauser, 43, was reported in a critical condition at the hospital at the Ellis Hospital, and John De Mare was held in connection with the investigation. Before lapsing into unconsciousness Hauser told police that De Mario had "taken him for a ride," poured kerosene over his clothes and set him on fire.

4 CATCH BASINS ARE INSTALLED

Four new catch basins are being installed on the lower end of Bleecker Street by the department of public works who now have men working on the excavations required for them.

The road at this particular point has always been of a rather flat nature, causing the water whether large puddles of water form and overflow the nearby sidewalks. It is hoped with the new catch basins this trouble will be avoided.

Steals Spuds for Relief

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 25 — The room in city hall basement where vegetables for the city poor relief are stored, was brought into last night by way of an outside basement window and a quantity of potatoes and other vegetables carried off in sacks. The city police department is also located in the basement, but officers heard no sounds.

ADAM LACKIE HAS RETIRED

45 Years of Service With C. N. R. Now Recognized

Brockville, Ont., Nov. 25—After more than 45 years service with the Grand Trunk and Canadian National Railways, Adam Lackie, C.N.R. passenger conductor here, retires on now on five months leave of absence preliminary to retirement from railway service on pension. Latterly he has been in service between Montreal and Toronto and he started as a brakeman at this terminal in 1886. Members of Mr. Lackie family have been associated with the railway since 1854 when Robert Lackie was employed on the construction of the Victoria Bridge at Montreal and also on the building of the main line as far west as Prescott Station.

IN HOW MANY WAYS

Do glasses benefit a person? Well, first they enable him to see properly and that alone is worth while. But the RESULTS of imperfect sight. Glasses are many — too many even to mention. But any person goes in so many ways by seeing as he should, that his sight is secure and his comfortable vision at the earliest moment.

PHONE 128

FOR APPOINTMENT

QUARRY TOOL HOUSE ENTERED

Mr. Charles Mott, city engineer, has reported to the city police that during the night of November 22, the tool house at the city quarry, north of College street, was broken into and a number of tools and a quantity of coal were stolen. The tools missing include a Stillson wrench a eighteen inches in length.

LITTLE BOY MISSES HIS TRICYCLE

Some little kiddie on the east hill is wondering where his tricycle is. He is sure that he did not leave it on the street, some distance from home — of course he brought it to the home and left it in the yard. Maybe he did — in any event the little cycle was picked up on the street, with no little boy in sight, so it is at the police station and, should the little chap may have it on proving that it is his. He is also wondering not to leave it unattended in the future.

HORSE RUNS AND BREAD TUMBLES

Bread took a decided drop yesterday when the wheezes said and the respectable horse belonging to the Thompson bakery of this city decided to enliven the general routine of the day by taking a little spin away down Catherine street hill.

Outside of the bakery a few feet stands the general excitement attendant upon such an unusual event nowadays. Then a few feet on straps belonging to the harness, no damage was done to the horse, the animal was finally brought to a stop near the Optical Works on Clarence street.

TWENTY-ONE TEAMS IN COMPETITION

TRUCK SNAPS OFF PHONE POLE

About twelve o'clock Tuesday night a truck owned by Claud Lobb, of Milford, left the road about a mile south of Rossmore, collided with a telephone pole, which snapped in two and overturned in the ditch. The truck which was considerably damaged was carrying a load of empty crates and milk cans for the Neilly Canadian Company, Belleville. Provincial Constable Frink arrived at the scene of the accident shortly after it occurred, but the driver had gone and he has not yet been learned if he were injured. The accident is being further investigated by Constable Frink.

FRENCH INFLUENCE DEPRESSES MART.

Chicago, Ills., Nov. 25 — Sharp downturns in grain prices early today followed a decree compelling French millers to use 97 per cent. of native wheat instead of only 90. Liverpool cables and traders inquiry for actual wheat, with liquidation prevailing and traders lacking confidence. Opening 14-1/8 cents lower, Chicago wheat futures continued downward. Corn started 3-1/8 off and later held near the initial drop.

INSTANTLY KILLED

London, Ont., Nov. 25—Dirick Valley of London, was instantly killed today when the truck in which he was riding was struck by a C.P.R. freight engine. Another companion, Odin Couch, was slightly injured. He fatally escaped being a crossing in the C.P.R. yards. The truck was dragged 140 feet.

Tough Guy Seeks Better Man Anywhere in Canada

Tumbles Into Town and Fails to Find Man Worthy of Him

NO ACTION HERE

A tough, racy guy from the West hopped off a flying freight car last night at the south station, landed in a heap on the cinders right-of-way, rolled over a couple of times and painfully arose to his feet digging pieces of grit out of his eyes as he got up.

Then a battered cap he beat the dust off his clothes, flashed in his pocket for a comb, which he never skicked back his unruly red hair, produced a red bandana and mopped his face, replaced his cap, gave his coat a tug or two and straightened away for the bright lights of Front street. When I saw him a half an hour later he had had a plate of beef stew, pie and coffee, a cigarette—had taken possession of the lower street and anybody in the place to fight him.

Picture a guy of little smaller than yourself, with a pair of shoulders large enough for two, to have; hips like a greyhound; arms like derrick cables wrapped up in bronzed sinew—and hands that must have been broken time and again, for no guy could ever see a couple of twinkling blue spots in the face and not have his hands get as sad as if some guy had tried to beat it in with a sledge hammer. Nose, cheeks, and teeth that looked as if they could crack buttons without trying. Then add to add all the things Gordon Sinclair has immortalized in "Hungry Sally Kid" he wrote about some time ago, put the whole thing ends and ends of trails you meet like in different people you've met, and you've got a pretty good idea of "Saginaw". That was his name, I sent him along to see the man at the transient station here on Front street, after he had had the once-over.

He started in the conversation with out preamble.

"Pine town you got here, Gus." I admitted the fact, gratefully wondering what was coming next, and conscious of the fact that the other names in this conversation didn't matter anyhow.

"Nice town," he continued. "Lots of people on the streets that tell me what you can do for excitement here evenings? Any fighting going on; any scraps? I'm sure that a guy could toss around for a buck or two to get a little entertainment."

I admitted that at present we did suffer a dearth of boxers and wrasslers, "but," I continued brightly, "We'll have a good hockey match Wednesday night."

"Huh—wotsat! Hockey match! Brother, there's more rough action in ten hockey matches for me to bother lookin' at than you'll get from only girls play hockey. Ever been in Saskatoon?"

I admitted that my wanderings had never quite carried me that far, and listened as he continued.

"Them penny ante guys, them hockey players. Why up there whyn' I used to hang around wed'sdays an' Sat'days and watch them sticks and try to break em over each others heads an' wheadin's. Why a bunch of rubes, raw, raw boys, bustin' each other stick like around the ice.

"But what in heck do you want to break hockey sticks over each others heads for?" I asked, not knowing what was coming next.

"For pleasure—just to see who could his the hardest and where he take aim at each other of course," he enlightened.

Here was a tough guy. Here was a guy who knew his way around. I decided to sound him.

"Born in Butte?"

"Hee—worked a couple years there in a bar."

"That's where Dempsey started, isn't it?" I asked.

"Yeah, and I kin lick Dempsey and all his relations, any day in the year only the big bum won't fight."

"Where are you headed for?", I asked, counting the minutes to go.

"How do I know—where's Montreal?"

"Down the line ways. What are you going to do there?"

"I'm goin' to clean 'em up."

"Clear what up?"

"Clean every one up that wants to be cleaned up!"

"How do you clean?"

"Per the luvva——" and he spat in the gutter, turned and looked at me suspiciously at me with one eye.

"If I thought you was kiddin' me ....."

I hastened to reassure him. "I'm goin' to fight—get that? I'm goin' to fight and I'm goin' to say he can fight any better than any other guy, and when it comes to fightin' well brother, you started something. I like 'em raw, red and rubbery because when I get 'em I like to see 'em bounce. I kin lick any guy of me size in the world when he gets excited and lapses into the brogue of "the Auld Sod"), and within river anywan see the wurld I kin flatten 'em. Me dad was a fighter an' he learned me all about it, himself. Me brother is a lightweight in Chicago, and bejabers he kin lick anny lightweight in his class at all still. And, anyway, if it wasn't me meself that busted the hands of me on a hightly head—the durrity bayther — in Shelby, I could have ran the wurrld champeen, so I could. The durrity divvle! But I've got a job watchin' me down by the Montreal, so I have and you'll be hearing of me soon. And say, Gus, could you lend me two bits for a bit on a spread for duly.

breakfast in the mornin'—not that I'm hungry, understand, but I can get a fight anny place in the country."

"If you're so good as all that why don't you go back to the States and pick up some prizims over there?"

He had cooled off a little by now and the frith wasn't so evident.

"Aah, them guys is a lot of nice—the place is lousy. They put me in with some bum every time I get fit like every time. Must have the bookies sign on me because every time I get set to poke the dinge with a sweet one, I get all mixed up with the set and he gets me flat. Too many stumble bums over there. That's why I'm now. I'm like to mix with white colored people."

"What do you figure on in Montreal?"

"Well, as far as I can get the lay he slips me the shot to swipe a drag and hit the rather and come see him—says he can put me on for fifty bucks a week—some kind of a gym joint. He tells me though I'll have to take a class of pibrals on the side. You know, do the hunky-dunkey and raise pyr arms and legs—yes, and a few of them hops and skips—the old dame's favorite. Say, I think they're losin' a little of their brit with some dames. I got the old pitty hop, humphl—anyhow he says I'll get fifty bucks a week and misses he can handle it for the cook money. I get a fun of the gym and he gets the fun of spendin' the dough. Not bad, eh? I'll be able to save much, but I suppose it's a livin' and at that it's a big one."

"What if one of those ladies takes a fancy to you and runs off with you?"

The answer he gave is not considered fit for the lighting of journalism of the better class, so we will ignore it, except to say that it was shade over the conversation for the benefit of more delicate readers—the gentle ones you sometimes see.

"Where are you going to sleep tonight?"

"It's in the box, Gus. I got me a place all fixed up where the bed bugs can't get at me. Where was you born?"

"In Cowk, and I've been out here quite some time without ever seeing the old place. Some day, though, I'm going back."

"Yes he will! He'll go back, but not for one thing will he in a wooden box. I watched him as he swaggered away, and another policeman, who harbors the idea that he is the only available man left who could handle a fight if he were given a chance—or if he could hoodwink the hands of thirsty hayties".

Saginaw has now, he was, and in a few short years he'll be just another one of those guys that drift in the ward at Ionia, Michigan, cutting up paper dolls and Ad Wright signal is doing there now. Even the great "Kid Lavigne" ended up as a third-rate watchman in the plant of a motor car company, died as he had lived—broke and penniless.

Saginaw, however, was on his way to Montreal to teach a class of "piralls" how to do the cuts and shuffles in some gym. And he'll be fighting on the side as he thrown into a ring to give some bum a trimming. Any one who how he thinks he's enjoying it so why should we care? And where he did last night ? We haven't found out yet. All we do know is that a red-headed pugilist is, by now, probably somewhere near Montreal.

EQUALITY IS STEP CLOSER

British Commons Passes Westminster Bill 350 to 50

London, Nov. 25— Equality with in the British Empire came a step closer to being a legal fact, when the House of Commons last night passed the Statute of Westminster bill through the committee stage. This bill goes to the House, which legislates supporting the government — the "stalwarts" — and the "gothard" element of the Conservative party, which sought to insert a new clause in the bill providing that nothing in the statute should be interpreted to empower the Irish Free State parliament to amend or repeal the Irish treaty of 1922.

FRANCE AND SPAIN BURYING HATCHET

MADRID, (By MAID) (AP) Nov. 25.—France and Spain, after a two year battle of tariff reprisals, have concluded a commercial treaty. The principal trade in the new treaty concerns Spanish wines and French automobiles and parts.

France agrees to permit entry of 250,000 gallons of wines annually from Spain at a duty of about 3.33 cents a gallon. Spain, in return, will admit 30,000 tons of Spanish scrap iron, also firearms, hides, furs, percolators and jewelry at its minimum duty.

V. E. Comp Dargavel Guest Speaker at Hydro Night of Moira Chapter No.

Many Hydro Employees From Belleville District Present

HALL DECORATED.

Speaker of Evening Gave Ideals of Royal Arch Masonry

A memorial night in Royal Arch Masonry was consummated when V. E. Comp. R. B. Dargavel, P. G. M. of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario was the guest speaker at the annual "Hydro Night" of Moira Chapter No. 7 last night.

The banquet hall at the Masonic Temple presented a picture long to be remembered. The tables were filled with miniature lines of the Hydro system and they were illuminated with small lights. At the head table there was miniature rural line, while on the other tables they represented the city lights erected upon standards. The tables were all stamped with the chapter monogram of R. A. M. and the room was gaily decorated with the chapter colors. The music of the evening was supplied by the Hydro orchestra and their endeavors were highly appreciated by all comprising the visitors present.

E. C. Smith, Chairman

At the opening of the banquet Ex. Comp. Wm. Smith, chairman of the evening, called upon Mayor Reid to welcome the many guests from outside the city after which Bro. C. Searles rendered a beautiful vocal solo. The Grand Chapter Officers was proposed by Ex. Comp. H. C. Meredith and responded to by Rt. Ex. Comp. Chas. Kinnear, District Deputy of the Trenton ward District No. 11; Comp. Kinnear is also a Grand Superintendent. It is a privilege to be called upon as the representative of the Grand Chapter at such a gathering of men. He explained the inner workings of the Grand Chapter and their work before thanking all present for the splendid welcome he had received. Mrs. G. R. McKinnon then sang "Ships and Trains", accompanied by Mr. Leo B. Riggs.

The speaker of the evening was introduced by Most Ex. Comp. Col. W. N. Ponton. "No tribute too great can be bestowed upon V. E. Comp. R. B. Dargavel in Masonic circles," said Comp. Ponton, "as a most influent manner he introduced the speaker.

Comp. Dargavel upon arising first expressed his sincere appreciation for the great privilege of being asked to be present at the annual Hydro Night held in Moira Chapter No. 7. He explained that the Hydro, to his mind, was a wonderful system, and as was Masonry, namely to establish "light and truth". Comp. Dargavel went further to explain the real meaning of the inward Mason and what his ideals really should be. Masonry, he explained, should be made more than a fraternity as it represented not only the past but the accomplishments of the present. Masonry has stood the test of the past. It has seen religious, empires and political enterprises rise and fall, but the ideals of Masonry still stand," said the speaker.

Depth of Masonry

He also mentioned the tide of warring against any attempt to modernize Masonry explaining that to this was done the true spirit and its significance would immediately cease and become something that Masonry is not intended for in any sense for. "It may be old, but, so is the law of gravity, and we still accept that," stated the speaker. Comp. Dargavel went into the depths of Free Masonry and explained to the members present its real value and significance going on to say that through mediums like Masonry we would have a united Canada, and overthrow of strife and disaster from our national boundaries.

"We are building a temple of love less than hate and of honor less than dishonor if we would bring about man's mind and heart to the great spiritual force of Free Masonry," said the speaker. In closing Comp. Dargavel wished the members of the Bay of Quinte district which was the cradle of Masonry in Canada, continued success in their endeavors. An instrumental trio then played a humorous part much to the pleasure of all present.

The toasts to the visiting companions was proposed by Comp. Davis and responded to by Rt. Ex. Comp. W. F. G. Avery of Oshawa and a number of other out-of-town visitors, who all expressed their appreciation of being able to be present at the annual Hydro Night ceremonies. The Junior Warden's toast brought to a close to a close after the non-Hydro members gave three hearty cheers for their Hydro companions, who had made it a meeting one to be long remembered in Moira Chapter.

The following officers, all of whom were Hydro employes, conferred the R. A. M. degree upon two of their fellow employes:

KNIGHTLY ORDER FOR ANGLICANS

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 23. — The church was not making his services unattractive enough, said R. B. McKay, barrister, principal of Wycliffe College, addressing the annual diocesan laymen's banquet of the Church of England in Canada here last night. He gave this as one reason why the Church of England was not holding the younger people.

To remedy the situation, he suggested formation of an organization similar to the Knights of Columbus in the Roman Catholic Church, with Knights of St. George as a possible name.

FRANK FINKLE IS PRESIDENT

Sidney S. Association Holds Convention at Marsh Hill

Sidney Sunday School convention was held at Marsh Hill Church. The assembly opened with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. H. R. Mutton, pastor of the local charge and vice president, Mr. Frank Finkle in the chair.

Reports were given by the Department superintendents. Five superintendents reported.

Roll call of the Sunday schools followed with seventy-five delegates and visitors responding.

Mrs. Eaton was the chief speaker of the day, she being the representative of the O.R.E.C. in Toronto. She gave for the subject of her talk in the afternoon, "Specializing in S. S. Work," and at the evening session, "The Aim of the S. S."

She stated that the chief aim was that every boy and girl should be brought to know Jesus, and to be taught to so live to please God and also to develop right conduct. Mrs. Eaton said the convention should show the result of teaching. One of the features of the convention was to organize teacher training schools to be conducted in the Sundays during the coming winter.

During the afternoon meeting Mrs. (Rev.) Mutton sang "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" and Mrs. (Rev.) Doggett sang "The Lord is My Shepherd"; also Miss Horton sang "Into You, a Friend Like Jesus."

At the evening session the music was furnished by the Marsh Hill choir assisted by Miss Lee in "Oh our God" and a duet by Mr. and Mrs. Dargavell, "Speak to Our Soul Dear Jesus."

The convention decided to hold Group Meetings at three of the Sunday Schools the following summer, which will be announced later.

A very fine tea was served to the delegates by the ladies of Marsh Hill in their new dining hall.

NEED INSTRUCTORS AS BLACKSMITHS

Of interest to local blacksmiths and their apprentices is the notice now on display in the post office asking for application for the position of instructors of blacksmithing for the department of Justice at Kingston penitentiary.

The salary will range from $1400 to $1800 per annum; the applicant must be well versed in general metal work and have a practical working knowledge of machinist's trade. Applications for this position will be accepted up until the 28th of January.

Wintry Blasts Greet Tulips Peering Out of the Warm Soil

All Over City Tulips Recently Planted, Are Appearing

NO HARM DONE

Tulip bulbs put in this fall with the expectation that a long winter would protect them may nodding their heads above ground, have been acting in a precocious manner and many gardeners have been surprised to find them at this season two inches above ground. The excep tionally mild weather has, of course, caused the early and unseasonable growth and by some persons, who have put in these bulbs, it was feared that the plants would be ruined by the winter snow and ice. We informed and successful horticulturists in Belleville state, however, that no harm will come to the plants and that next Spring the city will come forth as usual in all their glory and beauty.

The planting of bulbs of many spring flowers has, according to a prominent horticulturist, increased one thousand field in Belleville during the last few years. Mr. Charles E. Bishop, Sr., of Messrs. C. E. Bishop & Sons says that the increase has been marvelous and that this season his firm has sold thousands of bulb of many kinds. Mr. Bishop recalls that thirty years ago there was he brought in his first shipment of bulbs from Holland and had them on display in the show window of his store, which was then on Bridge street, people would stop and ask him what variety of onions they were. Now the people make a study of bulbs and are well informed as to the best varieties to plant in beautifying their gardens. Citizens who buy flowers and enjoy working in the cultivation of them have done much to make this city known as Belleville the flower city.

LOST JOBS BECAUSE THEY COMPLAINED

Guelph, Ont., Nov. 23—Discharged from the jobs which they secured about a month ago on the transCanada highway in Northern Ontario, seven members of Guelph's first unemployed draft of 50 men returned to the city yesterday. They said they lost their positions because they complained of the food served to one of the camps near Bracebridge.

DECISION REVERSED IN LIQUOR CHARGE

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 25—Appeal of the Attorney General of Ontario against dismissal of a charge of possessing liquor not purchased on a permit preferred against Mrs. Fisher of Kingston, was upheld in a judgment handed down today by Judge H. A. Lavell. Fisher was convicted of having liquor illegally and fined $100 in the judgment.

MORE MEN ARE EMPLOYED NOW

Forty Men at Work on Relief Job One Year Ago

One year ago today the files revealed that forty men were employed on the various sewers and other relief work being carried on by the department of public works. Also selection of men for work was being carried out on the same plan now in vogue—the three-day shift system.

Today the average is just a little higher, there being just a few more than fifty employed by the city, the majority of whom are working on the trench being dug for the spare water main. It is expected that other work to be opposed upon shortly, of which the Sidney street sewer is one, will absorb a number more of the men now on registration.

Mother of Five Looks for Early Release

When one is only 27 the strain of raising five children on limited financial resources is a burden which would take any woman's strength to bear, but when one is only 5 feet 3½ inches and weighs but 87 pounds the progress towards recovery, and the ultimate cure, is slow and at times when she may return to her little ones.

There are many such cases, but without financial assistance the struggle would be hopeless. Such is a girl from you will be gratefully received if sent to Mr. A. E. Amas, 173 College St., Toronto.

VICTIM IS IDENTIFIED

Arthur Bryan, Native of England, Was Victim

Tuesday afternoon the Belleville police received word from the Port Hope police that the body of the man found on the right of way of the C.N.R. at Port Hope, shortly after seven o'clock Monday morning had been positively identified by Wm. J. Bryan of that town as that of his brother Arthur Bryan, of Belleville.

When the body was discovered, a business form or card from Wonnacott's jewelry store, Belleville, bearing the name of Bryan, was found in a pocket of the dead man's clothing and as there are several families of the name Bryan, residing here, considerable anxiety was experienced by those of that name, who had sons away from home. Many inquiries were made and finally once hastened to Port Hope and it was a great relief to them to find that the victim of the accident was not, as they feared, their son.

Mystery now surrounds the identity of the dead man and the city police are investigating. Sergeant Arthur Hasman was in charge of the investigations he made, assisted by Constable Evans and Detective Sergt. Hollingsworth. It was a young Englishman named Arthur Bryant, who had resided in Belleville for a number of years and that for the last three months had been in the employ of Mrs. John W. Hutchinson and that he had left the boarding house, as they feared, their son.

Arthur Bryan, it was learned, told a friend that he was going to catch a freight train for Port Hope and it is supposed that he did so some time Sunday evening, as his body was found on the tracks early Monday morning. It is thought he he slipped when getting off the freight train. Investigations, however, have already revealed that Bryan was dragged a distance of about sixty feet. He suffered terrible injuries to the head, being severed between the hip and the knee, and his right arm at the ankle. In addition he also sustained severe injuries to the head. According to the Coroner, Dr. F. W. Diamond, the man had been dead for several hours when found. The body was found about half a mile west of the C.N.R. station at Port Hope.

The late Arthur Bryan was thirty seven years old. He was born in Canada from Manchester, England, in 1894. He was a bachelor. Since which at that time had a home in Belleville. He came to Canada, at the age of nine years Arthur Bryan with his father, the late Charles Weese of the second concession of Thurlow and who gave him a home and raised him as one of his house hold.

Wm. J. Bryan was in Belleville late Tuesday afternoon, to make some inquiries regarding his brothers. The body of the unfortunate young man will be buried at Port Hope.

Local Family Connected with Shakespeare Discovery

Prof. Hotson is Grandson of Former Belleville Man

RELATIVES HERE

Dr. Leslie Hotson, professor of English Literature at Haverford College, Haverford, Pa., who has made one of the greatest discoveries in English literature, the finding of documents relating to the life of Shakespeare, has an interesting connection with Belleville. He is a grandson of the late Prof. George A. Swayze, who was professor of pranuanship at Albert College and later teacher of penmanship in the schools of Belleville. Prof. Hotson's mother was Lillie Swayze and the professor himself is a first cousin of Miss Mebel Harrison, daughter of Mr. Phillip Harrison, well known newspaperman of this city and a member of the Ontario Intelligencer staff.

Dr. Hotson's discovery relates to the period in the life of the dramatist, when he was producing some of his English history chronicles, King Henry IV and King Henry VIth and Merry Wives of Windsor. The rollicking romance which forms an intimate view of the life of the ordinary people of Shakespeare's day, the sights and sounds of the English countryside, is one of the crowning of the happiest efforts of the bard in the lighter vein.

Prof. Hotson has found an order made out in 1598 for the arrest of Shakespeare during the search of rolls of the Queen's bench in London. King ... at the request of William Wayte, who, the order recited "stands in fear of his death" at the hands of Shakespeare and three of Wayte's friends. One of these, Francis Langley, was a wealthy protector a few months before from William Gardiner and Wayte. Dr. Hotson learned from the records of the files. Dr. Hotson said he believes he has identified the originals of Shallow and Slender in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." It was Gardiner, he believes, whom the dramatist sought to satirize. In his famous comedy, Slender, the original Dr. Hotson believes to have been Wayte, remains literature's "unparalleled sap."

PETITION FOR PART TAXES

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 23—A decision to petition the Dominion Government for an amount of money equal to 25 percent of the present year taxes as a relief grant to the 'westward farmer,' was unanimously adopted at a recent meeting held in the Peel Town Hall, Goldston. The meeting was the result of petitions circulated of ratepayers upon the township council for relief from this year's taxation. Chairman was J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers' Association. George E. McQuibban, M. L. A. for northeast Wellington and Dr. John K. Blair, M.P., for North Wellington.

TRUCK VS RAIL

The problem of truck and freight car has came to the fore with marked emphasis of late due to reduced earnings of the railways and the consequent agitation for the tightening of the regulations regarding truck use of the highways. The intricacy of the problem is felt by everyone for it is realized that the truck cannot be abolished and the train services cannot be allowed to go on losing through what is considered unfair competition. Each one has its own advantages as a means of transportation.

One of the present low earnings of the railways will probably come an adjustment of the acute problem which will spell the end of cutting into one another's earnings and doing no good but creating a great public loss.

Both services are paid for by the people and it is to the interest of the people that there be an adjustment. What that is to be is the difficulty.

THE THURLOW VOTE

Thurlow's practically negligible opposition to the bylaw to grant a thirty-five year franchise to the Ontario Shore Gas Company for the distribution of gas within the township is naturally of the most interest to Thurlow, whose residents evidently want to have every one of the modern conveniences which science and invention have to offer. With gas, electric light, good roads, modern schools, such a township as Thurlow is practically in the state of suburban area with all the advantages which pertain to rural life.

The support of the bylaw was also of interest to Belleville in that the servicing of Thurlow with gas will mean extensions to the Belleville mains.

Thus the ties which bind the city with the immediate environs are being cemented by the spirit of progress which both municipalities, Thurlow and Belleville, are showing.

EMPIRE BROADCAST

Empire broadcasting is about to be inaugurated on a high power station at Daventry, England, giving twenty-four hour program to the people of the Empire. Programs for each of the dominions will be arranged for the hours when the people of the Dominions are in the homes or clubs. The broadcast for the benefit of Canada will start about midnight, British time, and seven p.m., Canadian time.

So the world wags on and the Empire wags on with it, not late in the race, but in the forefront of progress.

Nothing like the spoken word for bringing the people together. The word over the broadcast will be effective as human link.

Nothing so ambitious has been tried by any other organization in radio.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Winter's blasts cannot be far off for all the activities of nature with the flowering of the planting of tulips for the fore winter sets in instead of before the advent of spring, just prove the exception. The change in the temperature of Tuesday night and Wednesday morning gave a hint of great weather changes just about to take place unless all signs fail.

There is talk of an empire sterling currency and clearing on the order of the final system along with France, the United States and other countries would be greatly affected by any change in the basis. The question will give Canadian and British financiers and bankers much to think about.

Every new phase brings in new matter for the council to think about. So it was with the unemployment situation here—many problems were submitted to the city council at the Monday night session.

Trenton's hold-up when a restaurant proprietor was stuck up and robbed of fifty-five dollars will cause extra guard to be maintained over spare cash in the restaurants which are open of a night in this section. More will not be so much in evidence when next bandits strike.

Adoption of fifty-one western churches of the United Church in Canada by Eastern Ontario churches is a most effective way to keep up the interest with the western charges. There is nothing like the desk in this plan. The scheme is not adopted by other eastern churches because they are not large enough to keep and maintain each of them a western church.

The Royal Winter Fair can hardly be called a winter fair. It might go by the name of an Indian Summer fair or even a summer fair. The name of winter fair suggests snow and severe weather but this is nothing of the kind, with the temperature which has been hovering around the seventy mark.

ANNIVERSARY

By Aline Michaelis

A year ago.... ah, who could say,
What prophet could foretell
How strange the pathway of today
And this hour's citadel?

Who, peering through the mists, could find
One glimmering of light,
One hint of where the way would wind
Through valleys dark as night?

A year ago and not one star
In all the heavens shone.
No faint hope's whisper from afar
Upon the wind was blown.

Yet, now, the fortress gained, we turn
Calm glances back again
To struggles made, to falsehoods spurned,
To conquests over pain.

A year ago we did not dare
To break fear's potent spell.
Yet we have journeyed from despair
To this hour's citadel.

SOME FOLKS who saw a large Toronto firm advertise a sale of several hundred pianos at half price thought there was no market for that many pianos at any price, and that the firm was throwing good money away in advertising space. Oh, well! The pianos were all sold by two o'clock in the afternoon following the appearance of the advertisement, and many prospective customers who did not come early were disappointed. DOCTORS DO A LOT of work they never get paid for, a lot of hard work, too, getting up all hours of the night and appearing in the sick room with a smile and a word of cheer, regardless of whether the chance of getting paid for the call is remote or otherwise. That surely is Christian charity with a double C. Now with many families facing a winter when employment will be scarce, their second winter of privation for many. Belleville medical association has offered to donate free medical service to families of unemployed upon recommendation of the Unemployment Relief Committee, thereby giving that committee something worth far more than money, lifting a heavy part of the load off its burdened shoulders. committee all winter in disposing wisely of the relief fund entrusted to their care and disposal by the citizens and the Federal and Provincial Governments. Ravage of Disease in Deer

Is it Nature's Effort to Preserve Balance of Wild Life?

In Africa the dreaded rinderpest —a contagious distemper in the ox-ear which attacks all ruminants—periodically sweeps down upon the vast flocks who inhabit the limitless plains of that country and leaves behind it a silent and dead terrain flecked and dotted with the dead and bloated bodies of the animals who have succumbed to that strange plague. Countless thousands of them are killed by this disease in a periodical cycle but it is still a strange and not understood disease to those who have spent long years in the dark continent.

In Canada we have this on a lesser scale among the moose and bull colonies inhabiting the woods and plains throughout the country every seven years as regularly as a well-ordered clock the plague makes its appearance, decimating the little animals by droves and then disappears without a notice able scarcity of the hunter's delight. Now we have a knew problem.

From Sturgeon Falls comes the word that our red deer have this year been undergoing the tribulations of some malady that leaves them dead and dying among the thickets and brush of their native country. Our own Belleville hunters have also commented upon the lamentable scarcity of the nimble creatures in the North woods this year causing lockjaw among the elect since the war started. Floyd was always a great fellow to go places and do things.

Toronto, Ont. Nov. 23 (CP) — The Earl of Bessborough, Governor General of Canada, Tuesday addressers or the Empire and Canadian Clubs of Toronto that the cessation of equal status among Great Britain and the Dominions is "a splendid step of partnership," one which admits no "creeping partners."

"Modern business conditions admit of no equality in the Governor General said; "it is less true that, in any modern business, whether it be china, each nation must pull its own weight. The strength of the chain is its weakest link. The strength of the British Empire is to stand the test when the nations of the whole war world are bound to put upon it, each individual link as true and strong as truly tempered, as its fellows."

The Governor General emphasized that he did not think the days of the British Empire are numbered. "In all history, since the days when Rome came into being, no association of human beings has ever been built of a rigid political abstraction than has the British Empire," he said. "It is far more comparable to a living organism which readily has always adapted itself to the ever-changing needs of an evolutionary world; and in nothing has that elasticity, that healthy adaptability, been more evident than in the story of the relations between the Mother Country and the Dominions overseas.

"Has this widening of political responsibilities brought with it a corresponding loosening of the ties that bind the Empire together?" he asked. "I see no reason why this should happen. The very fact that its several members are attaining a stage of development undreamed of a few generations ago is surely proof that the whole is sound.

Belief in Empire

"Belief in the Empire, therefore—" he continued, "must be grounded in a true conception of what that Empire is today, not on a dogmatic, hide-bound recollection of what it was yesterday, nor on falsely imperialistic analogies from other empires of the past. Those empires fell because they were static; the British Empire goes on because it is dynamic—because it is instinct with the life force it has deliberately fostered in its younger members."

Lord Bessborough dwelt on the responsibility of the members of both the British Empire and those of each nation to develop its talent to the greatest possible extent. High among these talents he placed the love of literature.

"I do not need to remind you that with every turn in history there has earned the epithet 'great' there has invariably been associated some notable contribution to the general culture of Canada, if she is to do justice to herself and to the Empire, must continue so foster her own Canadian cultural development, and by that let it be understood, I do not mean only that she must merely keep in touch with the culture of other nations; I mean that she must water the cultural plants in her own garden, so that Canada's audible voice in literature, Canadian art, Canadian music and Canadian drama may develop as vigorously as those other more material interests which are equally part of the equipment of a great nation."

Lord Bessborough at the conclusion of his address said the time has come to see the little theatre repertory movement extended till it becomes Dominion-wide and concentrated in an annual dramatic festival. He believed such a movement of intellectual rivalry would promote good fellowship and create a feeling of national solidarity.

THE EPIGRAM

The epigram is not of weight,
Its pellet should be small;

With tantalizing verbal grace
Prose and verse it will outlace.

If you then ask me what it is Unhesitating, I say this:

On the wing."

INVESTIGATE DEATH

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 23 (CP)—Police are investigating the death of William Dockstader whose body was found in one of the stalls at Dufferin race track today. Bruises on the head and cuts about the face are the cause of the police enquiry Dockstader was about forty years of age, and as yet no explanation or symptom of the disease has been given. What it is no one seems to know but it seems regrettable to think that now not only do the deer have to submit themselves to the annual barrage of thousands of blazing guns in the hands of amateur sportsmen, but also with this strange new malady to contend with.

The opinion has been advanced by many that it is only an attempt by Mother Nature, who had erred slightly in not taking into calculation the fact that she has thousands of years behind and has not taken into consideration the new high power guns developed for modern hunters, by her attempt at balancing the production of animal life which if left alone would result in the enormous increase such as Australia experienced with a pair of imported rabbits and which would eventually crowd the earth with animals of every description.

While we are on this subject it has been estimated by agricultural statisticians that if the rot of one single cod were allowed to develop perfectly and there were no accidents to happen any one egg it would be possible to walk across the Atlantic ocean from Canada to Great Britain on one solid mass of fish and without getting ones' feet wet.

Thus whether or not this new malady affecting our Canadian deer is just that attempt by Nature remains to be seen.

MINIMUM ON HIGHWAY

The danger of slow driving on the highly travelled highways has been recognized by the Ontario Legislature. A dwelling car incites cutting in on the part of those who have legitimate desire to get ahead, and when cutting in commences danger is always in the offing. Last session's amendment to the Highway Traffic Act makes it an offence punishable by a fine to drive so slowly that the normal progress of traffic is impeded.

In these fast days, when rain and mists are not unusual, it is difficult to drive with reasonable speed after dusk unless the headlights are in first-class condition. A motorist whose headlights have insufficient power to penetrate a light fog soon becomes a source of impatient cursing behind him. Under such conditions the weather adds greatly to the danger of those who try to pass him. For the safety of the highways it is necessary that only lights be reflected so that they do not blind the driver of approaching cars, but they shall be strong enough to give the driver behind them an adequate view of the roadway.

On the most densely travelled road leading out of Chicago the danger of slow driving has had a significant fact. The road which is only twenty feet in width, carries 28,000 cars on ordinary days and 50,000 on holidays and Sundays. The long processions which formed behind small drivers were responsible in the two-day holiday over Armistice Day for three deaths and injuries sufficiently serious to send 192 people to the hospital. Forced to this situation the police instituted the rule that any car which did not travel at forty miles an hour when there was clear pavement by day or night must get off the highway. In the thirty days which followed the end of the very height of the summer touring traffic, there was no fatal accident and the property loss is a total of twenty.

Chicago's experience illustrates the desirability of keeping the traffic moving. It also illustrates the danger from which cannot safely maintain a reasonable speed ought to be off the main highways.—Toronto Telegram.

NEW VOGUE FOR TATTOOING

London reports a revival in tattooing. It used to be that only soldiers, sailors and tramps had the tattooer's clientele. Now the London fashionables are the chief customers. During the past year people of all classes have sought his services.

The reason may be partly due to the fact that modern methods use an electric needle which is not painful — in fact, it produces a pleasant tickling sensation. Moreover, its work is not incradicable. Fashion decrees that people change the legend for his true lovers' knot, or hearts pierced by Cupid's arrows.

"There is a tradition that tattooing is part of illness. There is no medical ground for such a belief. But it is solemnly alleged that soldiers in India who have well-tattooed bodies rarely contract it.

Designs now are not confined to nautical devices and lovers' tokens. "Some people ask for the strangest designs." American visitors are said to want a view of London to take home as a tattooed souvenir. Perhaps the day will come when the globe-trotter will become a walking illustrated catalogue of advertisement on his journeys.—New York Times.

HEADING FOR MATRIARCHY

Mr. Sherwood Anderson, in the midst of a speaking tour, has decided the question of his Marion Democrat that his lecture contract includes the right to remain silent. He has no prejudice against him, but is talking and thinking on subjects not perhaps specially interesting to women." These subjects, he reveals, are machinery and newspapers.

Yet when one considers Mr. Anderson's prediction of a machine age dominated by women, his reason seems a little far-fetched. The testimony of his own lecture manager that the audience would probably convince him that women are tremendously interested in machinery and newspapers. But this is not necessarily prophetic of a matriarchal machine age, for the concern of women range from Gandhi to Ford, and from Moscow to Washington.

"I do not see how they are going to get any culture from me," Mr. Anderson remarks. This sounds like another unintentional understatement of the powers of the female sex, and also of his own ability.—New York Times.

WOMEN HOLD FIRST CARD PARTY

The Women's Conservative Association of Belleville held their first card party of the season last night, and it proved, as usual, to be a most successful affair. Mrs. Arthur Reid, the president of the club states that another gathering of a like nature, will be held in the near future. Mrs. Orphus Johnson and Miss Wannamaker were in charge of arrangements for the evening and Mr. R. H. Ketchenson acted as supervisor and director of the euchre part of the entertainment.

Eighteen tables of euchre and ten of which were played. The prize winners:

Euchre—Women—First, Mrs. Geo. Mossman 118; second, Mrs D. Batchelor, 116—First, Mr. Albert Adams, 114; second, Mr. W. Jordan.

Whist Contest— Mrs. John A. McPee, auditor, Mrs. Arthur Hill.

At the conclusion of the games delightful refreshments were served and an enjoyable social hour ensued.

The proceeds of evening will go to the civic unemployment fund.

CAMPAIGN IN HILLS

Tokyo, Nov. 24.—(AP)—A military drive into the rough country southwest of Mukden in Manchuria was begun today by several battalions of Japanese railway guards, it was announced today, against a force of Chinese bandits believed to be in the area and which has been estimated as high as 12,000.

MRS. M'KIVOR HIT BY TRAIN

Children Escape as Carriage is Hurled 15 Feet in Air

COBOURG, Nov. 24.—Knocked down by an Ontario motorist, Mrs. William McKivor, 73-year-old Cobourg woman, died of a fractured skull shortly after six o'clock last evening.

The driver of the car, John D. Rutherford of Oshawa, stated to the police that he was travelling east and was about to pass another car going in the same direction when he struck the woman, who was pushing a perambulator along the highway, with two children walking beside her. Mrs. McKivor was also proceeding east and was on the south side of the highway. The driver of the other car was Charles D. Salkeld of Montreal.

None of the children were hurt, although the perambulator was tossed 15 feet into the air. Mrs. McKivor died on the way to the hospital.

Embarrassing Moments

YOUTH FOUND AFTER 3 DAYS

Sudbury, Ont., Nov. 24 — Lost three days while on a hunting trip in the vicinity of French River, Tom Brandie, 18, of Sturgeon Falls, was found by two Indians after wandering for 33 miles according to word received by his parents there. He was none the worse for his experience, although he was tired and hungry. He strayed from a party of three others last Wednesday and had almost given up hope when he saw two Indians paddling down the river. He waved frantically to them and they drew up on shore.

BANQUET ROOM IS JUMPING FIELD

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 25 (By The Canadian Press)—The Earl of Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, was the guest of Clifford Sifton of Toronto at a luncheon yesterday in a local hotel in a scene reminiscent of the hunting field.

The hall in which the luncheon was held was converted into a tanbark arena. The room was encircled by a white fence shoulder high, at the four corners of which were open gateways. Hurdles and hedges were placed as if for a jumping contest.

Western Canada Takes Interest in Service Loan

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 25 (By The Canadian Press)—The feature of the first day's activities in connection with the national service loan was the volume of small applications in the Prairie Provinces," said an officer of the treasury today. "On the first day of a campaign we do not expect many dealers to report sales for they are too busy closing deals, but the loan has certainly caught the imagination of many workers, who not only signed up but also received interim certificates."

The rural sections throughout the Dominion are responding well to the appeal and particularly is this the case in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

CATTLE ARE STILL OUT

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 25 (By The Canadian Press) —As a result of continued mild weather, much livestock in Ontario is still out on pasture, according to the weekly report of the Provincial Department of Agriculture. Even in Peninsula district, Northern Ontario, all stock, with the exception of dairy cattle, is still in the fields.

Fall ploughing is completed throughout the province. Crops are in very good condition, although fears are expressed by some farmers that the warm weather will cause too rapid growth.

ONE MONTH IN JAIL WAS CARRYING GUNS

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 25 (By The Canadian Press)—Four aliens, appearing in court yesterday charged with carrying guns without a license, said they were hungry and jobless and preferred to go rabbit hunting rather than apply to civic authorities for relief. They had borrowed guns and started their hunt when they were taken into custody by Provincial Police. The four, William Szo, Alex Parage, Joseph Catal and Louis Meyer, were convicted and sentenced to one month in jail.

DEMONSTRATIONS BY BRITISH TROOPS

CONU, India, Nov. 25 (Canadian Press Cable via Reuters) — Indian villagers for the past few days have been treated to demonstrations by British troops, which form part of a plan to combine training on a big scale with a manifestation to India that the British army is prepared for any eventuality.

The troops who have been sent to outlying districts are marching back to their headquarters, camping en route, enthusiastic crowds of natives have been watching the manoeuvres and according a hearty welcome to the soldiers. Armored cars and aeroplanes have visited formerly disaffected areas carrying messages of greeting to the civic officials. In one area 10,000 former participants in the civil disobedience campaign watched the troops.

WHISTLE SAVES BOYS LOST IN BUSH

HORNEPAYNE, Ont., Nov. 25.—Two 17-year-old Hornepayne lads, Lawrence Bucknell and George Goodfellow are glad that trains have whistles.

While out hunting last Friday they strayed off their course and as night fell they were hopelessly lost in the bush. It was raining, and in the dark they could find no shelter. Search parties were sent out but they had to give up. Then about 3:00 a.m. the lads heard a train's whistle. From it they found their bearings.

AN EIGHT WITH EVERYTHING . . . FOR EVERYBODY

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

She slipped out of it and stood staring vaguely before her till Hugh almost shook her. "Here you are, miss!"

He almost snatched the coat from her. "Why did she want to look so nice?" he asked himself irritably. Jealousy was such a useless thing to cry in the world Priscilla had ever let anything in him at all was wasting. But you never knew what something in women would be capable of next. One comfort—she never was going away.

He turned on his heel with a jerk to the library.

He had never resorted to her that she would come down until he heard a step on the hall floor. She was just now a little nervous and uncertain.

"I couldn't wait. The time is so short, shorter than I believed when wrote you. I got a letter from-she mumured hastily, as if to go on an earlier boat—on Friday. It hasn't give a chap much time; I'm afraid he'll be holding me handcuffed. "How do you, Priscilla?"

"Very well, thank you. And you?" He laughed. "Well at the moment I'm not quite sure if I'm on my head or my heels. Everything has happened so quickly. A week ago it was all so much in the air, I hadn't any real hope of anything, and now I'm for the job I'd—and then like a bolt from the blue the news came—"

"You never told me anything about it."

"I was afraid to. I've heaped so much before and been disappointed. You got my letter?"

"Yesterday. I wrote to you and posted it this morning."

She moved away from him and sat down on the edge of the big chair. "It's good news Clive. It's the chance you've been waiting for. Do you think so? East Africa's a long way off."

She forced herself to smile. "Not nowadays. The world's getting so small, and you always wanted to travel."

"Yes." He looked a little downcast, almost as if she was disappointed by him in some way. Then with an effort he roused himself. "I know was like this. I've always set out there with the same company; he seems to like it well enough."

"It's a wonderful climate, isn't it?" Priscilla said dully.

There was a silence, then Weston said abruptly: "I didn't come to talk about the climate."

INSTALMENT IV.

Priscilla moved a little but she did not speak and Clive went on resolutely. "You know quite well what I came to say, what I came to ask you. You know you have been waiting to say it for weeks, only I had nothing to offer you. I haven't much now, but I'm told that a man who will work hard and can stand it, there's a chance of a good deal of future—a bigger chance than I'd ever hoped for. Lawson's going the fellow I spoke of just now has his wife out there with him. It's not she's quite happy. Of course, it's a very different life from this country but I thought—if you cared—" He threw up his head with a sudden defiant gesture.

"You do care. I know that, and you'll come out to me won't you, Priscilla? As soon as I can look around and find some kind of home. It won't mean waiting long, and even if it does—" He laughed suddenly. "I was in such a funk coming up from the station, I was imagining all sorts of things, and then as soon as the door opened and you came in—"

With a sudden swift movement Clive dropped on his knees beside her, encircling—her with his arms.

"It's the dream come true at last," he said, his lips on her hands. "I thought it was never coming and I stood quietly looking at him.

"I cannot marry you," she said.

She saw the sudden look of shock in his eyes, and for a moment her courage almost failed her.

They had waited so long for this moment had grown so much in the day when his ship would come home. Almost nothing definite had been said between them they had both entered into the only thing keeping them apart was the fact that he had nothing to offer her. And now—

Priscilla shook her head helplessly.

"It's so difficult to explain. Perhaps I've changed, I'm sorry if I are hurt, but—"

He put his hands on her shoulders, forcing her to turn and look at him. "You mean you don't love me?"

Her eyes fell. "Not well enough," she whispered. "I—I've met some one fonder than I am of any one else."

For an instant they stood. His hands dropping from her shoulders, Priscilla had the curious feeling that she was like a sinking ship being held back by the undertow, feeling that grip and that vain pull relaxed her hold, and she was being dragged down and let the waters close over her head.

She had said she did not love him and that enough! But she had also forced the words from her lips when all she wanted in the world was his love. She had written him his letter still rang in her heart—I shall be coming home for good. All the company have their wires with them now. I wonder how you would like that part of the world?

"Any part of the world—anywhere, if only you are there—"

He turned away, and seemed to say to him, but they were words which could never be said.

Weston's strong hands slipped from her shoulders. She gave a little shuddering sigh, almost as if a back again into the chair. He had known that it was coming—he all to not love him well enough! She heard him walk the length of the room, but she just sat there dumbly with her eyes on the hands folded in her lap.

Weston was standing staring down at her, white-faced and still.

Twice he tried to speak, but no sound came—then at last he said in his hurried journey from London he had asked himself how he could do it this thing happened, and yet in his heart of hearts he had believed it would happen. He had been so sure of Priscilla's love as he broke again—because it had not been wrong.

He found his voice with an effort "In your letter—what did you say in your letter?"

"Only—that I was glad about your good luck."

He looked around the room with dazed eyes. Just a little while back Priscilla's life, the unequal struggle, the fight against poverty, and he had imagined that with his coming it would be happiness for her to walk out of it all into the sunlight of his love.

They had spent so many hours together he could not believe that she thought they were just forgetable of the years since he had known and loved her. He had been content to wait, confident that she felt as he did, and now—it was all at an end. On the day when he went on board he would be as dead to her as eternal exile instead of, as he had dreamed to the gateway of a great happiness.

He moved stiffly.

"I'll go. I'm sorry I came. I ought to have guessed that you couldn't really—and then with sudden revulsion of feeling he caught her hands dragging her to her feet.

"Say you dont mean it, my dear. Say you're just playing with me. I've waited so long for you, and now—Priscilla, for God's sake say it's not true. You do love me you must! Marry me my dear, and we'll be happy."

But even as he held her, he felt her body stiffen against him, and how she turned her face away. He let her go, and stepped back, standing hard.

"Well," he said, almost stupidly.

Priscilla covered her face with her hands. "Try to forgive me, Clive."

"Forgive you?" He gave a little short laugh, and then as if unable to trust himself further, turned on his heel and left her.

Priscilla did not move. She heard the shutting of the door and his step across the hall; then with a little cry she sprang to her feet. She ran across to the window and pulled the curtain back on one side.

She saw Clive's tall figure striding away down the drive. He was walking out of her life.

Well, it was her own fault. She had sent him away because of an absurd fit of quixotism; because like the heroine of an old-fashioned novel she wanted to save her brother and the family name from disgrace.

It was strange how little she really felt, like a sense of amusement at herself for having chosen a heroic role. She felt instead in need of a man whom she honored and loved.

She was at the bend now. She lifted a trembling hand as if to knock on the window—as if to open it and cry after him to come back. Then she knew that already she was too late—he was lost to sight.

She turned away, and in every limb, and went back to the warmth of the fire. She had burned her boats. No use weeping for the past.

Canadian Pacific is Leader in Team Work And Good Will With Organized Labor Bodies

Nearly 45 years ago, the Canadian Pacific set the pace for all the other railroads on the American continent, by completing the first known type agreement for railway employees, in the establishing of a schedule of regulations and rates for employment. Thus, today, the fruit of the pact of 1886 is still being harvested.

Similar experiences can be culled from many other branches of organized railway work. For example, Hon. G. D. Robertson, Minister of Labor and for many years vice-president of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, says:

"During the last ten years of this railway's operation it experienced most serious and difficult problems of a financial nature, and in no way quicken was unable to get more liberally with its employees than it did. Beginning about 1890, however, the employees felt that the railway, then being well established and making splendid progress was substantial assistance from government sources, should give consideration to the employees' welfare as well as to itself. The employees, recognizing this fact, through their elected representatives negotiated with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to establish contractual relations covering working conditions and rates of pay. Thus the Canadian Pacific railway was the first railway in Canada to extend general recognition and the principle of collective bargaining and union recognition to its employees.

"For about 50 years, or 1886 to 1918 the Canadian Pacific Railway has been foremost of all railways in Canada in its treatment of its employees, and during the past 13 years has been closely co-operated with other railways, thereby standardizing and stabilizing the whole railway wage situation". The picture shows W. L. Stevens, a C.P.R. man with 44 years of service, who has been appointed to the position of Vice-President in charge of labor relations between the company and its employees could be found son G. W. Stevens, who has been 19 years with the C.P.R., and Clifford H. Stevens, aged 12, who bids fair to be the representative of the fourth generation on the footplate. What more eloquent testimony of labor relations between the company and its employees could be found

"He's an old bunkey! Hugh interjected his stint afterward. "I know perfectly well he's already been deciding to have the house done over, and new gates."

Hugh himself was comfortably affluent. The little affair" as he chose to call it, between himself and Dawson, had been carefully adjusted, and he was already contemplating eating his humble-pie-in-law for a "loan."

Priscilla knew nothing about anything. He let his sister know that he considered her extremely foolish, even while he carefully saw to it that his friends and acquaintances knew that his father had strongly opposed the match.

"Corbie's all right. He's a good fellow," he said in his insufferable way. "I don't exactly own Bert. Still, if Priscilla fancies him—"

A dozen times Priscilla had almost written to Clive and told him the truth. Parting with him would not have seemed so terrible had she only been able to tell him the reason she had given him. Surely Clive would never have understood or have allowed such a reason. He had never liked Hugh, and he would have known, would have sent earth to destroy her sacrifice.

And now it was too late. Clive had escaped on Jonathan, and in a few hours Clive would be beyond recall.

But Priscilla believed in playing the game. She had given Clive up for his own good, and she would not be unfair to him. She would not be unfair to Hugh, who had been kind to Jonathan; she had tried to show interest in their future lives together. If only he had not been so humble with her! His gentleness always left her with a sense of shame and impatience. And today she would have to tell him his mother.

Heathcliff's father had already been to see Priscilla's father, and the two men had had a somewhat unfortable half hour together in the library.

Priscilla asked no questions about it. It mattered so little after all, what her father or Jonathan felt—or thought of each other. But she was surprised to see Jonathan in a state in which Jonathan himself had said he hoped never to see his mother in. I'm afraid she isn't a very happy woman.

"Are you very fond of her?" Priscilla had asked him, and had seen him embarrassed. "I'm afraid I'll be answered awkwardly, "I try to be."

She put on her prettiest frock to go to tea with Mrs. Heathcliff, and in her heart she felt a little nervous. She was a big, over-dressed woman who seemed to live in an atmosphere of expensive motor cars and superfluous food.

"I think I'd like to go alone," she had said to Hugh, when he suggested calling for her. "You may come later and fetch me, if you would like."

To be walked through the lanes in the autumn sunshine to the big, red house that seemed so out of place in the quiet, old village, she felt very small and insignificant as she sent the dignified manservant who admitted her across the big hall to the drawing-room.

Portraits of alleged ancestors stared down at her from the walls, and her feet seemed to sink into the thick carpets.

"This was money—all this expended by my grandeur. She found herself wondering what Jonathan had thought of the shabby Moorland House when he first sighted, realizing that probably he had never thought about it at all. He was not just like his father and mother; he had been kind to Priscilla that day. He hated ceremony and display.

Mrs. Heathcliff came announced in her usual way, rather like a queen. As she walked forward into the room, enormous, pink and white flowers —that was her first impression—Priscilla's heart suddenly rose from a couch by the fire and Jonathan's mother was there.

She was almost absurdly overdressed, and Priscilla thought Priscilla did not see it. She saw only that Jonathan had his eyes that met her own, and heard only the enormous reflected in the voice that said, "Priscilla, my dear! Kind of you to come."

"It was very kind of to come," Priscilla said.

She took the hand with its many rings that was offered her, and found herself sitting in a chair next to Jonathan's mother was a tall, powdered chest. Mrs. Corbie's

"I hope we are going to like each other," she said, with a little smile. "There's not many people who like me, Mrs. Corbie seemed surprised into being natural, and then quite suddenly she burst into tears.

Wealth and her husband's growing indifference had taught her that it was not at all the right thing to show emotion of any sort, but Priscilla was overcome with pity. Priscilla put her arms round her and tried to comfort her, wiping her own eyes with the dainty handkerchief.

"Oh, don't cry! Please don't cry! I always mad you've thought of my own," Jonathan's mother sobbed as if he had come among the would have been kind to me and loved me. And I'm always crying. I'm sorry. Jonathan married he'd bring home a nice girl I could be friends with, but I'm afraid she isn't a very happy woman.

"Are you very fond of her?" Priscilla had asked him, and had seen him embarrassed. "I'm afraid I'll be answered awkwardly, "I try to be."

Cold Insurance

He carries it with him, ready for just such times. That little box of Aspirin tablets. If he catches cold, what of it? Aspirin will stop it. If his throat feels sore, he will end the soreness with one good gargle made from these tablets.

Dangerous complications can follow the neglect of "a common cold!" Every case of tonsilitis began with "just a sore throat!" It's a wise plan to take Aspirin after any undue exposure to bad weather, or whenever there is any chance that you've caught cold. Aspirin checks a cold before it has run its course, and how it does banish the aches and pains caused by colds, neuralgia, neuritis, lumbago, and even rheumatism.

Aspirin will insure your comfort through the worst cold season. The more susceptible you are to colds, the more you need it. Sold at drug stores. Made in Canada.

a bit sad about it at first. I'd heard that you were stuck-up, and I hardly probably look down on me the way Jonathan does—"

"Oh, no," Priscilla said warmly. "And you mustn't say those things about Jonathan. I'm sure he is very fond of you both and of the success you've been."

Mrs. Corbie shook her carefully coiffured head sadly.

"I'd always meant to be a success," she said. "I'm just the same as I always was, only I've got more money and I've gone on and left me behind. Oh, I know it's true. I knew it as soon as we began to talk over each other. I'm only to-day we had some fried fish for lunch, all done up with a sauce that's gotten father most dreadful indigestion. It wouldn't have been like that if I'd cooked it. But I can't even go in my own kitchen—never have been since we lived here, except now and then to give orders to cook, and she's so superior. Thinks she's better than me, she does. The servants hate her all over her."

Priscilla did not know whether to laugh or cry. She found this woman pathetic and pitiable, and she realized that this was probably the first time in the years of their prosperity that she had had the chance to be herself really go, and unburden the load that had lain on her heart. It was not much to ask of life; just to be able to go into her own kitchen and be "up and going".

She said gently: "Don't you think we'd better have some tea? It will be getting cold. Would you like me to pour it out for you?"

"Make it nice and strong," Mrs. Corbie said, mopping her eyes. "Some lumps of sugar."

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 30. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

One by one the other warriors took up the chant and with half-bent, crouching bodies joined the dance. This signified their acceptance of the great white man. The women came, squatting about the circle, beating tom-toms and clapping hands. In the center sat Tarzan-of-the-Apes, now king of the Waziri.

The Faster and faster grew the pace of the dancers. Louder and louder, their wild and savage shouts. It was a terrible, primeval sight! Now Tarzan himself sprang to his feet and joined the wild ceremony. Among the glittering black bodies he leaped and roared, shaking his heavy spear in the same mad abandon as his fellow savages.

The last remnant of his civilization was forgotten. He was a primitive man to the fullest now, gloating in his kingship among those wild blacks. What would his fellow peers in the House of Lords have thought, had one pointed at this dancing giant and said: "There, my Lords, is John Clayton, Lord Greystoke!"

Or the lovely American girl, now watching the same moon, aboard the "Lady Alice," far to the west of Tarzan! Would she still have loved this savage warrior chieftain, dancing naked among his savage, naked subjects? As fate would have it, when the wild dance din rose highest, that beautiful yacht quivered from stem to stern and slowly sank into the Atlantic.

Convention Refused Request of 5 Millions From Gov't

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 25.—With representatives of Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan, the three maritime provinces the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce and various railway and shipping companies in attendance, the third annual convention of the Canadian Association of tourist and publicity bureaus opened yesterday the first of its two days of deliberation at Parliament Buildings. Under the chairmanship of Hon. Justice Arsenault, of the Province of P.E.I., matters of import connected with the promotion of the tourist and convention industry were discussed and future action planned.

Report was given of a proposal made by Premier J. S. Woodsworth that the Dominion Government appropriate $1,000,000 annually for five years to advertise Canada abroad, thus supplementing the work done by the various Canadian Transportation systems and the various publicity bureaus.

Although the Prime Minister replied that the request would depend upon the government at present precluded the undertaking of such a heavy obligation, hope was expressed that the decision was not final.

MUST HAVE 25 P.C. CONTENT

This is Necessary For Goods Entering Great Britain

London, Nov. 25 (Canadian Press Cable)—The Board of Trade fixed 25 per cent as the necessary Empire content of goods entering Great Britain from the Dominions if they are to qualify for the Empire Preferential Tariff free list drawn up as part of the anti-dumping act.

This means that exports from Canada to the United kingdom, running under the anti-dumping orders must contain at least 25 per cent of Canadian labor and materials to qualify for free admission.

The purpose of the new order, so far as Canada is concerned, is to prevent the Dominion being used as an assembly ground for United States parts which would subsequently be shipped to Great Britain as Empire products.

ADVOCATES A NEW ELECTION

Leader of Progressives Upheld in His Stand

TORONTO Cnti., Nov. 25.—(By the Canadian Press)—Participation of Hon. Harry Nixon, leader of the progressive party in Ontario, in the recent by-election campaign in South Wellington was supported by Provincial Progressives meeting here yesterday. Mr. Nixon spoke on behalf of D. Paul Munro, the Liberal candidate, who was elected.

"There should be a general election at once," said the Progressive leader. "The Henry Government secured office without the consent of the people. Since Mr. Hepburn became Premier, four by-elections, have been held in each of them the voters have expressed increasing want of confidence in the Government."

Canada's Population Over 10 Million

OTTAWA, Nov. 25.— With the population figures complete for three Maritime Provinces, Ontario and the three prairie provinces it would be well over the ten-million mark. With Quebec, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories not yet to come, the population is 8,787,125.

Facing these at the same figures as in the 1921 census, the total for the Dominion would be approximately 9,681,000, so that to reach 10 million all British Columbia and Quebec together would have to gain would be 319,000 and it is generally expected that their gains will be considerably more than that.

In 1900 Chicago began an extensive park development and soon had a total area of parks containing 1,887 acres. It was then known as the garden city.

A spirit winged and free, in times distrest
Stripped of our courage, brood? Or, taking flight,
Widen our vision and renew our might?

NOR' WESTER BARES TEETH

Boats on Great Lakes Scurry For Port as Storm Hits

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—Fortyseven vessels, all of the Great Lakes, bared its teeth and growled last night. And the few remaining boats in commission promptly took cognizance of the nor'wester's anger and rushed for port.

Sweeping across the wide expanse of Lake Superior at 45 miles an hour, the nor'wester, most dreaded wind of all, ruled, supreme. With a decided drop in temperature and the heavy wind, anchors were dropped in the lee of islands, and the boats, nearer port, tied up until the storm subsided.

In the sudden drop in temperature, indications are seen of an early close of the navigation season.

For several weeks now sailors have congratulated themselves on the excellence of the weather. But the biting breeze and nor'wester cannot last, they say, and yesterday's storm warning will be taken as the first of many to come.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 25.—A radio message from the late Stefansson, Arctic explorer, was received here yesterday by Mrs. Stefansson and Eli Pink from their sinking gasoline tug, five miles off Whitefish Isle in Lake Huron. The rescue was made in the lee of the latter island, which made it impossible to save the tug, the message said.

VANHORNE IS SENT TO TRIAL

Accused of Arson and Writing of Threatening Letters

Picton, Nov. 25—Leonard Vanhorne was committed for trial Tuesday on charges of arson and of writing threatening letters. Evidence was heard before Magistrate Cohean.

The charges were laid after accusers had received letters demanding that $200 be left in a certain place, otherwise their barns would be burned if he refused.

Provincial Constable Durnford testified that on May 30 he and Chief of Police Biddle and Constable Morrison went to Vanhorne's farm at Elmbrook, five miles from that village, where they interviewed letter posted in Picton in which $200 in cash was demanded. The letter stated:

"You want to do what I tell you or I will make it interesting for you. I will burn everything you have. Allow it to be known to anyone so you needn't think you can fingerprint me."

Plans were made at the Provincial Constable's office on one of the writer of the letters. Durnford testified. Vanhorne was instructed to leave a letter at the designated spot, and watch the spot watch, but the writer failed to appear. Another letter was received by Vanhorne, however, that the writer had watched the police try to trap him, and that he had other plans. "I'll get you some day," the letter ended.

Samples of Leonard Vanhorne's handwriting were taken. Alonzo Payne, Bessemville handwriting expert in his evidence today, stated that in his opinion, the writing as set by the same person. Chief Biddle and Constable Morrison substantiated this evidence. The first letter was received on Sept. 8, and the second one Sept. 12. The Vanhorne barn, with contents, was burned on Sept. 28, being only one of several conflagrations that neighborhood within a few weeks.

Testifying on the arson charge, Constable Durnford said that on Sept. 25, he was notified Vanhorne's barn was on fire. Accompanied by Chief Biddle and Constable Morrison, he visited the scene. They met Vanhorne standing in the road by the burning barn, and he stated he had been working by truck from Demorestville Village when he saw the fire. Only the complicated laser system.

Later he told Durnford that he had stopped while passing the barn to see if any doors were open. Two nights later Vanhorne was arrested and charged with arson. Before going to jail Vanhorne had asked him, said Durnford, if he could do anything if the ashes from his pipe had set the barn on fire. The constable made no reply, he stated in his evidence. Vanhorne was released on bail, and later a charge of writing threatening letters was laid. Further bail was granted.

ESTABLISHING WORK HABITS

By Constance Cameron

The many adults who get through life doing their work in a shoddy, hit-and-miss fashion are living proof of the fact that in childhood they never learned how to work.

"But learning how to work can wait until they're grown." I hear one object. It can, but it is too late then to have sewed the habit in; to have made it more than a superficial part of the individual's equipment.

Childhood should be composed largely of play, but play can be utilized to establish the habits of carrying activities through to a conclusion. A child can be allowed to play aimlessly or with a purpose, which later took him quickly into habits of executing tasks that can be differentiated from play by calling them "work." It is a false discrimination to me, for congenial work is play.

However, that is beside the point. The practical suggestion is that mothers allow children to take on work as the children ask for it, and they do ask for it only to be sent away, usually, with the excuse Mother can get along faster and easier alone!

The artful wife who wants to wipe dishes can start to learn the habit of concentration when her Mother even gives her the small job of drying a spoon, a pot of silver polish, a soft rag, a dry towel, and tells her that for the completed work will be a solid satisfaction and a contribution to the child as to whether the spoons need polishing, or merely to be wiped, and, let's say, in a place another little stone—that of judging as to the amount of work required on a given object, because useless motion is another action nor accomplishment.

A mistake we all make at times is that of overpraising a child for a task which anything but well done particularly well. We are apt to say, "That is lovely and you've helped Mother a lot," then have the child catch us an hour later doing his work over. There is a moment that he doesn't know then and there that we "fibbed" him and all we've been trying to build up fowers of desire for conscientious work is shattered in that moment.

Let your child try tasks that he can do with not too much effort; let him do them so that he is ready enough so that his energy will hold out until it is completed. Help him a little toward the finish if he tires, but let him feel the joy of that good, tired feeling—that glow which comes from putting a good lot of energy to finish a task. It is a glorious satisfaction, and it is a habit that all children deserve to have cultivated in them.

STARRY MANTLES

Of starry mantles hung on high
In the rich velvet of the sky
I sing; and I would sing of all
The wakes that starry mantles fall
Unseen, unheard, through ether space
In the soft silence of the night;
Of oceans when their thunders cease
And their wild leagues are lapped in peace;
Of inland waters, clear and cool,
Unruffled lakes in dreaming pool;
Of shyly-glinting leaves where trees
Are undisturbed by any breeze;
And, like brimmed waters in a cup
Of clear calm eyes when no tears well up.
For souls, whose quiet nothing mars
Put on by night a robe of stars.

APPRECIATION

A. M. Moorman.

Dear Madam:

Just a few lines to let you know we have received from the person to obtain your jar of fruit from the "Good Will" car assigned them Saturday.

It certainly was wonderful of you people to be so generous to us when we were so badly in need.

It seemed like a gift from home as my home was in Hermiga Mills, Ont., and that of my husband was Bexton, Ont.

We have been in the West 21 years and this is the seventh crop failure in succession so you see we know what hard times mean.

I have a family of six, and my fourteen year old boy has never seen a pound until we got one out of the car.

I am enclosing a clipping of thanks which expresses our appreciation far better than I can.

Thanking you again however, I am

Yours truly,

Mrs. A. Ross Kearns.

Apples and fruit, fruit and apples, who hasn't received some of one kind or another this fall. While a warm garment is more fashioned, or quilt has been pieced and quilted in anticipation of the chilly days ahead of us) and sent to homes where the need is great at this time. These things have been made possible through the munificence of thoughtful, kind and loving people who in this type of need have stretched out helping hands from over the great lakes, across the wide open spaces of the prairies, over the mountains, from the east and west, north and south to the humble and village, from officials and statesmen, have come help, generosity, and the spirit of unselfishness to their fellowman all wishing to share in this in some way or great, proving themselves brotherly of the Great Creator.

We, the women of the prairie wish to thank them for the many cases of need we and our children enjoy, through the kindness extended to us at this time. Although their efforts dark days have been made brighter, their hearts become lighter, scant cupboards have been replenished, their cases have been made warmer, little bodies have snuggled into warmer clothing and tired hands have tucked the warm quilt more closely around the wee one as the good night kiss was given. The itty ropy apple was put in the lunch pail, one for each one of the kiddies, while the mother, so grateful for them, pressed the cores into place, the children, exclaiming, "Oh, boy, that's some lunch today."

Kindness, not a big word, but how significant in the meaning that one word can create ties and cement them, ties which never can be broken nor forgotten.

ARE RECIPIENTS OF FINE GIFTS

On Monday evening about one hundred and twenty friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. Everett Brickman to present their son Mr. Gerald Brickman and bride to be with a handsome china dinner set. Mr. Gerald Brickman is bride to be.

A social hour was enjoyed by the assembled guests then Mr. Ray Wyatt acted as gathering to order and asked Mr. Gerald Brickman and Gladys Hanley to take their position. Mrs. Kenneth Green read and address and Messrs Earl Fox and Kenneth Green made the presentation.

Mr. Gerald Brickman very ably replied thanking all for their gifts and inviting all to call again. The young ladies of the neighborhood then assisted in serving grapes, bananas, apples, candy and pop-corn.

During the balance of the evening the crowd was graciously entertained by Miss Gladys Argill, Mr. Jim Argill and Miss Geraldine Wrenn which all present enjoyed until the small hours of morning. The party broke up wishing future bliss and prosperity.

The address was as follows:

Dear Gerald,

We, your associates and neighbors have gathered to invade your home this evening learning of your contemplated change in status, to personally convey to you, our good wishes for a happy and prosperous wedded life. We here bear testimony to the satisfaction we find in you as a friend and neighbor and you will be in our midst, and we assure you that on times when we shall return to make your residence among our pleasant. Let us hope that our relationships will ever be marked by fraternity and good will.

Dear Gerald, you have a good friend in your childhood and we have followed you from boyhood up through manhood and interest and now in this most important step contemplated, namely the beginning of a home, we wish you God speed. But more especially we here with you Gladys, feel the warmth of our affection and by your side we feel sure you will bring a new faith and hope to our hearts and homes, for it must still be said "The measure of one's life alone is the measure of our community."

In life's pathway, not always rough or smooth, may the star of love ever guide you, whether on land or horizon; as you tread the upper slopes of the journey may a hand be placed on yours and a voice be heard to say "Fear not, I will guide thee" and at last as the journey westward, may the golden gates stand ajar and the voice of the Master say to you "Welcome Home."

As a token of our esteem please accept the china assembled, the spode of silver, and glass marmalade jar on behalf of Centre, Victoria, Albury and Belleville Friends.

Signed, Earl Fox, Kenneth Vinan Green.

30 DAYS IN JAIL

SUDBURY, Ont., Nov. 25.—By the imposition of a sentence of 30 days in jail was imposed yesterday by Judge Edmond Proulx on Rene Lalonde, Sudbury taxi-driver, convicted of manslaughter charges. Lalonde was charged with severely beating a man on the Garson Road here. The penalty is lenient with you," said Judge Proulx in pasting sentence.

You Can't Have Everything!

by Lilliac Mitchell

Emily Nason met Roland at a writers' club. Emily wrote. Oh, wrote badly, terribly, yet. But she would. Of course she would. In fact, they all would, they assured each other at the club, just as soon as they could persuade a few editors to forget the commercial side of literature, circulation and all that. Editors must be uplifted a good deal.

As far as that went, Roland Purves hadn't published any of his poetry - yet. But he would. Oh, yes, indeed, he assured Emily who brought he was romantic-looking. Mentally she contrasted Roland with her husband, Paul. The very contrast a woman enjoys in the room Roland Purves was on his feet. His bow had a hint of Paris in it; his eyes dreamed of Venice and gave vague promise to Emily. Paul never condescended to rise when she entered the room. Certainly. He seldom even smiling flashed in and out. He always did when they had guests but the smiling was a little weary after a long day at the office and his bow was merely utilitarian. Paul was perfunctory.

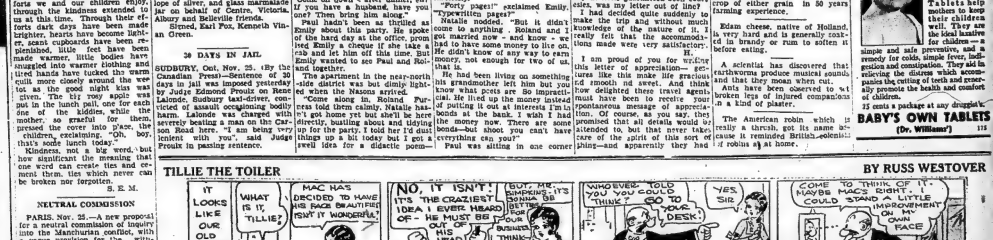
Paul teased Emily about her writing. He grumbled about having to go to the sub-station for postage stamps. "Say, Emily, you don't want to remark crisply, "if you're going to make a business of this writing stuff why don't you buy envelopes by the box and two cents stamps by the sheet of one hundred?"

"You don't understand, Paul," Emily would respond, "I can't be sure of it should see a whole sheet of stamps staring up at me. To be so upset I couldn't think of a word to write. No, it's much better to buy them as I need them."

The next time she asked Paul to go to the sub-station he triumphantly held out a hundred from his drawer in the desk. There we are."

No, Paul was all strictly business. He had no thoughts of art and of uplifting sordid editors who wanted to print the public just what the public wanted. As if the public knew the difference between art and - the other thing!

And now Emily was dressing very carefully in a new Parisian model. "I'm flinging a party tomorrow night at my place," he had said to her. "Come on down - after dinner, eh? You have a husband have you one? Then bring him along."



Paul hadn't been thrilled as Emily about this party. He spoke of his hard day at the office, prom ised Emily a check for the next day and let him off this time. But Emily had to have Paul and Roland together.

The apartment in the near-north side district was but dimly lighted when the Nasons arrived.

"Come along in, Roland Purves told them jovially. Making himself comfortable. Lalonde was charged with severely beating a man on the Garson Road here. The penalty is lenient with you," said Judge Proulx in pasting sentence.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Copyright, 1931, by Cornelius Beeckman

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. When you telephone a personal card with a gift to a friend, should one cross off the "Mr." or "Mrs." and merely show one writes something on the card?

2. Is there any difference if it is a wedding gift or some other gift?

3. A friend, shipped away and left her dog with me. She died afterward through her mother. It was a valuable dog, a present. Do I wait until I receive an announcement before sending a gift? Personally I am going to send my announcements.

R. C.

1. When we write a message on cross off the title from the name we write on the card.

If you are simply enclosing your card with the gift, there can be no point of crossing off the title because it is there. Under such circumstances, when you are sending a gift and a card, the receiver will write a message on the card and, of course, will not cross off the name.

A married woman, by the way, must cross off the entire name and not merely the husband's name, only the first name, below.

2. No. Whether we send a wedding gift, even to our close friends, it is always considered necessary to write a message on the personal card, the reason for the fact that the sending of the gift and the personal card carries its own message. But let me add that it is, of course, thoroughly correct to send a gift to friends when you are wish to, and many people do. It is a delightful way to show your wish. If you wish to send a gift, then, on the occasion of a birth and I am sure that your friend would like to know whether or not it was good form to have given it, to the tour conductor a letter expressing your wish to receive an extended meaning, of course, for the baby and its mother and enclosing baggage and for the satisfactory your gift. Personally, I

3. Personally, I can see no wrong in having sent in your letter, because it was a great relief to have been freed of such responsibilities, but, on the other hand, I would not slip in itself guaranteed each court of either grain in 50 years farming experience.

I had decided quite suddenly to go to Paris, and had no particular knowledge of the nature of it. I really felt that the accompanying items made were very satisfactory.

H.

I am proud of you for writing this letter of appreciation—gestures like this make life gracious and smooth and sweet. And think how much pleasure the receiver must have been to receive your letter and to receive your information. Of course, as you say, they promised that all details would be attended to, but you have taken care of the spirit of this sort of things—and pleasure they had of robbing us all home.

WOMAN HELD UP CARD GAME,

Mrs. J. R. Keogh Charged With Attempted Robbery

Cochrane, Ont., Nov. 25— Mrs. J. R. Keogh, of Montreal, who allegedly entered a club at Kenora and held up the members at the point of a gun, appeared in police court here today and was remanded until Nov. 27, for preliminary hear ing on a charge of attempted robbery.

Miss say the woman, fired a shot from a revolver which she was carrying and escaped with some money which was on the table. The shot struck the table but injured no one. One of the men present then seized her and held her until police arrived. Other members, police said.

Mrs. Keogh, who is 34 and the mother of two children, is the wife of a mill employee at Iroquois Falls.

Will Exceed Ten Millions

Ottawa, Nov. 25—With the population figures complete for the three maritime provinces, Ontario and the three prairie provinces, it would appear that the total population of the Dominion at the 1931 census would be well over the ten-million mark. With Quebec, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories, yet to come, the population will exceed ten millions.

Placing these at the same figures as the 1921 census, the total for the Dominion would be approximately 9,881,000, so that to reach 10 million all British Columbia and Quebec together would have to gain would be 319,000 and it is generally expected that their gains will be considerably more than that.

NO INTEREST IN TRADING

Toronto Stock Exchange Absolutely Devoid of Interest

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 25— Not in a long time has the Toronto Stock Exchange market been so utterly devoid of interest as it was this morning. Sales the first hour amounted to approximately 1,500 shares, which is at the rate of a 300,000 shares for a full day. With New York weak, rails at a new low and various industrial stocks breaking through to new record lows during the morning, it was only to be expected that inter-list-ed issues on the local market would show declines. However the losses were all very small and on the whole the market gave a good account of itself.

The floating, at this time of the new Dominion loan, is believed one of the chief reasons for the failing off in interest on the stock market.

Nickel, C.P.R., Brazilian, Massey Harris, Ford "A", Canada, Standard Paving, B. A. Oil lost 1-4 and 1-2 point each. Dominion Stores dipped below 18. Steel of Canada was unchanged. Imperial Oil was steady at 11 1-4 while International Petroleum was not called for trading. Smelters at 70 1-4 was unchanged.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Ont., Nov 25—Cattle 470. Active, 1-2 lower. Choice steers and heifers-overs totalled 900 head. Trade is slow with prices generally steady. A few choice butchers and weighty steers brought $6 to $6.25. Common and medium grades were draggy. Good cows and bulls sold up to $3.50. Store cattle were scarce with no good feeders offered.

Calves 150; calf trade was very dull with prices 1-2 cwt. Lower for the week. Tops sold at $7.00 with common vealers downward to $3.50.

Hogs 1300; hogs were unsettled with an easier feeling. Packers were bidding $4.50 f.o.b. for bacon or $5.10 weighed off car.

Sheep 1300; lambs were unsettled with no early sales. Bids were lower at $6.75 for best ewes and wethers. No sheep were sold up to 11 o'clock.

EAST BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 25— Hogs 1800; active to all interests; 12.25 higher; 130-210 lbs. 5.00 to 5.10; few 230-250 lbs. 5.00; pigs slow; steady; around 4.75.

Cattle 250; trade slow; steady to weak; cutter grades 1.50-2.75; steady; kinds down to 1.00; few plain grass steers weak to 25 lower.

VOTE 37 TO 32 TO DISSOLVE

Australian Election Will Be Held in January

Canberra, Australia, Nov. 25 (Canadian Press cable via Reuters)— The Commonwealth government today was defeated by five votes on a motion by J. A. Beasley, former Minister of Labor, to adjourn the House of Representatives.

Prime Minister T. H. Scullin at once announced the government would resign and that an election would be held probably in January. The vote on the motion for adjournment was 37 to 32.

Allegations had been made that Hon. E. C. Theodore, federal treasurer, had shown political bias in distributing unemployment relief and Mr. Beasley pressed for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the charges. The opposition decided to support the motion unless the government were able to prove the allegations false, with the result that a combination of Mr. Beasley's followers and the opposition gave a majority of five against the government.

Mr. Theodore made a complete denial of the charges and the Prime Minister declared he would neither grant a Royal Commission nor a select committee to conduct an inquiry into the charges.

Mr. Beasley then moved the adjournment of the House.

"You can have your election now and it's a mighty poor issue to fight on," the Prime Minister shouted across the floor of the Assembly.

Blockville Fur House Pillaged By Robbers Unknown to Police

BROCKVILLE, Ont. Nov. 25.— Furs with an estimated value of $15,000 were removed last night from the establishment here of Edward Reilly and Co., manufacturing furriers, by thieves who entered the premises by means of a rear cellar door and cut a panel from an upper door. Included in the loot were 30 fur coats. The contents of the interior were thoroughly ransacked and preparations were evidently made to blow the safe, the door of which was, however, found to be unlocked. Police are working on the case.

INTERLISTED STOCKS WEAK

Softness Apparent in all Stocks Listed at New York

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 25.—(Mining Lead)—Interlisted stocks led ground on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today, reflecting weakness on Industrial Boards. Trend was easier in the balance of the list, but a large percentage of issues failed to put in an appearance prior to midday.

In the higher-priced gold group Lake Shore firmed up 15 to $28.50, but Teck Hughes lost 10 to $5.15 and Granada Rouyn a couple to $1.64. Among cheaper stocks Kirkland Lake Gold was off a couple to 53 and Central Manitoba, Moffatt-Hall, Bidgood and Rip Lamont all fractionally below last night.

Chibougamau prospectors saw new activity and air-advance of 2 to 14 and International Nickel was firm around $10. Noranda fell 15 to $15.50 and Amulet a cent to 18. In the silver section Mining Corporation eased a couple to $1.43, while Chemical research, off another 4 to $2.65, showed the only change in the oils.

FAITH AND CONFIDENCE

FAITH in itself and CONFIDENCE in its future are attributes of a nation's greatness. They bring independence to the individual, bind communities into a national unit of mutual interest, create a spirit of well-being and prosperity throughout the land and establish abroad the prestige of the nation.

The Dominion of Canada National Service Loan is Canada's symbol of faith and self-confidence. It is Canada's challenge to world conditions. Its success bridges the impasse of credit adjustments which this country, in common with others, must make.

The Loan offers a gilt-edged investment. A quick and wholehearted response by the Canadian people will impress the world.

BIGGEST UPSETS OF SCHEDULE

Bruins Beat Canadiens 7 to 1| and Maroons Beat Falcons 6-1

Toronto, Oct. Nov. 26 (CP) The two biggest upsets of the 1931-32 National Hockey League campaign occurred in the east last night, when Boston Bruins and the Montreal Maroons returned to their home ice and handed Les Canadiens of Montreal and Detroit Falcons 7-1 and 6-1, respectively. Although both home clubs were conceded a better than even chance of gaining a victory in last evening's tussle neither was expected to win by such wide margins. The other game on the nights programme resulted in a tie when a fast winning goal by the Chicago Black Hawks gave them a split point verdict with New York Rangers.

Breathtaking Defeat

Dropping a 3-0 decision to Canadiens in Montreal Saturday, who they were outplayed for the greater part of the sixty minutes, Boston Bruins returned to the Hub City last night and handed the Flying Frenchmen one of the most humiliating defeats they have met in recent years. From the initial session the Bruins banged and face-off the Habitant and scored three times before Canadiens could get organized. They piled up a two goal lead in the first period, with Dit Clapper and both beal Rainsworth and added to this in the second frame when Oliver, Clapper and Toohey all found the net. Coming on a rainy pays at the opening of the third session the Bruins again added to their lead, when Cook took a pass from Chapman and made the score 6-0. Harry Oliver, brilliant winger of the Bruins, gave a colorful display of skating shooting, when on a pass from Sarzy he caged his third goal of the game. The Montreals fought desperately to avoid a shutout and when Manager Cecil Hart sent five forwards on the ice the Frenchmen were rewarded with a goal. Newell Kerrett taking Delatt pass out from the corner to beat Thompson.

Falcons Downed

Minus the services of their stalwart left winger, Hec Kilrea, whose eye was injured in Sunday night's game against Americans at New York, Detroit Falcons invaded Montreal last night hoping to gain two points from the Maroons. Their hopes, however died, when the Maroons put on their great scoring bee of the season and registered no less than 6 goals to their opponents one. Play was fairly even throughout the early period with the Montrealers netting a 2-1 lead at the end of the second period. Coming back for the final stanza, the Maroons went on the attack and soon the Stewart-Seibert-Smith combination's fast passing and rammed home three counters within 16 minutes. Seibert, incidentally, a product of the International league soon gave the Montreal club a fifth goal lead, when he swung in fast to take Jimmy Ward's pass in front of the Falcon cage.

Not Yet Defeated

Chicago Black Hawks still remain the only undefeated team in the N.H.L. by virtue of their last minute tie with New York Rangers last night. The Rangers had the lead when Bun Cook, left winger of the Blueshirts, scored on a pass from Boucher, the Hawks threw five men into the attack in the closing minutes of the game and were rewarded with the tying counter when Coutour beat Roach on a pass from Jerry Lowery. The Rangers' lone counter came in the first period of the first period when the Black Hawks were short-handed. A series of long passes about the centre ice zone and a shot on net by Cook gave the New Yorkers their only goal. Goaltenders continued to rule the ice. Shortly after his return he was injured when he was hurled to the ice in a collision with Earl Seibert. Abusive talk to the referee toward the end of the third period cost "Stew" Adams, Hawk forward a fine.

MARLBORO8 WIN 3-3

Toronto, Nov. 25 (CP) — Superb goal tending by Claude Harris last night enabled Varsity to beat Varsity 3-2 at the University of Toronto arena, and go into second place in the Senior Ontario Hockey Association group. The two Toronto teams battled in a close and keen contest until the final whistle.

Although there was a drop of 16,000,000 pounds in world coal consumption in the last year the United Kingdom drank 10,000,000 more.

By The Observer

Coach Tommy Thomson put new pressure upon a real veteran's sense of practice last night in preparation for the game Saturday against the Toronto Marlboros. All the players were out to practice, and Thomson was travelling at top speed all evening.

The Marlboros played to nearly two thousand people up at Oshawa last Friday evening. The game was tied in a two all tie after ten minutes overtime had been played. "Army" Armstrong, one of Belleville's ex-athletes, was the referee and Cooke and Cook officiated. 11 of which were netted in the overtime period. The scoring summation tits to show the fans that the Iron Dukes have their hockey team forward.

Belleville will see one of the finest teams that has ever worn Marlboro colors with the sensational Pill. Stel in goal; sturgeonne Kitchen and Mitchell as defencemen; and Shill, Gray, O'Brien, Hamilton Mac, Dougan and Chester Steele, former Niagara Falls star, as the forward line.

All the frills will be added for the opening game, we are told will be there, the Mayor will officially face the puck and a gala time will be had by all. Even the Toronto newspapers are talking about the battle between the Belleville cubs and the Marlboro "Iron Dukes."

The intermediates put in a real hour's practice and indeed have a hockey team than they did a week ago. They are slowly becoming knit-wise and the older players are uncovering their bag of tricks to try and fool their opponents. Each time one of the players body-checks an opposing forward the tall-birds get a real kick out of it.

If both teams had one more real high class defence men we would just hesitate in saying that they would be found in the finals but at present the corners there is a long season ahead of them and most anything may happen.

Harry Robinson had his two scrapers, Jack Lang and Fred Parry, over at the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium yesterday afternoon this gave Robinson an hour's work-out on the track, skipping rope and physical exercises and finished with four rounds of fast boxing. He then climbed down deep to the shower baths and they looked to be in the very best condition for Monday night.

Bill Rankin assured us last night that the wrestling card will be here on Monday night next Maichmaker Corcoran has not as yet told us who will meet in fall card but assured Mr. Rankin that there would be a real husky heavy weight bout for the finals.

KING ALBERT BOOED, HISSED

Demonstration By Students As He Visits St. Trond

Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 25— King Albert was booed and hissed yesterday at St. Trond, in the Province of Limburg, where he visited a Catholic institute, and mounted police were called to help him escape from a hostile crowd.

A crowd including students of the University of Louvain and Flemish Nationalists gathered along the King's route and shouted "Down with the King, long live Brenac!" The latter is Dr. August Brenac, Flemish separatist, who helped to establish a Flemish university at Ghent with German aid during the Belgian occupation of Belgium in the war.

The United States now lags far behind most of the other first-power nations in development and experimentation in the field of high speeds for airplanes.

Finger blotters, to be worn when signing many documents, have appeared in Germany.

Canada is losing one of its most noted athletes, temporarily at least. Dave Komonen, Finnish marathon star, will leave next month for his homeland at the behest of the Finnish Olympic Committee, to train for the 1932 Olympiad. Finland, the home of Nurmi, Ritola, Ericsson and a host of other great runners took reports of Kohonen's early progress in Canada indifferently, but when he registered his marvellous victory in the Canadian Amateur Championship last August, Finnish authorities began to discuss him. Then Dave scored his third marathon victory in seven months at Port Chester, N. Y., definitely deciding the Olympic committee of the proper course of action. So he is returning to his own country, where employment will be found for him, and where he will enjoy the best possible training conditions. And what a break for Dave! Out of work for a whole year in Canada, his only revenue coming from the few pairs of running shoes he made for marathon friends, the profit from which even if he had made them until he was blue in the face, would never have got him listed in Bradstreet's.

ANNOUNCE POLICY SOON

London, Nov. 25—Ramsay Mindald Ramsay MacDonald told a delegation of members of the House of Commons yesterday that announcement of the government's agricultural policy would be made before the House rises for the Christmas recess. Questions of a wheat quota and a tax on luxury imports would receive the immediate consideration of the cabinet, added the Premier.

SCREEN STAR SERIOUSLY ILL

Peritonitis Follows Operation For Ruptured Appendix

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 25—Suddan development of peritonitis rendered critical last night the condition of Tom Mix, cowpuncher star of the screen and circus, after an operation yesterday for a ruptured appendix.

His physician, Dr. R. Nichol Smith, broadcast a call for special serum, which was found in the laboratories of Stanford University. An aeroplane started south with a supply and a motorcycle awaited at the Glendale airport to rush the bacteriophage to the Hollywood hospital.

"Mix's condition is critical and will remain so for at least 48 hours" said Dr. Smith.

Mix was stricken Monday. The operation was performed two hours later.

SCHMELING AND WALKER MEET

May Have Championship Tilt in California in February

(By Edward Neil, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 25.—The discussion centred around the possibility of Max Schmeling, heavyweight champion, defending his title in Los Angeles in February against Mickey Walker, the toy bulldog, who has been biting the ankles of the big fellow.

William F. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden and promoter of all boxing business from the time Tex Rickard died until Jimmy Johnston stepped into the breach, cleared his throat and announced as follows:

"If I have anything to say about that — and it's just possible I will — Madison Square Garden will promote no fight between Schmeling and Walker anywhere in California this winter."

"And another thing," he added "if Jack Dempsey fights this winter or any other time, remember this, Madison Square Garden and not Los Angeles as he did in the days of Tex Rickard."

During a period of forty-seven years there has been until April days of national thanksgiving were unknown in the United States.

GAME WON BY OLYMPICS 3-2

Steele and Goldsworthy Combine For Winning Tally

TORONTO, Nov. 25 (CP)—A last minute overtime goal from the stick of Frank Steele, sturdy right winger, with only seven players on the ice, gave local Olympics a 3-2 home victory over Cleveland Indians last night. The former city athlete piled up an early lead in the first and second periods, when Blue McCabe netted two goals on combination plays from Steele and Johnny Newman. The Indians fought back strongly, however, in the dying minutes of the second session and reduced the lead when Williams scored unassisted.

A tie game looked almost certain as the overtime session rapidly drew to a close but a great combination play by Goldsworthy and Steele gave the Olympics their winning tally. Steele was exceptionally rough throughout and in the overtime period, five players were in the penalty box, three serving major penalties and two minors, when Steele and Goldsworthy combined for the final goal. The Olympics now occupy second place with them in a tie for the league leaders with Buffalo Bisons. One game is scheduled for tonight when Buffalo Bisons meet Minor Bulldogs, champion of the international league winners in Windsor.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Capitol

LARGE AUDIENCE ENJOYS KEATON AND VAUDEVILLE

Joy and contentment pervaded the Capitol theatre last night when the lucky house of entertainment was the medium of a big comedy program.

The feature presentation "Sidewalks of New York", starring that frozen-faced-farceur, Buster Keaton, completely favoured and Chaplin's "City Lights", and some of the boisterous comedy was in store.

The story is simple, dealing with a millionaire's attempts to reform a gang of youthful hoodlums, but the leader happens to have a sister in whom Buster is more than interested.

Both story matters little. It is the unrelenting stream of comedy situations ,the touch of the real old-fashioned slap-stick comedy, and the comic boiling "match and opera" comedy that makes the greatness of that Buster slant on the funny. Keaton has built for the boys, which makes "Sidewalks of New York" the best comedy Keaton has seen in months.

Vaudeville Contest

The Amateur Vaudeville Contest was a complete success, and the audience voted him second prize of fifty dollars.

Norman Banfield in song with banjo, pleased the audience to the tune of two dollars, the third prize.

Clifford Bennett played Rubenstein's famous melody on the piano, and as was mentioned in yesterday's issue of this area, a hard work and finished product must be anything. Clifford will go far, because here we have a rarity, a rustic with a long line of promising musical works. His failure to secure a prize is in my opinion, one of the cycles in which everything moves will sound the death knell of jazz and the student of the classic will again be to the fore in the near future.

Ed. Gascoy tackled "Sonny Boy" on his violin with delightful results, and it is regretted that there were not enough prizes to go around.

Themselves Contest

The "Impersonate Self" is the prize worthy slogan today. Manager Smith announced last night that he would give six men jobs in the form of stage entertainers. These six men will compete next Tuesday night, and great fun is expected. Every man in the theatrical entertainment will be song, story, dance or what have you? Decision now to support these efforts on the part of your more unfortunate neighbour by attending the Capitol next Tuesday night and giving the glad hand of applause.

FIRST MEETING IN DECEMBER

Commission on Transportation Will Convene at Ottawa

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—The Royal Commission on Transportation will probably hold its first meeting on December 4 in this city, soon after that the commission will go for Western Canada.

The secretary of the commission will be Arthur Ahearn, barrister, and former dean of the law faculty of the University of Saskatchewan, at Saskatoon. George W. Yeiss, assistant deputy minister of railways and canals, will be assistant secretary.

Mr. Justice Duff, chairman of the commission, informed the press today that he had been advised that Lord Ashfield, one of the commissioners, was leaving England on the Aquitania tomorrow and was expected to arrive in Ottawa at noon on Friday, December 4. So that there may be a day in getting the proceedings of the commission under way, the membership of the committee, as well as the chiefs of the two principal Canadian railway systems, have been advised that the initial sitting of the commission will take place at Ottawa on the afternoon of the day of Lord Ashfield's arrival.

After the preliminaries of organization have been attended to, and the membership of the commission have been placed in touch with the general aspects of the railway problem, it is intended to leave almost immediately for Western Canada where the commission will seek information at first hand with respect to certain aspects of the Dominion's transportation difficulties. Details of the movements of the commission in Western Canada will be announced later, but the visit in part with respect to other parts of the Dominion.

Dealing with the average annual number of moves in the classes affected by the proposed reduction, Mr. Hodge declared that on the Canadian National Railway this amounted to 92,286; on the C.P.R. traffic which would be affected totalled about 93,287. The salary of a conductor in this class of work at a like mileage was $5,675, an amount which, he declared, was much higher than the average of conductors, trainmen, etc., and which, indeed, was lower than the remuneration for some of the switchmen, crossing watchmen, etc., figures, Mr. Hodge gave the average of the latter classes which he did not cite as 92%.

Hodge Before Board

Enhancing the statistics were placed before the Board, however, he intended not to show the average annual earnings, Mr. Hodg said, but to show the possibility of earnings. In the cases referred to, however, the figures represented those actually paid by the companies for the services rendered. He cited two conductors on passenger runs between Montreal and Toronto (single trips). In the first case the conductor earned $16.10 for 341 miles, work six hours and fifty minutes. The second case showed a conductor on the same trip (night train) being paid in the same amount for a running time of eight hours and forty-five minutes, a third instance showed an engineer working from Niagara Falls to Montreal, earning $30.41 from 8:15 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., with a recess between 9:30 a.m. and 2 p.m. In this case he enumerated was for two "basic days", that engineer being credited to have worked a couple of days in the period given. Engineers working short hours were earning more than many others, Mr. Hodge said, when, viewed in the light of actual time in which they were employed, Mr. Hodge declared.

Only Make Mileage

The railways' spokesman made it clear that by agreement among them the men working were paid only temporarily when a monthly maximum mileage was reached in order to give other workmen an opportunity.

Of this connection Mr. Hodge said the assistance of the board in order to have the men regulate their mileage. A great part of his own survey was given to the effort to get them to do so.

"We look on this as the men's rule," he said, "and we have constantly refused to "police" it; if the men were willing to have it, then it is a point of honor that they should do so."

The mileage limitations applied only to the calendar month, but to the monthly mileage period. This period from 26th to 25th in order to insure that all train crews would not be laid off on the same day each month. But this would be a continuous process designed to maintain the continuity of the service, he added that the trainmen met this condition much better than any other class of employees.

Other statements were cited by Mr. Hodge, one of which showed an engineer working from Sarnia to Orillo and receiving $316.62. On the regulation governing the division of mileage into "basic of the" this period represented work for thirty days, at last particular sweet doubling on a run.

Exception was taken by Mr. Murdock to the figures for representative conductors. Also. These showed men working from 4,132 to 4,446 miles, while the rule required the working by those individuals of only 3,200 miles. Telegrams had been despatched to the men's regional chairman at Calgary and Edmonton demanding an explanation, the report showed that due to the heat rush the employees had been required to operate extra time but that the excess mileage would end on 31 October would be subtracted from their time for November. Mr.

Magistrate Mikel at a good deal of trouble and some expense had succeeded in compiling a list of names of those who served overseas in the Great War from this section which he intends later to include in a history of Belleville and vicinity. To reduce errors and omissions to a minimum, check over the following list of names corresponding with "C" and report errors and omissions to Magistrate Mikel.

"SIN OF MADELON CLAUDET"

REPEATS DRAMATIC STORY

Helen Hayes Lovely Stage Lead

Now it is Helen Hayes who temporarily forsakes the New York stage for the talking screen. And although motion picture audiences may not know a great deal about Miss Hayes and her brilliant work on the stage, it can be truthfully said that she is recognized today as one of the foremost actresses now appearing in the American theatre.

Incidentally in checking through the list of noted stage actresses who have turned their talents to the screen, one comes to the inevitable conclusion that practically each one has made good in Hollywood. Of hand a few names come to mind most prominent of whom are Ann Harding, Ruth Chatterton, Claudette Colbert, Myrna Kelly, Talbulah Bankhead, Miriam Hopkins, Ina Claire Barbara Stanwyck, Rose Hobart and the late lamented Jeanne Eagels. Then there is also the beautiful Constance Bennett who gained fame on the stage of her native Berlin.

So that Helen Hayes, whose past record is as brilliant as any of these, now has the opportunity to duplicate her stage success on the screen. For not only is Miss Hayes a fine emotional actress but she is also an attractive and charming personality who possesses the qualities that appeal quickly to theatre goers. Among Miss Hayes' best known performances are "Coquette," "What Every Woman Knows" Petticoat Influence," "Dear Brutus" and "To The Ladies."

Helen Hayes' first picture is "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has dramatized from the Edward Knoblock stage play "The Lullaby". In the title role of Madelon Claudet Helen Hayes creates what is probably the most difficult role of her career. cast as a vivacious, courageous girl who, in her struggle for love and happiness, knows the joy of luxury and the pain of privation. Her triumphs and bitter losses also grown into an old woman whose only reason for living is her steadfast devotion to a son who does not even know that his own mother is alive. Miss Hayes' ability to create the sense of young girlhood, all for love and later as an old woman fighting to bring happiness and success to her son, is a triumphant expression of fine feeling and fine acting. Tonight! You'll find the story of "The Sin of Madelon Claudet" and the acting of Helen Hayes one of the outstanding features of the current cinema.

Prominently featured in the supporting cast are Lewis Stone, Neil Hamilton, Marie Prevost, Cliff Edwards, Karen Morley and Karen Morley.

"The Sin Of Madelon Claudet" which was adapted to the screen by Charles MacArthur, co-author of "The Front Page" comes to the Belle Theatre today for two days matinee daily.

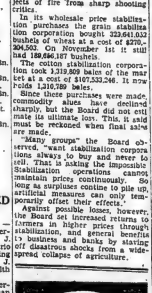
FARM BOARD'S STORY TOLD

Considerable Help Given Farmers of States in Last Two Years

Washington, D.C., Nov. 25 — (AP)—The United States Farm Board's story—the two-year Government adventure in assisting the farmer of this great country—unfolded Tuesday in its second annual report to Congress.

Given out through the Senate Agricultural Committee which summoned Chairman Stone to explain contents, the report painstakingly described the farmers' operations in wheat and cotton markets and liberal loans to co-operatives—objects of fire from sharp shooting critics.



In its wholesale price stabilization purchases and the stabilization corporation bought 323,641,032 bushels of wheat at a cost of $270,204,502. On November 1, 1931, it had 189,096,167 bushels.

The cotton stabilization corporation took 1,319,809 bales of the staple at a cost of $107,533,224. It has 1,016,789 bales.

Since these grain stocks were made commodity sales have declined sharply, but the board did not estimate its ultimate loss. This, it said must be reckoned when final sales are made.

Many groups the Board observed, "wants stabilization corporations always to buy and never to sell. That is simply the impossible. Stabilization operations cannot maintain prices continuously, nor long as surpluses continue to pile up, artificial measures can exert temporarily offset their efficacy."

Aspiring to make losses, however, the Board set increasing returns to farmers in higher prices through stabilization and by sharing losses by business and banks by staving disastrous shocks from a widespread collapse of agriculture.

EXPERIMENTAL STAGE REACHED

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 24 (CP)—"It is still definitely in the experimental state," Rev. Canon H. J. Cody, chairman of the Ontario Cancer Commission today referring to the statement made by Hon. J. M. Robb, Minister of Public Health for Ontario, at London recently.

In a speech at a banquet tendered by A. E. Silverwood, chairman of the Victoria Hospital Trust, Mr. Robb said: "One of the first things in the world for combatting cancer is being developed at the cancer clinic at Victoria Hospital. When it is published it will set the medical world agape."

Canon Cody said the columnisation had been evolved the research work being carried on by the London doctors, but, he added, it was impossible to say yet whether the experiments had hopes for success.

It is learned the use of the serum in treatment of cancer in mice has encouraged the research workers to experiment further, although it is understood, some years will elapse before a test can be made with the treatment of cancer in a human being using the serum.

Prem. MacDonald Aware Japan Places Orders in England

LONDON, Nov. 25—(AP)—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald told questioners in the House of Commons today that he was aware orders for naval aircraft engines have been placed in Great Britain by Japan.

He could not adopt the suggestion however, he said, that the advisability should be considered of placing an embargo on such orders by international action "in the present circumstances".

SECOND ATTEMPT TO GET GOODS FAILS

HAMILTON, Ont., Nov. 25.—William Hills, of Toronto, arrived in Hamilton yesterday. He was arrested a few hours later and informed police he had ordered goods from Simpson's and Eaton's, had them delivered to a house in the river flats and paid for them with a worthless cheque. He had then departed for Toronto to get the goods. An attempt to work the same fest on Eaton's in Hamilton resulted in his arrest. He was found guilty in police court and remanded till Saturday for sentence.

SWEDISH BOOK HAS HISTORY

In Family of Indian Chief For Many Years

STOCKHOLM (By The Canadian Press)—The old saying that books have their fates is strikingly confirmed by the romantic story of a 300 year old Swedish Bible, recently published in the Swedish press.

The descendants of an Indian chief recently presented a Swedish-American Museum with a Charles XII bible, which had been treasured in his family for centuries. About 1700 a Swedish sailor off-board a Dutch vessel anchored off th coast of Northern Mexico, had to flee for his life from the crew and would have been killed but for an Indian chief, Chipagus, who defended and protected the fugitive from his persuers. As a gratitude the Swede asked the Indian to accept a gift, and Chipagus's choice fell on a bulgy edition of the bible published during the reign of the famous hero King Charles XII, and brought across the seas by the Swedish sailor. Chipagus and his later descendants, although unable to read Swedish, venerated the imposing folio as a sacred family heirloom and carried it with them when moving from one district to another.

The modern descendant of the old chief, however, had studied law and became a barrister. When he heard that gifts were being solicited for the new Swedish-American museum, he sent the old Swedish bible to the curators explaining how it had happened to come into the possession of his family. He added that his interest in the ancient volume was so great that he had even learned the Swedish language in order to be able to read it.

WINDSOR ABLE TO PAY BILLS

Back to Wall a Week Ago, Now Financially Sound

Windsor, Nov. 25—Her back to the wall, broke, a week or two weeks ago, Windsor has rallied and is able to announce today that she can and will meet all her obligations as they fall due.

Arrears of taxes pouring into the City Treasury; spending bodies under and outside the control of the city council have cut their expenditures to the bone. This is the solution the city has found for financial problems she faced early this month.

As a consequence, Windsor will not default on the payment of any of her debenture obligations, and, the city council has decided, she will not resort to conversion loans or other refunding methods.

A few weeks ago the situation was different. Debenture payments aggregating $280,000 were falling due before the end of the year, the percentage of unpaid taxes, current and arrears, was large, and city loan at the banks had about reached its limit. There was seemingly ready cash in sight to meet the maturing capital obligations. Then, realizing that drastic measures had to be adopted, the city council sought expert advice. H. L. Sutherland, Municipal Law Officer of the Provincial Government was called in, and a retrenchment plan worked out.

DISPUTE AS TO THE ACTUAL WAGES EARNED

Hon. James Murdock is Spokesman For Railway Employees

MUCH DISCUSSION

Men Make Mileage, Then Lay Off to Give Work to Others

By W. W. MURRAY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, Que., Nov. 25—Some dispute relative to actual wages earned by railway employees during the month of October featured the session yesterday of the Board of Conciliation appointed to enquire into the application of the Canadian railways for a ten per cent. reduction in wages. Submitting figures for that month, George Hodge, vice-president of the Department of Personnel, Canadian Pacific Railway Co., who is handling the case for the companies, came into conflict with Hon. James Murdock, spokesman for the men.

Mr. Hodge's submission showing the "possible earnings" of certain conductors and trainmen together with their actual earnings indicated that for the most part these employees in October had exceeded the mileage which, in agreement among themselves the men had contracted to work. In view of this Mr. Murdock declined to accept the figures as representative of the earnings over a period of twelve months, and intimated that the picture presented by Mr. Hodge did not convey the actual conditions existing on the railways.

Considerable Crossfire

Considerable crossfire between the companies' and the men's spokesmen occurred during the session which again adjourned before midday, to meet again in the afternoon.

MOVE ON TO INCREASE TAX

Premier Tolmie Refuses to Discuss Matter in Any Way

Victoria, B. C., Nov. 25 (By The Canadian Press)—A concerted move in the direction of increased taxation on gasoline appeared to-day indications here today to be underway in the Western Canada. British Columbia has been asked to prepare a brief on the history of gasoline taxation for the benefit of the coming inter-provincial conference which reports last night predicted would be held in Toronto, Nov. 30, instead of Edmonton as originally arranged.

Whether this brief is addressed to the legal rights of the Province to tax gasoline, or is aimed beyond this point at the report in relation of the Regina conference back, advocating increase existing imposts, could not be officially learned.

Premier S. F. Tolmie declined to discuss reports saying his Government, in consultation with other provinces in the west, would increase the gasoline tax next year. He said however, that this province would concur in the abolition of the conference to Torchlo as nearer to the Federal authorities, whose help presumably will be sought in the matter.

November 30 the date set for the Edmonton conference which it is now proposed to move to Toronto would be too early for British Columbia delegates to attend, the Premier intimated.

LUCIA GOULET GOES ON TRIAL

Alleged to Have Murdered Her Mother on May 1st

L'Original, Ont., Nov. 25—(By The Canadian Press)—In a court room more than 100-years-old, Lucia Goulet, 18-year-old Rockland girl will face trial for the murder of her mother.

That it is expected, will be put before the grand jury this afternoon at the dining of the Supreme Court of Ontario with Mr. Justice Jeffrey, of Toronto presiding.

The young girl's mother was found slain in her home at Rockland on May 1. This year Mrs. Josephine Goulet was taken, to death, her body bearing more than 30 knife wounds. On May 3, Lucia was arrested, charged with the murder, and since that time has been a prisoner here.

She will be defended by Lorenzo Lafleur, of Ottawa, while the Crown will be represented by Henri St. Jacques, K.C., of Ottawa, assisted by C. W. A. Marion, of Rockland, Thirty-five witnesses will be called by the crown.

HOPE TARIFFS LOWERED ON BRIT. GOODS

J. H. Thomas, Secretary, Hopes Canada Will Reciprocate

NEW MARKETS

Careful Development of Intra-Empire Trade is Mooted

London, Nov. 24 (CP Cable)—Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, yesterday told the House of Commons that on his forthcoming tour he hoped to place before the governments of the Dominions proposals which would induce them to lower their tariffs against British goods.

Mr. Thomas made his statement in reply to a question by Percy Harris, Liberal member of the London borough of Southwest Bethnal Green. "I hope I shall be in a position to put before them certain advantages that I think they could appreciate," he said. He refused to make any definite statement regarding the proposals he considered placing before the Dominions. Mr. Thomas explained he hoped to find new markets for British cotton goods during his tour, in view of the decrease in unemployment brought about by the cotton operatives He said also that the date of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa had been set for July next to insure all Dominions having ample time to ensure full attendance.

Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, in reply to a question, said the government was giving careful consideration to the development of intra-Empire trade and that it was very collecting necessary information.

COAL OIL FIRE AT CHATHAM CLAIMS 2 LIVES

Father and Son Die from Burns All Members of Family Burned When Coal Oil is Used to Bolster up Fire

Maddened With Pain One Leaps From Bedroom in 12 Ft. Drop

MOTHER FAINTS

Other Dashes Into Kitchen to Save Son and is Fatally Burned

CHATHAM, Ont., Nov. 26.—Both critically burned in a fire which followed an explosion of coal oil used to bolster up the flames in a kitchen stove, Frank Thibodeau, 68, and his son Alphie, 17, died this morning in St. Joseph's Hospital. Nelson Thibodeau, 22, is in the hospital with serious burns about the face, arms and legs and will recover. His burns were received when he attempted to smother the flames enveloping his brother, who was asnuck about the house in his agony Believing the escape by the stairs was cut off, Nelson leaped 12 feet from the window of his bedroom.

Other members of the household who were burned about the arms, hands and legs, in rendering aid to their kin are Mrs. Thibodeau, who is in a state of collapse, Wilfred, 23, Yvonne, 12, and Harvey, 9.

Alphie Thibodeau, the first up, started a wood fire in the kitchen stove at about 6 a.m. When the fire burned slowly he poured coal oil on to the smoldering embers. An explosion occurred, racking the house and sending a shower of gasoline over the kitchen which was soon burning furiously. Frank Thibodeau, his father, ran to the kitchen in his night shirt to assist his son. Wilfred, hurrying down stairs, discovered the flames in the kitchen for the dining room to prevent the spread of the flames, unaware that his father and brother were trapped.

Both fought their way out, Alphie in his night shirt, his garments clothing setting fire to the interior of a bedroom, before he ran to the open

Bennett's Speech at London Given Streamer Headlines

London Newspapers Give Prominence to Address

"MUCH CHASTENED"

By THOS. T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 26—Two of London's leading morning papers today gave streamer headline prominence to reports of the speech delivered last night by Prime Minister Bennett of Canada, at a dinner in his honor by G. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner to Great Britain.

Over its front page story on Mr. Bennett's speech the News Chronicle has the title "Canadian Premier's Historic Call. 'Epoch-Making Declaration for United Empire.' The Express, in its largest type, heads its story with a quotation from the Canadian Prime Minister's declaration: "I am still one of those who cherish the view that if we establish that League of Nations within this Empire that we may there is no problem we will not solve, no difficulty we will not overcome."

Tiew of London Express

The Express, further down the page, however, says Mr. Bennett declined the intention of talking politics. The reporter of the News Chronicle says his impression at the banquet was that Mr. Bennett whom he describes as "the star turn," "was very much chastened in comparison with his usual self and on his last visit when he dropped that rather bad brick about Ireland first.

"Beyond saying that the politics of empire has passed and that we should have to substitute another war if he gave no satisfaction to the food taxers who hung expectantly to his lips," the reporter continues. He mentions the fact that Lord Beaverbrook, Canadian Newspaper and Empire crusader, Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary of State for the Dominions, and Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, former Conservative Chancellor of the Exchequer were not invited to speak although all of them were present. He was also impressed by the fact that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald made it clear the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa would not be held before June or July.

This," he adds, "dashed the hopes of many tariff enthusiasts that Mr. Bennett's sudden descent upon London meant the immediate fall of the empire free trade plank."

The remainder of the papers treat the dinner as routine news and this morning there was no editorial comment forthcoming.

THANKSGIVING IS OBSERVED

Turkey Big Piece de Resistance in United States

New York, Nov. 26 (CP) — The United States today celebrated Thanksgiving Day on its 209th anniversary. Financial and commercial markets were closed.

Generally fair weather was enjoyed by the entire country in general, and the East's mild weather the past month that caused roses to bloom blooming in New York, were succeeded by a drop in temperature that brought below zero cold to most coasts.

Turkey was the big dish on the culinary menu, and football was the leading item on the athletic bill.

Gypsum Prince is Carrying Men to Digby

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 26 (CP) —The steamer Gypsum Prince, carrying six men, rescued after the Gloucester fishing schooner Edith and Ethnor sank in a collision with the steamer off Canso Strait, Guysborne County, last night, was proceeding toward Digby, N.S., today where she was expected sometime this afternoon. The Gypsum Prince crushed around the vicinity of the accident until after daybreak in a fruitless search for the Edith's fifteen still missing. At ten a.m. the steamer was off Green Island, Shelburne County, on her way to Digby.

Earlier reports had variously stated three and five men were rescued. Captain Simon Theriault, of the Edith and Elmer, wrecked Gloucester had said that he had been picked up with Engineer Manley Boudreau, Peter Pitts, Cesar Thibodeau and John Powers. A report from the Gypsum Prince this morning said the schooner's mate also had been saved.

A check-up was made along the coast and vessels sent to all Nova Scotia Counties this morning, but none of the six missing men were known to have reached land.

$500 DAMAGES ARE AWARDED

Action Over Death of Boy Concluded at North Bay

North Bay, Ont., Nov. 26 — Damages of $500 and costs against the costs were awarded to A. E. Grant, North Bay, against Mrs. Emma Giroux and her son, Hector Giroux, by a jury verdict rendered in District Court last evening when Hector Giroux was adjudged wholly responsible for the death of the plaintiff's young son on June 30 by being run down by a motor car.

Immediately following the plaintiff's evidence he was arraigned in police court on a criminal negligence charge and was acquitted. Following the termination of the District Court case last evening he was summoned here by a police court hearing on a charge of failing to report an accident in which he was implicated on August 27, and this morning paid a fine of $10 and costs by paying a fine of $10 and costs. He had been driving his Kitchener Lake until summoned for his appearance at the District Court.

A. R. THOMPSON PASSES AWAY

Former Alderman of City Dies After 4 Days Illness

Word was received in the city today conveying the sad intelligence that Albert Thompson, a former well known Bellevillian passed away this afternoon at Toronto. He was ill but a few days. Deceased had been for thirty years cr more connected with the G. T. R., now C. N. R., as purchasing agent for ties, etc., for the railway. He was also associated with the Creosote Works in Trenton.

For three years Mr. Thompson was a member of the city council and was efficient in the discharge of his civic duties. He was a member of the Presbyterian church and in politics a Conservative. Mr. Thompson was about 70 years of age and for a considerable period of his life resided here where he was well known and highly esteemed. Of late he had made his home in the City with his widow three daughters, Mary, Jean and Evelyn survive and to them will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of citizens generally.

Mrs. Black of this city is a cousin.

BRITISH MOVE HALTS JAPAN

New York Herald Tribune Tells of Move to Godden Group

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—British naval movements are reported to protect railway, mining and harbor interests said to total $125,000,000 along the Peiping-Mukden Railway, operated also by a company in which the Japanese Military authorities in Manchukuo have consider the plan to attack Chinchow, the New York Herald Tribune said today in a copyrighted dispatch from Tokyo.

Chinchow is the headquarters of the remnants of Marshal Chang Hsueh-Liang's Manchurian army.

"British troops stationed at Tientsin, near the Peiping terminus of the Peiping-Mukden Railway which was built in part with British capital, are reported in Japanese press dispatches as preparing for operations against Chinchow and Shanhaikwan to protect the extensive British interests in the railway, the Kailun Coal mine and the harbor developments at Shanhaikwan, all within China proper.

PARIS, Nov. 26.—Representatives of both China and Japan were reported today to have left Geneva for Aristide Briand that they were ready to accept, with modifications, the League of Nations Committee proposal for restoring peace in Manchuria.

Belleville's War Memorial

Above is a photographic reproduction of the memorial in honor of those from Belleville who answered the call to service and gave their lives in the Great War. The order for the monument has been given and it will be erected on Memorial Park front spring and placed upon the concrete base now in position. The memorial will reach the impressive height of 20 feet. The base, two sections and shaft will be of fine quality Quebec gray granite. The base section will be 16 by 17 feet in horizontal dimensions and 2 feet 2 inches in thickness. The next section above this will be 7 feet 2 inches square and 5 feet in thickness. The third section will be 6¼ feet square and 2 feet, 8 inches thick. Then will come a magnificent gray granite monolith shaft 3½ feet square at the base and 18 feet in height. The shaft will be surmounted by a bronze figure composed of three parts—poppy, sword and pen nice. The figure will be ten feet tall and stand on a metal base 3½ feet square. It is proposed to place upon the monument the names of all those from Belleville who were killed in action or who died in active service for their country during the period of the World War. The names are now being collected from the various churches and the monument, aside from that of cutting the letters of the names, will be approximately $12,000.

New Oath is Administered

London, Ont., Nov. 26.—Under instruction of the Attorney General a new form of oath was administered witnesses in police court today. Witnesses are handed a printed form, and while holding the Bible in their right hand, read the oath from the printed form, first being required to give their name in full. Under the old system either the magistrate or the clerk was required to "swear" this items. Now the witness "swears" himself.

HAVE NO HOPE OF SAVING LIFE

ST THOMAS, Nov. 26.—Physicians have virtually given up hope of saving the life of Peggy Carter, aged 6. Peggy is suffering from heart ailment, caused by a dose of septic sore throat, from which she recovered at the time the disease carried off her sister Patsy, and brother Clair, about two weeks ago. There has been no new outbreak of septic sore throat in St. Thomas for over a month and authorities believe the spread of the disease has been definitely checked. Grade 1 Classes suspended because of the outbreak, have been reopened.

FIRE VICTIM SUCCUMBS

Mrs. Lint Dies at Her Home at Fisherville, Ont.

Hamilton, Ont. Nov. 26—After suffering great pain all night, Mrs. Jacob Lint of Fisherville, who was badly burned yesterday when attempting to light a stove with oil, died in St. Joseph's hospital here early this morning.

Mrs. Lint was lighting a coal stove in the kitchen of her home and threw some crude oil on the smouldering embers to start the blaze. A loud explosion resulted and she was enveloped in flames. Lewis Weaver rushed to her assistance from a neighboring house and finally succeeded in extinguishing the flames. Dr. Douglas Tyrrell ordered removal to the hospital.

In the meantime the flames gained headway in the kitchen and in that manner the house was a mass of fire.

It was totally destroyed with its contents.

BANK OF MONTREAL CLOSES BRANCHES

MONTREAL, Que. Nov. 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—Branches of the Bank of Montreal in Tampico and Vera Cruz, Mexico, have been closed. It was learned here today from the head. Bank officials said no particular significance attached to the closure. The two branches had proved unprofitable and had been closed accordingly. It was not indicated whether any others would be discontinued.

EDUCATION WAY

Postmaster-General Tells What Education Has Done With Creeds

OTTAWA, Ont. Nov. 26. — (By the Canadian Press)—"Our system of living is now too expensive and ruinous. The balance must be reestablished on the basis of Christian joy," declared Hon. Arthur Sauve, Postmaster-General speaking at the University of Ottawa last night.

Educational institutions, Mr. Sauve added, "should teach a code of Canadian life defining the duties of citizens in every sphere of production and trade. Such a Canadian ideal of respect for acquired rights."

Universities were the headquarters of civilization throughout the Dominion and in their seats of learning, founded the Postmaster General, education brought about the respect of creeds, institutions and the traditions of the two mother races in the Dominion.

SECURES $7.00 UNDER RELIEF

Fraud Proven in Court and is Fined and Jailed

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 26 — Anson Slugget has been found guilty by Magistrate Jones of securing $7 in groceries from the city relief department under false pretences and was fined five hundred dollars and costs with the option of three months in jail.

It was found that on September 1 he had drawn $2.300 from the post office savings bank and later in the month had secured city relief on the ground that he was penniless. The defence was that the money belonged to another man to whom he had returned it but the witnesses did not agree on details and the magistrate ruled that the story was an improbable one

MOOSE HOLDS CARD DANCE

Good times are to be had at the informal card parties and dances held by the Moose members every week in their hall on Front Street if the size of the crowds who attend is any criterion. Last evening they again held open house and some one hundred and fifty local citizens attended in force. In the earlier part of the evening euchre, the prizes of which were won by Mrs. Conway, Mrs. York and Mrs. Moonman and for the gentlemen, Mr. Culhane, Mr. Bibby and Mr. Calnan, was enjoyed, and at the finish the music by the Ben Tons supplied the dancing.

MARKET TODAY SPARSELY ATTENDED

Thursday's market was sparsely attended and business was somewhat slack for the few vendors who were in evidence. Prices were about the same as prevailed at last Saturday's market with numerous apples being offered by the farmers at reasonably low prices. All other lines of farm produce was also shown by the vendors.

BIG DIFFERENCE IN TEMPERATURE

Ideal weather conditions welcomed the citizens of Belleville this morning. Although there was a difference of 42 degrees between the temperature of today and that of yesterday. Today's temperature was one degree lower than has been registered so far this autumn when the mercury dropped to 33 last night. At noon today the mercury had risen to 35 degrees but a stiff north wind was blowing and kept the weather in a chilly category. Yesterday's temperatures were 61 and 32 low.

Letters to The Editor

THE DOG—HOW TO FEED HIM

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

I am constantly seeing half starved dogs and puppies, especially the pups. The dog can forage around and pick up something although since the garbage collection there is not much to pick up but the poor little pup has to stay home all the time.

I wish the housewives would do as farmers' wives have had garbage collection and throw the meat and bones and pieces of pie and cake and potatoes and bread and chicken in the yard so the dog could get them. The easiest and cheapest way to feed the dog and pup is to buy ten cents worth of stale meat and bones once or twice a week. Put them in a pot with half a dozen or more potatoes and a loaf of stale bread which can be bought at the provision stores for 3 or 4 cents and cook it all up then put it where the dog can get them. Free access to it and then watch him grow into a big husky dog able to defend the children if necessity requires.

Yours truly,
D. H. ACKERIL, V.S.

Owl Members in Rendezvous

Organization of Fish Story Tellers is Completed

The ancient Order of Owls held annual midnight Rendezvous Wednesday in Belleville. The place was Dickens' Coffee Shoppe and those present were members of an organization of some kind or other. Fishermen mostly, who during the season infest the waters of Lake Ontario, East Lake, West Lake, Hay Bay, the upper Moira, Trent, and other piscatorial haunts. The annual conclave is for the purpose of relating tall stories of big fish and generally discussing fishing and its relation to human happiness. The ground prize for the tallest stories of the season went to Fisherman Knapman, of Picton, who won hands down with his stories of Hay Bay and other Quinte waters in the vicinity of Picton, and he had the photographs to make his stories good. Unless he has a repeating camera Mr. Knapman is a mighty fisherman and he easily won the grand prize. Second prize was won by Jack Lill after a spirited contest with Fred Sprague and Dr. O'Callaghan.

The evening was one of rare interest with a program of community songs and solos and a splendid menu prepared and served in Dickens and Son best style. Fred Sprague and Leo Riggs had charge of the music which was a very pleasing feature of the evening's entertainment. Wm. J. Doyle, President of the Owls Club, acted as chairman in very capable manner, and exceedingly tall stories were told by Chas. Dolan, Jack Lill, Bert Dickens, Dr. O'Callaghan, Tom Fleury, M. Knapman, Bob Gillard, Ted Chard, Leo Riggs, Fred Sprague, W. J. Doyle and A. O. Davis.

Unemployment Relief Fund

Wintry blasts succeeding the long spell of summer-like weather brought reminders that the Canadian winter never fails to come with snow sleet and zero weather requiring warm clothes and plenty of good fuel to keep warm. Although there are so many generous, kindly hearts in Belleville who appreciate their own prosperity and are willing to share it with others a number of homes will be kept warm this winter which otherwise might be cold and comfortless, and little children will be warmly clothed and fed, because somebody cared. The relief fund is growing and the committee will be greatly assisted if all who have received cards will return them at once. Country Correspondents Honor Editor at Stirling

ADDRESS READ

Mr. A. E. Dobbie, editor of the News-Argus was "literally" taken by "storm", Monday evening, November 26th, when several of his correspondents and their better-halves invaded his home at eight p.m. It was a complete surprise to the Editor, although his wife was "in the know" and it took Mr. Dobbie a few minutes to quiet his nerves and gather himself together after the invasion. This was a better surprise than "Stumpy" the Editor's week last March, as this time he was left totally in the dark.

At 8 p.m. the editor's pastor Rev. R. W. Rowland, called the gathering to order and after a few preliminary remarks, Mr. J. C. Baker of Bonarlaw with Miss Mae Currie as the piano renderer (for every big "do's" on the level there's a girl that's on the square" and later in the programme he sang "That dear old Mother o' Mine".

Mrs. A. W. Andrews of Madoc Junction, then read the following address which she had previously prepared and Mrs. Percy MacMullen of Mount Pleasant, presented the editor with a handsome upholstered occasional chair.

November 24, 1931.

A. E. Dobbie,
Stirling, Ont.

Dear Editor,

Our address to you to-night is not like most addresses which are usually to welcome the one for whom it is read or to say good-bye. We are very glad this is not to be a good farewell, but to tell you of our appreciation of you and your work as Editor of the "News-Argus."

Some writer once said or wrote "one of the characteristics of a generous nature is the power of appreciating excellence in others and of recognizing and enjoying their good work as if it were done by one's self. And however great this capacity may be, it is appreciated by the one who possessed it, it means still more to the one to whom it is bestowed.

There are very few to whom brilliancy comes naturally, but the best inspiration for good work, very few from whom it will not draw out their best.

Appreciation involves one's obedience to the higher law under which all men are fellow-workers, regardless of rank or position and emphasizes only the common good and the common duty which we should continually not only to do good work themselves, but to recognize that which is done by others illustrate the right and law of co-operation.

And we who are gathered in your home to-night are here to show you in a small way that your work and the correspondents and, spoke of the pleasure it was to write news and said he felt responsible for his column of paper weekly.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen of Mount Pleasant rendered a musical monologue in her usual style with Mrs. E. W. Rowland heralding at the piano.

Mrs. E. W. Rowland in his address told of the wonderful benefits derived through the press and very ably dealt with the splendid record of Editor Dobbie during his six years service in Stirling.

Short talks were also given by ex-wardens, Mr. George Wallace, Harold and Mr. Arthur Andrews of Madoc Junction.

Two contests of interest (apples and clothes pins) were then conducted by Mr. Arthur Wilson.

Mrs. Arthur Andrews then sang as a solo "The End of a Perfect Day".

Regrets of inability to attend were sent by Messrs. Harold Way and Wilfred Wallace of the office staff, Mrs. Roy Wilson of Oak Hills and Mrs. Ira Rose of Tudor.

A delicious lunch was then served by several of the ladies consisting of sandwiches, coffee, and cake, followed by cake and ice cream and macaroons, the latter being served by supplying the ice cream.

Mrs. Arthur Andrews then sang as a solo "The End of a Perfect Day".

The time and manner of the social chat the company broke up at midnight by singing "Auld Lang Syne" in one and all wished Mr. and Mrs. Dobbie many more years of usefulness in Stirling.

PETITION FOR PART TAXES

Will Ask Government For 25 Per Cent. Reduction in Taxes

No Time To Sleep

A newspaper correspondent reports that tariff experts agree that only a small portion of American exports would be affected by a tariff increase. This is a cheerful view of the situation, but it does not take the psychological soothing syrups into account. It is during the days of the depression, is apt to have an unpleasant reaction. When anything promises to affect even "a small portion" of our export trade it is time for us to be alert.

The article in question says further:

"The tendency for Americans would be to utilize every impediment to introducing factories in England, including the importation of materials, assembling the finished article with British labor."

The manufactured parts of a machine, or any kind are not raw materials; even the steel that goes into a typewriter cannot be considered a "raw material," although it is the leather that goes into a pair of shoes. Let us be alert in indulging in pleasant illusion of that nature.

That the tendency of American industry would be "sidetepy" the tariff by establishing "factories" in England, is undoubtedly correct, but the process would not assemble but manufacture the tariff-protected articles. Such a statement of our present tariff law that "tendency" has developed to a great extent, and it is not desirable that it should be encouraged to increase as it surely would be under such high tariff.

It is true that a large proportion of our exports to Britain is in food stuffs, cheese, bacon and lard; but the remaining portion is so large that its interchange exports with the entire exports of many other countries are we are sure, that we will have that food and tobacco trade indefinitely? The fact that Britain has given us a certain tariff of 100 per cent. on imports of manufactured goods, looks as if she means business.

The Dominions and colonies can furnish much of the raw material that we sell, from wheat to copper, and even a part of the cotton. Once started on a protective system Britain will have to favor an intra-empire customs union. As the British Empire takes nearly one-half in value of our exports of all kinds this is something to ponder.

Instead of sleeping on this matter it is time for a people's movement toward world-wide reduction of tariffs, reasonable tariffs, leveling them to a basis that the nations of the world can exchange their products with profit to all parties!

PREMIER MacDONALD REFUSED TO YIELD

London, Nov. 26—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald in the House of Commons yesterday, refused to yield to pressure on the question of the Indian conference. Brendan Bracken, Conservative, requested the Prime Minister's work. That he would not commit the government to any definite policy regarding India's future, without the approval of the House of Commons. When Mr. MacDonald refused, Mr. Bracken said he would raise the question again.

CREDIT UNIONS AMONG FISHERMEN

Halifax, N.S., Nov. 26—(CP)—Announcement that organization of new credit unions is contemplated as a solution to the financial problems confronting the fishermen of the Maritime provinces and Magdalen Islands is contained in the first issue of an official bulletin of the United Maritime fishermen which made its appearance yesterday.

The city of Winnipeg now owns two large municipally hydro-electric enterprises, its second plant at Pine Falls on the Winnipeg river having recently come into operation.

UNEMPLOYED ENDORSE TWO FOR COUNCIL

Two Aspirants For City Council Address Meeting

ORGANIZATION

Work Among Needy is Reported as Successful

Another well attended meeting was held in the city hall last evening by the association of the unemployed during which two new candidates for aldermanic honors stated their platforms. Also the subject of having the main chamber of the city hall for the use of the men during the day time as a rest room was discussed by those in charge of the organization.

Mr. Burwell occupied the chair in the temporary absence of Mr. Evans who was in the city. Mr. Burwell officially opened the hockey match in the initial programme of the season. Mr. Baldree who acted as recording secretary in the place of Mr. Ayling who was out of town, read the minutes and the meeting got under way with the usual business period referring to the eight men investigated by Messrs. Hall and committee. Some considerable discussion took place over the disposition of a man now employed by the city in building roads. It was pointed out some that the man was he, more entitled to steady work than any other man; that the man was considered unselective for the past two years or so only and that if it was not a job any one else could not do. These allegations were made by persons others stated that the job did require skill and was to be to the city's disadvantage if the man was taken off. After a vote of the members on the subject it was finally held over until the committee can get an interview with him.

Mr. Ross Speaks

Mr. Ross, whose name has been announced as being accepted by employees of the Canadian National Railways to represent them in council then had his chance to address the meeting and he declared that Mr. Pollwell.

"While the nomination was a complete surprise to me," he stated, "I appreciate it. I will be glad to accept the decision of the men I work with, the men I know and represent them in council. Primarily my interests lies with the men who make their living with their hands as I do. I was born in Belleville and have lived here all my life and if I am elected I will do all in my power for both the city and the men who live and work in it. There could be many changes made in the administration of various duties and declared which would be very beneficial to all concerned. I personally may rest assured that I will do all that is in my power to remedy any faults I may. All I can ask for is your vote and influence."

W. McKenna Offers

When Mr. William McKenna, another aldermanic aspirant was called upon to say whatever he wished about himself, he briefly stated that he had been approached by several on the question of nomination and now had definitely made up his mind to run. Should he be elected he would not be a "yes" man but as fortunate as Mr. Ross in having such an organization as the Canadian National behind him, he hoped to be able to qualify on the statement of ambitions he hoped to accomplish. Like Mr. Ross, I am also a worker and not a speaker, so I am elected I intend to keep this very worthy cause in mind and do more work and less talk. It is time that there was more action displayed."

Conditions Improve

With the aid which those who had now presented himself in the hall the reports of the various ward committees were received and while there had been a few cases of actual want, the investigation showed that these had been speedily cared for and conditions had been steadily improving. Next came the big guns the question of having the hall for the benefit of the men who are forced to hang around street corners. This was discussed pro and con for a time and then referred back to committee who will in turn wait at the pleasure of the council on the matter.

As to the notice which appeared in the press regarding the solicitation of clothing and other necessaries Mr. Hanna stated his position on this matter. Clothing was being constantly brought in, he stated, and it was being given out nearly as fast as it came in. Many members of the people who get the donations are sorely in need of them but owing to the association was catching up with this work very favorably. The men had entered into the spirit of the work and were busily engaged in making very many articles, mostly for small children to enable them to go to school, a few were display ed to show what could be done with a dollar or so of material and a little time to sew it together. He also mentioned that what had been done by the women and he hoped that of those who had a little time and either mend old garments and turn them over or replace some of the larger outworn coats with other apparel down into sizes which the children could wear.

Workmen Give Help

Before the conclusion of the meeting he mentioned that several of the men had been rounded up the other day and had helped members of the fair board to store away of the valuable buildings on the grounds. This was all done without recompense of any kind, and he was very proud of it. At the conclusion of the meeting several more names were added to the roster, which up to now contained one hundred and forty-nine, both married men and single.

Liberal Leader Throws Challenge to Government

Mitchell Hepburn Speaks to Women's Liberal Association

CRITICIZES PREMIER

States Hydro Has Been Pitchforked Into Political Ring

Toronto, Nov. 26 (CP)—Sharp criticism of the Ontario Conservative government was voiced last night by Mitchell Hepburn, Provincial Liberal leader, in the course of an address to the Ontario Liberal Women's Association. Pressing further his belief that a change of administration was becoming more and more necessary in the province, Mr. Hepburn pointed an accusing finger at alleged waste in the government policy.

"In view of the big political issues at stake at the present time," he said, "I regret that you should at the earliest moment appeal to the Premier with your concept of hydro. We have completely ignored the fact that we have developed power in the St. Lawrence and have developed power in the Nipigon and Timiskaming. Hydro has become political and certainly the interest of the people should be behind the Premier in their desire for a Royal Commission".

"Unfortunately," Mr. Hepburn went on, "the Hydro Commission has been pitchforked into the political ring. We have departed entirely from our original concept of hydro. We have completely ignored the fact that we have developed power in the St. Lawrence and have developed power in the Nipigon and Timiskaming. Hydro has become political and certainly the interest of the people should be behind the Premier in their desire for a Royal Commission".

Mystery Shooting in B. C. Indian Dead, Another Dying

Sequel to Laying of Trapline Near Kyuquot, Brit. Columbia

INDIAN FEUD

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 26—(CP)—One Indian dead, another lying fighting for life in hospital at Port Alberni, and police today are combing the west coast for the murderer in a homicide mystery that may have its origin back in the days past when native kings ruled the wilderness from Kyuquot to Clayoquot.

It was learned William was attending his trap line near Kyuquot when Chief Tyee Jack from ambush. He stumbled and fell, and a second charge of buckshot was fired from cover. Then, as he lay writhing on the ground, a man came forward from hiding and fired again and again at a range of only a few feet.

Whether the killing of Jackson arose over trapping privileges, offences and a new quarrel, is undetermine, but they have ascertained the clash between the white man's law and the traditional privileges and customs of the red man has given rise to a feud among the Indians of the west coast.

LOAN REACHES 100 MILLIONS

Prov. Premiers Broadcast Merits of National Issue

Montreal, November 26—Yesterday's discussions, covering into the accredited representatives and banks throughout the country, are believed to have brought the total applications for the National Servicl Loan of the Canadian Government over the $100,000,000 mark.

The last sum of $150,000,000 five per cent. bonds, was offered for sale on Monday. An official announcement last night stated that on Monday and Tuesday over $70,000,000 had been taken up while a generous response from the small investor was reported yesterday. Last night the acting Premier of Ontario, Hon. Sir George Perley and the nine provincial premiers issued statements urging upon Canadians the necessity of transfer their savings into the new loan.

SEES SUCCESS IN PEACE PLANS

States Approve League's Plan to Ask Japs to Vacate

PARIS, Nov. 26 (AP) — Negotiations for a settlement of the Manchurian conflict appeared today to be moving satisfactorily with the approval of the United States behind the country's resolution asking the Japanese to evacuate the territory as soon as security conditions permit.

The approval of the United States government was announced yesterday by Ambassador Charles G. Dawes.

This means that China's request for a fixed time limit for the troops withdrawals is likely not to be granted and it indicates an accord with the Japanese contention' that such a time limit is impracticable.

The resolution, in addition to stipulating Japanese withdrawal without fixing a time limit, contained provisions for China and Japan to direct their commanders in the field to refrain from belligerent activity and for both nations to take every means to avoid further aggravation of the situation.

It has not yet received formal approval of the council, however, a meeting of the council is scheduled for this afternoon.

TORONTO HIT BY MEASLES

Belleville Escapes Disease So Far During This Season

Measles which are prevalent just now, cause more harm and are more serious than they have been since 1926, are attracting the attention of medical officers of health in that city—and have broadcast the following warning: "The symptoms are a cold with running eyes and sneezing. When the mother notices this, if the child has not already had measles, she should at once put it to bed. It is noticeable with measles that there will be a bad cold for a day or so, then there will be an improvement for about 24 hours, and out comes the rash. The mother must not be led into false security by this 24 hours improvement, and they should watch for the appearance of the rash."

Present weather conditions are not favorable for the combining of this disease, it is stated, and mothers should be particularly on their guard against letting children expose themselves after they have had the disease. To date there have been 531 cases reported this month in Toronto, with the report of 91 cases over the last week end. So far there has been no report of any cases in Belleville at present and it is to be hoped that no serious outbreak will occour.

LAST SURVIVOR DIES

Victoria, B.C. Nov. 26—(CP)— Mr. Fanny Haynes, 91, who came to Victoria with her husband, the late William Haynes, a member of the first detachment of Royal Engineers at that time, England in 1859 for duty here, is dead. She was the last of the party.

UNITED STATES LENDS SUPPORT

Ambassador Dawes Says Peace Must Come at All Cost

Paris, Nov. 26—The Council of the League of Nations has the support of the United States government behind the League's proposals to bring peace to Manchuria.

This was made known by Ambassador Charley C. Dawes, who announced that the Washington government, a non-member of the League, approved the council's resolution asking that Japan evacuate area in Manchuria as soon as security conditions permit.

NO INTERRUPTION IN 29 MONTHS

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26— There was not a single interruption in 29 months in the 220,000 mile transcontinental service of the Ontario Hydro Electric System, according to a statement issued yesterday by Hydro officials. The transmission lines which bring power from the Ontario Hydro plant at the Niagara River to Toronto, were not interrupted due to 220,000 volt current between Aug. 17, 1927 and July 29, 1931.

NATIONAL ART

No country is great without a national spirit that expresses itself in art of the highest type. No nation can be great and influential without art. Riches and all the power a nation may claim are nothing to the intellectual influence of a nation.

His Excellency the Governor General, the Earl of Bessborough, who is a noted amateur actor in drama and a supporter of good plays, realizes this. This week he spoke at Toronto on the question of the creation of a dramatic league in the Dominion for he feels that the drama is one of the forms in which a nation's true spirit expresses itself. The drama may even go ahead of the country and lead the way to future greatness.

Canadian art must be Canadian. There is a Canadian spirit which must be more and more emphasized. As it develops so will the arts of painting, sculpture, music, and dramas, as well as science.

The Earl advises Canadians to "water the cultural plants" in their own garden to bring the arts to the level of other activities. In the world of drama he sees a new light in the progress of the Little Theatre which has quite a different ideal of the function of the theatre from that held by the box office.

With such a sponsor and supporter Canadian drama may be expected to make rapid strides within the next few years as increasing wealth and greater opportunity with the world at large urge people to a realization of the potent weapon in their hands to mould Canadian and world thought.

THE LOAN'S ADVANTAGES

The interest of United States financiers and investors in Canada was never shown more than today as the huge amounts of U.S. money are going into the new National Service Loan.

This means confidence in the Dominion of Canada.

Motion pictures regarding the loan have been shown at the two Belleville picture houses. These are the best that have ever been put on the screen in any campaign and are especially valuable as they depict the rapid survey features of Canadian life and the resources of the country and also are accompanied by a running comment upon the value of the loan. The sponsors of the loan are to be congratulated on the care they have put into the public presentation of the advantages of the loan.

The film gives Canadians a new idea of Canada, the land of agriculture and wealth in forest, and in stream, and in rocks, and in her citizenship.

Canadians then can not be surprised to see the loan successful as they know that everyone realizes the sterling character of this investment.

The loan may have to suffer from hunger and cold because of lack of employment for the head of the house. This will come seldom in prosperous Belleville, it's an opportunity for doing good, carrying out the divine command to help others, let's make the most of it.

BLACK SQUIRRELS are frisking about lawns in Belleville and becoming great pets. Sometimes two or three are to be seen playing together, which is something new for this city's profusion which has prophets, weather and otherwise, are trying to explain. There may be a poor nut crop or fewer trees than usual on the ground. Of over busy axes, or it may be going to be a very open winter, or a cold winter or no winter at all. Just take your choice for the squirrels won't tell.

IF LOVE BE THERE

By Aline Michaelis

Some lives are very full, abrim
With joy and mirth,
With eager, laughing song and all
The gauds of earth.

For some, adventures strange and new
Still lure and lead
Down paths unknown, to realms unguessed
Of dream and deed.

For some the glamour and the rare
High heritage
Of parts the many seek in vain
Upon time's stage.

While other lives in narrow bounds
Always must pace,
Few are the conquests these can make,
Few roads they knew.

Yet in some way not understood,
If love be there,
These narrow lives are wholly blest,
Complete and fair!

CANADA IS CARRYING ON in a big way the most prosperous and contented country on the face of the globe in these days of war's alarms and unemployment threat. Canada met the unemployment threat with a mass of public works from coast to coast including the great work of the Trans-Canada highway which will be a great national asset and well worth the investment. Then the great Dominion Service Loan was floated and the response was quick and gratifying, one hundred and fifty million dollars, and no trouble raising it right here in Canada. Signs of prosperity? What else?

BELLEVILLE FOLKS are getting their double windows on and the homes all banked up nice and snug for winter. Getting their coal in, too, and seeing that there is a sufficiency of emergency rations in case company drops in unexpected like. Committee of citizens is also busy making provision for those neighbors who may be in need this winter through lack of employment. That fund of ten thousand dollars should be easy to raise in such a prosperous community. This is not a privilege but a contribution but open to all, a freewill offering from the workers to the workless. A good way of showing gratitude for all our many blessings is to make our contribution to the civic fund as large as possible and make it without delay, and thus cheer the hearts of those citizens and neighbors who face the winter with fear in their hearts, fear that their wives and children may have to suffer from

CONSI EDENEIGHBORS

A respectable citizen, who maintains his family by intensive night and day application to the noble declaring of radio in his next door neighbor's household, was greatly assuring the sleep that is essential if he is to continue his efficient and medical advice is to the effect that his nervous system will soon be down unless he can obtain more rest so long as the neighbor's phonograph persists in turning his loud speaker over against the open bedroom window only a few feet away. The sufferer has tried to borrow the phonograph for mercy, and the neighbor has laughed at him in derision and refused. The Department of Health at the City Hall intervened in the hope of compromise, but only one to show some consideration for his fellow men. The only thing left is just laughed and made the radio sound louder. This is a case for true presentation of the case, the people of the neighborhood and the matter in hand. We certainly suggest no violence, but there might be possibility of the offender know in what utter contempt he is held by this city's best class of people. This whole question of city noises grows more and more annoying. It is eating at the nerves of urban citizens and is undermining, perhaps the most objectionable of all unnecessary noises are those of neighborhoods they disturb whole localities.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

THE LOAN

There is of course, no safer or sounder investment in Canada than the Dominion of Canada bonds. The rate of interest carried is not high, but it is the most overgenerous, considering the present volume of idle money in Canada. Sir Thomas White and N. W. Rhodes so clearly points out, are a first mortgage on all the assets, present or future, of the Dominion of Canada.

Canada's favourable position is aptly illustrated by comparison with that of Great Britain. The national debt of the Motherland is enormous, the taxation is approximately thirty five million dollars, besides five billions owing to local government debt. The combined national Provincial and municipal debts of Canada are about three billion dollars.

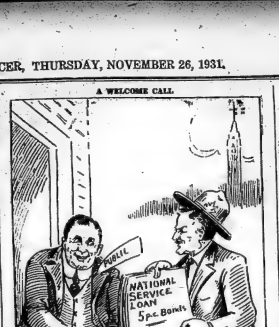
Britain with four and a half times Canada's population has ten times the debt. All the world recognizes the financial strength of the United Kingdom, but Canada's own financial position cannot be questioned.—Toronto Globe.

CAR TAKEN AT PRESCOTT

The city police department has been notified that a car bearing Ontario license BY-833—serial number 36-279Y, was stolen at Prescott on November 15.

A church ruin has been uncovered in the ancient Galilee capital at Sephoris.

Other Papers' Opinions



...FOOTPATHS BESIDE THE... HIGHWAYS

Some Western Ontario newspapers are commending the municipal councils for the construction of footpaths beside the highway as a means of both protecting pedestrians and furnishing employment in this time of special need of work.

A small part of the large sums of money that are now being spent by the Government upon the construction of highways in parts of the province where it is not at all clear that they are required or that they will attract enough traffic to warrant maintenance might well be spent upon the building of footpaths, especially in the vicinity to the larger centres of population. There is scarcely a person driving a motor car who has not experienced the feeling of uneasiness that attends the passage of another car after nightfall along a stretch of highway which pedestrians are known to frequent. In the glare of headlights the car which headlights on the opposing car makes it difficult to penetrate some person may be walking. That person may consider that he is easily seen by the driver, but the driver cannot do so. As a result real ride accidents are averted by some miraculous means. But sometimes the luck does not hold and he wonder why he was not visible to the man driving the car.

Every person who walks along a highway should have the light in his hands and every person driving a car should know that he was quite innocently, with strike down and perhaps murder killing him or inflicting serious injuries upon him. The saving feature is that motor car drivers persist in using contrary to the law the dim headlights which merely accentuate the danger and things have got to the point where that many drivers, seeing glaring headlights coming toward them, have adopted the practice of slowing down to a crawl because they are unwilling to assume the risk of manslaughter for which the other fellow is ready to be tried.

If manual labor is the demand of the moment it will mean the giving of a large amount of employment, greater amount of employment. The construction of the sidewalks that are being advocated would provide it. Those paths need not be of concrete or macadam. Gravel would dam. All that is required is a space wide enough people may walk with safety. Money spent in this direction would be largely invested safely for the population and would furnish a great deal of employment.—Brockville Recorder-Times.

Danish Folk Schools

It was my privilege in the summers of 1920-30, while studying the Danish Agricultural Exposition Station work and co-operation in Denmark, to visit a number of the Folk and Agricultural schools, to learn at first hand, something of the genesis of the Folkschool movement, the methods of teaching, and to discern some of the influences which this form of education has had on the life of the Danish people, writes Dr. Geo. McConkey of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

A study of the peasant movement in Denmark reveals that the Folk-schools have been one of the major factors in making the rural population, and consequently the interest in and application of scientific principles of farming and co-operative effort in production, manufacturing and marketing. It was Bishop Grundvig (1783-1870), idealist and patriot, who conceived the idea that through education in community life Denmark may a means of raising the intellectual and material welfare of the people which at that time was greatly defeated. A dispirited, agricultural population living on the most part peasants, following extractive methods of farming and selling their products largely grain, hay, etc., in the markets of Europe in unequal competition with the new lands of the Americas. The situation called for a reconstruction in farming methods, toward more intensive farming and production of dairy and livestock products. Fortunately an excellent and dependable market was close at hand in the growing industrial population of Britain.

The needed change in farming methods could not come without a change in the educational level and spirit "expirit de-corps" of the people. It was here that Bishop Grundvig's work started by establishing a community life between the young men and women of 18 to 25 years of age, who have been out in the work-a-day world, could gather in the winter months and study with a view to betterment.

The course of studies is mainly cultural, but with practical interest, and not intended to be technical. The High School with its practical efficiency will follow if the Folk-schools have been properly founded and he is started to think for himself. As the name implies the school fails to interest educators, is that there are no examinations, but rather standard for graduation is emphasized. There are some 60 of Folk-schools in Denmark with 5,000 to 500,000, and today, after years of experience, the thing that impresses a Canadian student of Agriculture in Denmark is the general spirit in which pervades the community. The people do not rely on the bureaucracy for progress, but do the needed thing themselves by cooperative organization.

The spirit of Grundvig still lives and leaders are constantly welling up from the people. The work of Niels Buhk in establishing a gymnastic Folk High School is a splendid example of this, as is the International Folk High School at Helsingnore. Denmark, founded by Peter Manniche, is a country of international understanding. Buhk, the son of a fisherman, studied in Copenhagen and after experience as farmer, fisherman, sailor, took a course in gymnastics, anatomy, physiology, etc., at Copenhagen, and later started a chance to gymnastics in a small house near his brother-in-law's Folk School. The institution proved popular, and in five years' time Buhk, with the aid of his students and the community, was building a Gymnastic High School.

Buhk's ideal is to train leaders for gymnastics, and today after only fifteen years of work, over 2,000 leaders have come out, and a great many of these have started gymnastic classes in their own communities. Buhk has developed his own system of gymnastics characterized by free movement, less static and more military than the Swedish or German system.

The Buhk system has been recognized by experts throughout the world and different governments have invited Buhk to tour their countries, give demonstrations and tell something of the influences and ramifications through the community life of the people of Denmark. The Japanese Government contracted with Buhk to undertake an itinerary through Japan with a team of 24, 19 boys and 5 girls. Only a few Canadians have had the privilege of seeing his system and hearing something of his Folkschool work. It seemed an opportunity not to be missed, to have the team route back to Denmark via Canada. The hit agreed to do.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was eating brekfist this morn ing and ma said to pop, Willyum it seems to me you arrived home at all hours of the morning last nite, am sure I herd you come strike 2 in my sleep. Considering the alleged fact that Mr. Pop has such a bad cold, you must of over stayed your welcome and made him lose his appetite. He needed sleep, she said.

O yes, 6 of one and half a dozzen of the other, in other words no at all, ma said. You left this house at 8 o'clock and I was thinking of playing poker, and with all the economizing I have to practice I will be doing to keep up with the sprit of the times and still stay in the budget, why I couldent think of a worse or a more inappropriate time for economizing, he said.

I gess youre rite at that, pop said, and she said, Oh! Of corse but this is no time to find it out now that the Manges and his wife age is a thing of the passed and can be remedied.

That likewise true, but in this hour of depression we must all be as all on the other side, inasmuch as I herted out, but conversation by play is to be like my winner of the evening and came away with 15 cents, which is not to be sneezed at, he said.

Well, you lost me 75 dollers, ma saying. Well, this is certeny better. After all, if you use your head you can always get more money, and on sure things, I sippose the gambling instinct is born in some folks, aggrated, she said, and pop said, Why no, but he has to be born with a nake. We've got another lit tle baby arriving at our home in time next week he said.

Well, I'm glad to hold the winning cards, ma said, and pop said lil try to remember that.

And he winked at me over his ind cup of cawffee and I winked

FINISH AND PACK POULTRY

Farmers in the Campbell's Bay area in Pontiac County, P.Q., are busy putting the finishing touches to their poultry for the Christmas market. The early cold weather in that district surrounding the Bay has brought on the fall rush earlier and it seems probable that much added profit will be realized. Under the leadership of the ramifications at the end of the provincial Poultry Producers' Association, a system of grade-feeding and finishing their poultry has been established with the Poultry Division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It will be graded, tagged and packed in boxes which will be sold direct by open bid on Assembly Day, December 10, and should prices not prove sufficiently attractive the whole lot as a pooled shipment will be shipped to Montreal for sale through the usual channels.

With twelve million acres of forest cover and ideal climatic and feeding conditions, New Brunswick is the best big game country in the eastern part of the continent.

POLLY'S PARTY

by Edythe Squier Draper

There was a person Polly Downs fell very sorry for that cold January night. Herself. Poor Polly Downs. Pitiful Polly. She never had any fun. She filled up her home and took care of Bobby, five, and the twins, Jim and Jimmie, with a part-time maid; a no-time husband! The rest of the bunch had interesting lives, clubs, bands; or else husbands and no children—Polly thought—lots of domestic slave. A tear dropped from pitiful Polly's blue eye down on Bobby's shirt that, after playing with that horrid little Harold Dryden, had to have buttons sewed on all over. Oh, poor, pitiful Polly.

The door-bell.

She couldn't even have a minute to cry—

Why, Penelope Fahnestock! This cold night! Come in.

She drew the slim, fashionable figure into the warm lighted living room. And she forgot pitiful Polly Downs, and her own loneliness, wanness, in the pale face of Pen against the black expensive fur. Such silence, like a cold fog enveling Penelope Fahnestock, daughter of misfortune.

"Shouldn't you like the lights on? We'll fire in a minute. And when it's the only thing, you know." Just the right thing to say, Penelope now, for a few minutes.

I believe you. I'd just been talking about those babies. Evelyn had a little cold when I put her to bed." Polly ran to the stairs.

What was the matter? Pen looked so miserable. Unhappy. And yet she was having a success out here. Some said that the career was not altogether the absorbing thing she thought it was. Claimed to Polly—and to Polly's brother!—that it was? Well, what could she do if it is?

She stood in the airy nursery that Polly had made out of a room. Ing-Hoods and Chinese bells dangling here and there, some bare. She thought of the bleak-faced women alone down there in the city. She stepped resolutely to a small white crib beside —mother in a dim-lighted corner. "Come, darling," she whispered, "but you have a bit more room to put your bunchy." She picked a baby girl up from pink blankets. Only a few days old, so tiny, almost without the other one. Why, she's gone to sleep, hasn't he?" Oh well, she would in a minute. There, there, She adjusted the blanket without darting a look at Penelope's face.

She ran up the stairs again, took Bobby's pajamas in his rosy cord into her room, closed the door. "Mother" she murmured. "Mother" she murmured. "Mother" she murmured

STRENUOUS GAMES IN VOLLEYBALL

Business Men and Seniors Win Games Last Night

Both volleyball sets which were played at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday evening in the "Big Four" League were won in straight games. In the first series the Business took two games from the Kiwanis by the scores of 15-6 and 15-11. Kiwanis staged quite a determined rally in the second of the two fixtures, and seriously threatened to overhaul their rivals.

Kiwanis—G. F. Cole, Dr. Crook, D. Martin, G. F. Griffin, P. Houston, R. Wotten.

Business Men—Scrt Houston, C. W. Munnings, H. J. Clarke, W. McEwen, J. R. Shortt, R. L. Brown.

In the night cap affair the Seniors showed a little too much punch for the Y's Men, winning their games from the latter by the scores of 15-8 and 15-12. Both games were productive of some smart plays and prolonged rallies, were quite the order of events. Seniors by their win of last night and also the previous evening are now leading the parade and judging from their display of last night will be hard to dislodge.

Y's Men—V. Wells, C. White, A. Weir, P. Black, M. Blanchard, A. Bryant.

Seniors—N. Clarke, A. McFee, M. Davison, C. Bryant, P. Faulkner, A. Wilkerson, H. Woodley.

"Y" Alleys

In the Ladies' Afternoon League, Just Us took all four points from the Anaca, whose playing deserved better luck. High Bowlers were Mrs. Wright for Us with 84 and Mrs. MacLaurin for the Anaca with 82.

In the Industrial League, Walker's took four points from Hardware's, who failed to show up, so Walker's bowled their score and took the points. Herb Fox was high man here.

It is the hope of the management that teams having games yet to play will finish out schedule as the race for second and third places is very close and it is hoped to have some teams take points by default.

KI-Y CLUB'S REP's ARE APPOINTED

At the weekly meeting of the local Kiwanis Club the committee representatives of the club for the Ki-Y hockey league were appointed. The annual meeting of the Ki-Y hockey league will be called at the Y.M.C.A. next Tuesday evening when all teams are expected to be represented. The Kiwanis committee composed of N. La Palm, George Lee, Ed. Logan, E. W. Bateman and C. Smith will be at the meeting which will be in charge of Mr. J. Shortt and his Y.M.C.A. representatives.

The Ki-Y league is for the younger hockey aspirants of the city. One league is for players under 12, another under 15, another under 18 and the junior league for boys under 20. It is hoped that all teams will have their delegates at the meeting as early as possible.

FRESHMAN RULE TO BE DROPPED

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 25. — A second change in the venue for the annual meeting of the Canadian intercollegiate athletic union was announced this morning, when it was stated by officials of the athletic board of control of Queen's University, that the meeting originally scheduled to be held at Queen's on Nov. 28, and which yesterday was postponed until December 5th, will now be held in Montreal this coming Saturday.

It was learned that Western and McGill registered opposition to the holding of the meeting in Kingston on December 5, and it was finally decided to meet in Montreal this Saturday.

The present indications are that the freshman rule will be scrapped, as Queen's will undoubtedly vote against its adoption, the rule requiring an unanimous vote before it can be included in the regulations for next year.

STANDARD MAINTAINED

CAPE TOWN, S.A., Nov. 25— (C.P., Cable via Reuters) — The currency finance bill to enable South Africa to remain on the gold standard today was carried in the House of Assembly by a majority of 28 votes. The vote was 78 to 50 for the measure.

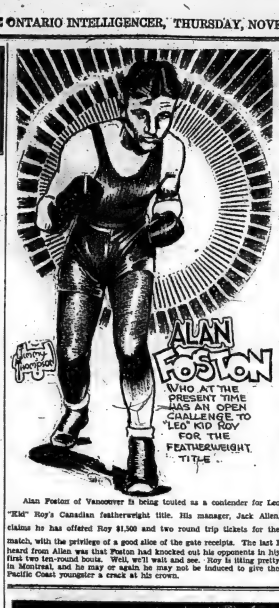
We see that Bill Rankin has announced his card of "runners" for Monday evening. He made final arrangements for the best with Matchmaker Corcoran on Monday evening. The best were those who appeared on the last card here, have been re-engaged and although nothing authentic has been released as yet, for the fall card, it has been announced definitely that Kaakoski and Kogut will again appear on Monday night although not against each other.

Personally we would like to have seen these two boys in the "weighed circle" once again as Kogut was not at his best at their previous meeting. But Matchmaker Corcoran assured Mr. Rankin that he was sending down Art Dick, the Brownville cottage star, to oppose Kogut and would throw the "cowbell" in against a new comer in the semi-final. Perhaps Dick will pan out better, as the fans will see two men who they know are good and no doubt the new faces will strive to make a showing in Eastern Ontario.

We do know that Mr. Corcoran is sold on Belleville as a boxing town, as he made statements to that effect when here on his last visit.

Tonight the city league will get off squarely for the coming season. President Don Rae is to be congratulated on same in order that the fans and players will feel that the league this season. President Rae has offered Roy $1,500 and two round trip tickets for the match, with the privilege of a good slice of the gate receipts. The last I heard from Allen was that Foston had knocked out his opponents in his fifth or sixth round bout in Montreal and he may or again he may not be induced to give the Pacific Coast youngster a crack at his crown.



Some fans were riding referee Colling for allowing the players to kick the puck in the centre ice area. This new rule was adopted at the annual O. H. A. meeting last Saturday. It seems to speed up the play and stops considerable boil ing.

The local kids kept up the pace set by the visitors for the first two periods but they are not in as good condition as the Dukes and the third period was disastrous for the Cubs.

As the proceeds were for the unemployment relief fund it was thought that a few more fans would have been present. But at that, those who were present had the time of their lives and the way they cheered showed the management that they were behind the kids to say the least.

MODIFY CATTLE EMBARGO

Ministerial Order of November 9 removes the embargo on the importation of cattle from the Old Country in so far as Scotland is concerned. The order states that the removal is made because there have been no outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in Scotland over a satisfactory period. Animals from Scotland may now be imported providing they are embarked at a port in Scotland on a vessel sailing direct to Canada without touching at an English port. They feed accompanying the cattle for use en route must also have been grown and stored in Scotland. The Order permits consideration of application for the importation of cattle sheep, other ruminants and swine from Scotland.

Alan Foston of Vancouver is being touted as a contender for Leo "Kid" Roy's Canadian featherweight title. His manager, Jack Allen, claims he has offered Roy $1,500 and two round trip tickets for the "YOU'VE disgraced me for the last time! I'm sick and tired of going out in the evening with you when you haven't shaved since morning. How you think you can get away with it is beyond me. You don't fool anyone but yourself by dabbing a little powder on your face. There wasn't another man at the party with a dirty growth of stubble. I don't care if it is a nuisance to shave. What if your beard is tough and your skin tender! There must be something wrong with the way you shave. I'm sure there's a razor blade that will remove your whiskers without hurting your face, and it's up to you to find it."

How much domestic discord can be traced to scenes like this! We might as well admit a growth of stubble is repulsive to most women—wives, sweethearts, mothers and all.! By shaving carefully once and often twice a day, we help to hold or win the respect and affection of friends and family. A short time ago shaving was a task many men liked to avoid. Today Gillette is offering a razor blade of remarkable quality that shears stubborn beard cleanly and smoothly. Your razor glides so easily you scarcely know you're shaving. Try this remarkable new Gillette blade on our money-back guarantee. Use a blade or two. If every shave isn't far more comfortable than any you have ever experienced, return the package to your dealer and he will refund the price.

MUSICAL HALL FIGHT IS ON

Trouble Brews Between Labor Ministry and Vaudevillians

By THOS. T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, Nov. 25.—(By cable)—There is trouble ahead between the Ministry of Labor and large London vaudeville interests and it all started with the ministry's reputed determination to tighten up regulations regarding the admission to Great Britain for foreign variety stage artists.

The ministry proposes to exclude foreign performers "except those of exceptional talent," and the music hall managers question the officials' ability to decide on such a point. They maintain also that an adequate programme cannot be staged without the inclusion of a substantial foreign element.

Just where the point is undecided who will judge what consti-

"I always wanted a daughter of my own," Mrs. Corbie went on, "but it wasn't to be. I've always understood Jonathan better than boys. I never understood Jonathan, not even from the first. He was the quietest baby you ever saw, Miss Marsh—the day school I went to, kept by a Miss Pincher—he thought of nothing but his books and reading. Used to come home and ask me all sorts of questions—what so and so meant and half the time I couldn't tell him as I didn't know myself. He learned it all, too, quick as anything, and then he gave up asking. Not that I'm complaining . . . He's always been kind and polite enough to me, but not the other sons you hear about. Never tells me anything. Why," she added with unconscious humour, "if he was going to be hanged I don't believe he'd even tell me. He'd just leave me to find out for myself."

Priscilla checked a smile as she carefully put three lumps of sugar into the cup and took it to the hostess.

"I think Jonathan's rather shy of showing his feelings," she said help lessly conscious that she knew less about Jonathan. "It will be different now, of course, with Beryl to be good that you and I are going to be good friends, he'll be so pleased and we shall all be happy together."

But Jonathan's mother shook her head.

"It won't make any difference, my dear, I'm not his sort, even though I'm his mother. He feels awkward with me; I know that. He's always afraid that I'll do the wrong thing, or say something I shouldn't say. I hope if ever you have any children, my dear, that you won't suffer through them as I have. You hope so much when they come, and they disappoint you all the time. Not that Jonathan means to, I'm sure he doesn't but there you are—it's as if some one took my own baby away as soon as it was born and left a strange one in its place . . ."

"I think you're too sensitive," Priscilla said gently. "I'm sure Jonathan has never meant to hurt you. I'm sure he's really very fond of you."

Mrs. Corbie sighed and took a long drink of tea. "That's as may be," she said.

"And he's so clever," Priscilla went on. "I know a man who was at Cambridge with him, and he's told me that he was a brilliant scholar Jonathan was."

"You mean books and things," his mother put in. "Well, so he is from what I can make out of it, but I never wanted a clever son. Miss—Priscilla my dear, I just wanted a son who would love me and talk to me about himself, and take me out sometimes.

"But surely he takes you out!" Priscilla exclaimed.

Mrs. Corbie shook her head. "Not if he can help it and I suppose I can't blame him. He doesn't like the sort of life here any more than I do. At first I used to ask nice girls to the house to meet him . . . and pretty girls who'd have been only too pleased to be friends with him. But he never took any notice of them—said he didn't care for women."

Priscilla thought suddenly of Jonathan's words to Beryl: "I wish you'll think I'm a little mad, but I've often gone mad in sort of my way just to see you pass. I've often waited hours on the chance of seeing you. Will you marry me?" There is no other woman I have ever wanted for my wife unless never will be."

Was that real life? She supposed it was, and yet it was something so very different from the love Air felt for Clive.

That had come gradually, without her knowledge. She had slowly begun to realize how much he cared for her, to miss him when they did not meet, to wish he would come again. Well, he had gone now—for forever. When he came back from the other side of the world, if he ever came, she would be married to Jonathan Corbie . . .

She tried not to think of it.

Mrs. Corbie went on: "If ever you have any children, my dear, I hope they'll be girls. Jonathan couldn't help loving his own."

Priscilla felt the color rising in her face. Her whole body seems to shrink from the thought of children of hers that would also be Jonathan's.

"This is lovely cake," she said with an effort to change the subject. "It's not like what I used to make." Jonathan's mother said naively: "I used to bake very Tuesday so that there'd be a supply for the week if any one came in, and lots of our neighbors used to drop in in the old days for supper. We used do have it at six then, just after the shop shut, but now if any one comes it's all so formal—like being in a restaurant . . ."

She went on and on in spite of Priscilla's polite efforts to stop her, and it was a relief when there was a man's voice in the hall and a moment later Jonathan came into the room and looked at his mother, and then at the girl.

"Am I too late for a cup of tea?" he said. "I think it's Priscilla who's peering into the pot. "We ought to have some more hot water," said Corbie."

"I suppose we'd better ring the bell then, Jonathan's mother said in the tone of voice that seemed to say how much rather she would go down into the kitchen herself and watch the kettle boil.

It began to rain before Priscilla left, so Jonathan went for his car to drive her home.

"Fool come again soon!" his mother asked nervously. With her son in the room she had once again become silent and nervous, trying to live up to what she imagined his unexcited her to be.

"Very soon," Priscilla promised. "And you must come to see us. I want you to meet my father and brother. Father is rather an invalid, you know, and hardly ever goes out."

She kissed her most affectionately when she said good-by, conscious of Jonathan's faithful unsmiling eyes, and as soon as they were driving away she said impulsively:

"I think your mother's a dear."

There was a little silence; then Jonathan answered with a note of discomfort in his voice: "I daresay you'll think shocked when I tell you that I'm almost a stranger to both my parents. We never seem to have anything in common. I suppose it's my own fault."

"I'm sure it is," Priscilla told him calmly. "If you cant love your mother, you can't love any one. She is so wonderfully natural and unspoiled with all her success; she wants people to love her so very much." She hesitated, then added slowly, "I think she's terribly lonely, too."

"Lonely! It had evidently never occurred to him. "She has every thing she can possibly want," he said.

"She has nothing at all that she wants," Priscilla told him. "Do you think this house and all your father's money mean anything to her? Well they do not. I believe she would be only too glad and happy to go back to her old life when you were poor and she had to do all her work. She shivered a little. "Money does not make you really happy," she said with the desolate thought that perhaps some day she, too, would be looking backward and longing for old days and old struggles that had at least meant happiness.

Jonathan said quickly "And yet every day there are women ascertaining everything else for money."

"Do you mean as a sin?" Priscilla asked.

"You know I didn't. You're different."

She sighed. "I don't see in what way."

"In every way," he answered in his quiet voice. "Because some day I mean to make you love me so well that it will not matter to you if we have nothing in the world, and if we have to start out barefoot to begin life all over again."

She laughed a little at that. "Sometimes you are a poet," she said. "And I am sure you'd hate to be barefoot as much as I should."

She was a little afraid of Jonathan when he grew serious; she always felt that she must laugh and be flippant.

She thought suddenly of Clive. By this time the ship that carried him away from her must be steaming slowly down the Channel through the mist and rain. What time is it, do you know?"

PRIVACY GREAT ESSENTIAL IN TIME OF SICKNESS

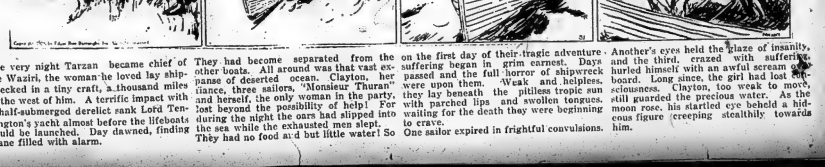
During many years experience in ambulance work, we have found in most cases it is necessary that the patient and attendants' compartments in the ambulance be separate from the driver's compartment. This affords no further explanation. If you stop a moment to consider the private attention that is so often necessary when a patient is being moved.

Our private ambulance was built by Studebaker for ambulance work only. The cot may be admitted from the side or rear of the ambulance and the patient's compartment is private from the driver's seat with draw curtains on every window. It is equipped with the easy Bonnard-ner cot, heaters front and rear, first aid kit, thermos, hot water bottles etc.

Different concerns have built a combination hearse and ambulance which we do not consider satisfactory for in order to carry a heavy load, which is sometimes necessary in a hearse, heavier springs are built in, thus losing the easy riding qualities that an ambulance should possess. We are also told by many people that they do not care to have their friends moved in a conveyance which is used for a hearse at a time of sickness.

Then again other firms have remodeled ordinary sedan cars into ambulances by removing the front seat and placing a single seat behind the driver's wheel thus allowing room for the cot on the opposite side of the driver and to make loading possible the post between the doors opposite the driver is removed and the patient loaded from the side. In this type of sedan ambulance sometimes termed limousine ambulance, privacy is absolutely out of the question, it also lacks the riding ease as it is merely the ordinary sedan length.

Then engaging an ambulance do not be confused but make sure you are getting an easy riding private ambulance which is used for this work exclusively.



Our private ambulance accommodates patient and two attendants in the private patient's compartment and two passengers and driver in the front, is thoroughly washed, fumigated, a complete change of linen for every patient and is stored in our steam heated basement at all times.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 31

(Metropolitan Newspap er Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The very night Tarzan became chief of the Waziri, the woman he loved lay shipwrecked in a tiny craft, a thousand miles to the west of him. A terrific impact with a half-submerged derelict sank Lord Tennington's yacht almost before the lifeboats could be launched. Day dawned, finding Jane filled with alarm.

They had become separated from the other boats. All around was that vast expanse of deserted ocean. Clayton, her fiance, three sailors, "Monsieur Thuran" and herself, the only woman in the party, lost beyond the possibility of help. For the night the oars had slipped into the sea while the exhausted men slept. They had no food and but little water! So on the first day of their tragic adventure suffering began in grim earnest. Days passed and the full horror of shipwreck were upon them. Weak and helpless, they lay beneath the pitiless tropic sun with parched lips and swollen tongues, waiting for the death they were beginning to crave.

One sailor expired in frightful convulsions.

Another's eyes held the glaze of insanity, and the third, crazed with suffering, hurled himself with an awful scream overboard. Long since, the girl had lost her seleusnses. Clayton, too weak to move, still guarded the precious water. As the moon rose, his startled eye beheld a hideous figure creeping stealthily towards him.

USED GASOLINE ON FIRE

HAMILTON, Nov. 26 (CP)—Severely burned in a fire which razed her home at Fluhrerville yesterday Mrs. Sidney Lint, 37, was in critical condition in hospital here according to neighbors. Mrs. Lint used gasoline in an effort to light a coal fire. An explosion resulted, and the kitchen enveloped in flames.

ANTIPATHY WANES

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—Antipathy to Toronto on the part of residents of other parts of Canada is beginning to wane, delegates to the convention of the Canadian Association of Tourist and publicity bureaus said last night at a dinner given for them by the city council in the Martimes.

FINANCIAL NEWS

NO CHANGES ON STANDARD EX.

With U. S. Markets Closed No Movement is Seen

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26.—With American markets closed yesterday on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market appeared loathe to move prices of higher-priced issues but nibbled at them close to today's forenoon trading. General tone of the list was dull and trend of the few movements somewhat easier.

Oranada Hoyen was under pressure for a time, price dipping to a low of 21.50 and standing after a mild rally at 21.56, off 5, when taken. Hollinger recovered 10 to 36 and Teck Hughes 3 to $3.15. Among cheaper golds, Ventures, Moffatt-Hall and Hibago showed small loses.

Norsoka and International nickel were unchanged. Chibougamau unexpectedly dropped 5 points to 34, sue on the board and a cent or so higher at 38 and standing after a dull section chemical research showed the only change with another loss of 10 to $2.50.

RECOVER SOME LOST GROUND

Grain Prices Sharpened During Early Trading

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 26.—(By Canadian Press)—Buoyed up by a strong Liverpool close grain prices had recovered about one cent of an initial hour loss on the grain exchange at noon today. Values at the mid-session period showed losses of 1-2 to 5-8c.

December was quoted at 59 7-8 1-2 cents lower; November at 59 7-8, May at 64 1-4 and July at 65 1-8 each were 3-8 cents below the market's opening figures.

Trading was a dull affair consisting mainly of Commission House buying. Liverpool opened firm but declined easiness at the mid-day mark and this influenced prices on the local market. Opening 1 1-3 cents lower the market wavered uncertainly during the first hour but with steadier tone back on reports of a firmer close at Liverpool. There was no quotation of export trade worked overnight.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26 (By The Canadian Press)—Cattle 13; lettovers totalled 280 head. There were no deliverable cattle included in the supply. Trading was dull with few sales during the morning.

Calves 8; calf prices were $1.00 lower for good veals at $6.50 to $7.00 for best vealers.

Hogs—Inst: bids on "hogs were 25 cents lower at $4.25 P.O.B. for bacon or $4.25 weighed off car.

Sheep: There were 700 lambs left from Wednesday's market. Odd lambs were steady at $6.00 to $6.50 with culls downward to $4.00, good light sheep said steady at $3.00 to $3.50.

COMMUTATION TO LIFE TERM

Albert Murder Case is Recalled By Cabinet Decision

Ottawa, Nov. 26 (CP)—Commutation to life imprisonment has been granted in the case of Lucas Colton who was sentenced to death by the Alberta courts for the murder of J. Ambrychuk, Colton, whose execution had been set for Friday next, will be kept until the remained of his life in the Prince Albert, Sask., penitentiary.

The murder took place on June 27 last at Sheriff Alec. Official records show that Ambrychuk was found by Colton in the bedroom of his wife and the killing followed.

CAT FRIENDS URGED TO ACT TO SAVE THEM

Reporter Sees and Hears Shades and Sounds of Animals

MANY UNFORTUNATE

Animal Lovers Worry Over Army of Wanderers

Bedraggled cats, scrawny cats and cats in various degrees of desuetude and piteousness have marked the city and wander aimlessly throughout its back alleys and thoroughfares, subsisting on whatever small bits of refuse and garbage they chance to pick up. Cold and dead bodies of these creatures ranging all the way from fat-eyed little kittens to larger ones who have been fortunate enough to die a natural or unnatural death—or lucky enough, now that the freezing weather has started—are to be seen lying beside the back alleys and thoroughfares. Nightly the chilly air is cut by the yowls and wails of these homeless ones from back fences by disreputable tom cats who fight with unusual belligerency and life natural rules of the Hague convention, and who, hailing from every part of Persia, hold nicknow with the "fussy chalenge. Garbage cans are a source for these weary travellers, and fierce the bitter conflicts waged for the over some choice bit to be garnered from the refuse. Even the occupants of weary householders whose nerves at times become jangled and torn by the noises of the night.

Diminutive kittens wend their half starved way along the front fences at all hours of the day and night; huge chaps there are, with a mien automobiles account for hundreds and still the hungry pass in the day their numbers without letup. What is to be done with them is a problem which conforms the hundreds of animal lovers of the city who have complained time and again at the ill treatment accorded some of these unfortunate creatures. No solution, so far, has been offered.

Dog-owners hate them and seem rallied to the defense of their fatmentioned pets while a great deal of work could be accomplished in the care and treatment of the dogs still the cats have the option of being painlessly put to death when they are cast out or found where they are not wanted. Very many people have the habit of buying small puppies for their children to maul and otherwise abuse until the soft fluff of their coat is replaced by the silky, shaggy hair of the mature dog. Awkwardness of actions and the peculiarness of gait which makes a puppy such a delight to the eye and jority of people is replaced by more dignified, but not at all unattractive at, but one who is growing to love their pets and who master who has adopted him. It is then that the dog is neglected and from the less of a nuisance by those who do not understand. He is chased by the dog, or taken and thrown in the river or driven out in a car some place to be abandoned to meet with the fate custom which is still in vogue regarding the disposal of the surplus numbers of cats.

Nothing other than the instant drowning of all kittens and puppies immediately after they are born and before their sense of feeling becomes acute enough developed, can be done with these unwanted animals. Many'see in the habit of doing this with the drowning of their favorite pet cat or dog but very much prefer it through sentiment than a natural distaste for the job will not do it. For the former there is no remedy, but for the latter some men organized a society for the purpose to perform the task for a very nominal fee which would in time put an end to this army of homeless wanderers and those people who really love animals and do not mind would be so ill at ease when these poor animals are observed.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

TOO BUSY TO CELEBRATE

Berlin, Nov. 26.—Today is Chancellor Heinrich Bruening's 46th birthday, but he was too busy to celebrate. Unable to tear himself away from the continuous round of cabinet conferences, the chancellor spent today as he spends most of the other—at work.

SWALLOWS BALL

ruch and then pull it back again by means of a string. Thus he is kept from getting to the bird.

Years ago Lanford found he was rapidly losing his hearing. A physician in Greer, S. C., told him his lower eardrums had closed and that he was starting to death.

Laugford then went to Dr. Tuck- er who performed the singular operation. An incision was made in Langford's stomach and he was fed through a rubber tube for six months. Then an opening was opened by hydraulic pressure — by the use of water — and later Lanford was started to swallowing the small metal ball.

This was increased to its present size at the rate of one inch per one thirty-second of an inch in diameter each week. Langford goes through his torturous routine of swallowing the ball and pulling it back.

"Sometimes the ball presses so hard against my throat, I almost choke out," Lanford said. If his esophagus should close entirely as it did two years ago, it would prove fatal unless an operation was soon to be followed his daily morning routine. Breathing the metal ball to keep from starving.

Local View

"The case looks to me, from what you have told me of it, just an ordinary stoppage of the lower esophagus due to some mechanical means of irritation of which there are an unlimited kind," said Dr. Faulkner, when asked his opinion of it. "I have a case in mind in the office right now," he continued, "but as you know an average physician is generally reluctant to bring himself in his efforts at obtaining the sensational, and of course in is great advertising for the doctor who would by no means be averse to having his name broadcast throughout the country."

Years ago, we are told, when the making of soap was very carried on in back yards or half the people in Ontario, the custom of assembling about the caustic liquid, the throat resulted in an epidemic of sore throats such as this and many old time boogie doctors can still well remember when they were forced to resort to "the bougie" in an effort to clear the throat, a practice which is still carried on, according to Dr. Faulkner. Thus while the feet may sound sensational, like all others when it is traced to its ground is absolutely the imagination of various writers.

Women's Interests in the Home

DON'T INTEND TO MARRY

By Beatrice Fairfax, An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

This is the time of the year when the freshman class in various colleges, national institutions, cavting tacked up the pennants, arranged the sofa pillows, and fanned up the trusty mandolin, is ready for the annual entertainments on marriage.

It would be interesting to know the origin of that cross current which catches the freshman often but his first year from home and makes him, or more especially her, decide that marriage is not for them. There looms a career! The silkrel crown is waiting for the boy or girl brave enough to forswear matrimony and agree with Stapling when he spoke from on Gebenna and up to the throne, he himself the fastest who travels alone."

But—let's recall that the ink on the verse had scarcely dried before Stapling married. In a divorce-ridden world the two are regarded as England's model couple.

And how many of these quick-travellers toward success, have made the grade in single harness? I don't seem to remember many of them, do you? At the moment, it's difficult to recall even a handful of world figures who happen to be bachelors and spinsters.

There is the late Thomas Edison, twice married. The writer remembers when she was a young reporter being sent to ask the wizard some questions about electrical devices in the home—and the contrivances were comparatively new then. He bowed to Miss Edison when the question of human progress and happiness arose.

The late Senator Morrow never hesitated to ascribe much of his wonderful—though he was too modest to call it that—to his wife's influence. As a student at Smith College, "Reed Cutter (as Mrs. Morrow was known) was the type of girl one always associated with success. She was ever a leader. They had she has refused absolutely to let her husband's unexpired term in the Senate, so carefully might she have stood out from the mass of politicos. "Dwight reversed decisions" in the Sen in chamber that we so often think of as "among those present."

The Lone Eagle, when he married Anne Morrow, did not relapse into female slippers, as many predicted. He took his wife with him across the Pacific, the first woman to fly that route, and she has given a splendid account of herself at the controls.

All things considered we are not so alarmed at the fact that a part of a woman's college who wrote them-selves down as confirmed celibates. Of the 800 young freshmen at two men's colleges who put a "no, too" on the usual questionaire A more light hight, a good orchestra, and we shall find these girls and boys falling in love just as hard as their great grandmothers and great grandfathers ever did when Queen Victoria was a white muslin and a blue sash.

The girl and boy freshmen who declare against marriage are just a bit light headed over their freedom; they've just escaped from home where often there was too much parental interference with their young lives. For the moment, it's too intoxicating for them to realize that after a while "this freedom" is apt to palls.

The first year classes of the three colleges who decided never, never to marry are so young—at, without shame, they may resig sooner or la of their vows of celiba-

DOES NOT DEPLORE EXISTENCE OF RUSSIA

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26—Male undergraduates of the University of Toronto last night decided not to deplore the existence of Russia. A resolution to this effect was defeated 301-145 at a Hart House debate.

Condemnation of section 98 of the Criminal Code, under which eight leading Communists were convicted here recently, was also expressed in the meeting when a motion of W. Strehan, University clerge, was carried by a standing vote.

TOLD POLICE HE "INVENTED" STORY

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP) — Harold Slater, Greenville youth, was arrested yesterday by Wentworth county police on a charge of vagrancy, after told police recently of an alleged attempt by two men to set fire to his parents' house when his family were asleep in bed. He saw the men as he returned from a dance in Hamilton, he said, but they escaped. Slater is alleged to have told police he "invented" the story of the fire attempt.

Says Canadians Understand Cooking for Hot Weather

London, Nov. 26— (CP)— Miss Winifred Wrench in Overseas has some more interesting things to say about Canada, this time explanative on our excellent salads.

"I have discovered for one thing that Canadians understand a hot weather diet infinitely better than we do at home. This is, of course, only natural being they enjoy a hotter summer and are obliged to study how best to live under the circumstances of which we know but little. We do still bring Canada and the United States with regard to supplying our dietetic knowledge scientifically in connection with restaurants and hotels and in our homes. I can get a better balanced and more attractive meal in either Montreal or Toronto, than I can, at the price, in any restaurant I have ever visited in either London or Paris. I have never heard anyone praise our cabbage or Brussels sprouts, nor the way in which they are cooked.

"Both in Canada and the United States much more use is made of cream cheese than with us. Without fear of contradiction I can say that the Canadian departmental store there salads are unequalled. How is it that lettuce leaves in Canada seem to curl in the right direction and are always crisp?

"I am looking forward eagerly to learn all I could about diet and had the good fortune to meet Miss M. Goodeve, a Nutritionist, in Montreal, who works in connection with the Child Welfare Department. For the first time in my life, I discovered someone who is concentrating on diet and health; not on diet and disease. I had no space in which to tell you in detail of my visit to the slums in Montreal nor of how Miss Goodeve manages to persuade her families to replace too many cereals and meat with more fruit and vegetables and milk, nor to explain the budgeting she somehow contrives to get the mothers she visits to carry out. Miss Goodeve and her colleagues and their instructors carry on where Truby-King leaves off, that is to say when the baby ceases to be a baby. Our Infant Welfare work in Great Britain is as good as any in the world. I think much more can be made of it for our school children and mothers in this respect, and the advances that have been made since I was working in connection with mothercraft.

Fashion Fancies

By Alice Alden

Wait till dark to put on the season's nicest frock. These are the small semi-formal models. A new after dark gown is made of antique gold lame with a rose flower design and has small circular capelets edged with ermine, at the shoulders. Beaded detail give shirt fullness.

It has become necessary to have at least one model of the most popular evening frock of the season. This year, the frock with crossed decolletage straps in back and a bustle effect is the most favored model. It has been seen in deep wine colored taffeta with chartreuse lame trimming at the between the bustle effect and the crossed straps.

A useful partnership is that of felt and velvet for hats. A smart little turban of bright green with green velvet petals.

The jumper jumps into prominence. One smart shop is showing a sleeveless jumper of fine tricotine with square jet buttons. It has a cap and scarf to match and is smart with a black woollen skirt.

The seal of approval is on sesl. One very good looking set shows a hat of black sealskin trimmed with white quills and worn with a scarf and muff purse both of seal and both lined with white velvet.

It is felt that is the latest to join the bag fabric family. A new offering is a bag of interlaced stitched brown felt with a brown felt with a bar and handle of ornamental wood. Together with the handle it forms a circular model.

DECK HAND DROWNS IN SOULANGES CANAL

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 26—Slipping from the coping near the foot of Soulanges Canal, about 40 miles from here yesterday, Maurice Ross, 26, of Cornwall, was drowned. Ross was clearing a cable from the steamer Teak Bay and was attempting to fasten it on a snubbing post. He was employed as a deck-hand on the boat.

WEDDINGS

HUNT—WALSH

A very quiet and pretty wedding was solemnized on Monday evening at 8 o'clock at St. Mary's Church, Marysville, when Margaret Helena, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Walsh, Loudon, became the bride of Cyril John, son of Mr. John Hunt, of Marysville. Rev. Father O'Gorman officiated.

The bride looked charming in a frock of peach georgette and lace with hat and shoes to match. She carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses. The bride was attended by Miss Rose Hunt, sister of the groom, who wore blue Canton crepe with matching hat and shoes. Her bouquet was of carnations and maiden hair ferns. The bride's brother, Mr. Francis Walsh acted as groomsman.

After the ceremony wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple have left on an extended trip to Niagara Falls and Rochester. On their return they will reside at Read.

RUTTER—BARRIE

Picton, November, 26—A pretty November wedding was solemnized in the Bridge Church here Wednesday when Grace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rabble of Solmonville, was united in marriage to Charles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hunter of Bethesda. Rev. A. G. Moore, assisted by Rev. H. I. Adams of Belleville, officiated.

To the strains of Lohengrin's Bridal Chorus played by Miss Mary Rabble, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father. She made a pretty picture in a long gown of white silk crepe with flared skirt and white satin bows and trimmings. Her veil was held in place with orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaid, Miss Alice Strickland, was gowned in a shell pink crepe frock, daintily frilled and carried mums and fern. Mr. Lewis Rabble, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The ushers were J. A. Strickland and Percy Bevan. Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Rutter left by motor for points west. For travelling the bride chose a dress of brown crepe back satin with beige and orange trimmings, brown coat with fur trimmings. Hat, shoes and accessories were in matching shades. On their return they will reside at Bethesda, Prince Edward County.

LOUGH—WOODS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the manse on November, 21, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Woods 4th of Elzevir, when their eldest daughter Ruby Armintha Woods became the bride of Mr. Wilbur Roy Lough only son of Mr. Frank Lough of Chatterton. Rev. Mr. Semmin officiated.

The bride entered the room on the arm of her father to the grains of the bridal chorus played by Miss Magdaline Lloyd. The bride looked charming in a gown of pale pink georgette trimmed with lace, matching the bridal veil and carrying white carnations and maiden hair ferns.

The bridesmaid Miss Lucella Holmes was prettily attired in pale blue georgette and carried a bouquet of white carnations. The groom was assisted by his cousin, Mr. Clayton Paul.

During the signing of the register, Miss Magdaline Lloyd sang very sweetly "I Love You Truly". After congratulations the guests sat down to a sumptuous dinner, after which the happy couple left amid showers of confetti for a wedding trip to Toronto and Brantford. The bride travelled in a navy blue dress and coat with accessories to match.

The groom's gift to the bride was a pearl necklace to the bridesmaid and plastic compacts and to the groomsman a pen and knife.

On their return they will reside at Chatterton.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Beautifying is a good investment. It pays grand dividends. A classy pair of shoes puts electricity in the heels, sets one to stepping pretty. A new purse makes a woman feel rich though there may not be a dollar in it. The new chapeau set at the chic angle blots out memories of birthdays. Every one knows what a light sweep of the rouge pad will do to uplift the spirits. The beauty parade goes on, and all women must march. They are a part of the world's spectacle. If it is put down thus and so in the book of fate. So carry on!

The average girl is taller than her mother. The modern girl may keep late hours, live in a delirium of activity, but she knows more about hygiene and food values than her mother did at her age. She gets more exercise, more outdoor life. She is better developed. What's she slips is in the matter of posture; she does not carry herself as she should for the good of her back bone and her inner organs. But she'll learn.

Ribbed finger nails are the result of some diet error. They should be massaged with a little olive oil or anointed with cold cream. Brittle nails call for the same treatment. Great care must be taken that soap is bland and pure. When using scrubbing powders that are hard on the hands, wear rubber gloves, as they are devastating to the smooth shell like surface of finger sheaths.

If a woman makes it a practice to dye her hair, she will find it a convenience to cover her forehead and neck with a thick coating of vaseline, through which the dye will not penetrate to dissolve her skin. Also, if the dye she is using is satisfactory, she should not switch to another preparation, since nobody knows what will result when chemicals combine.

A good chest and neck exercise is to draw in a deep breath and to send the head back slowly. Bring the head forward as the air is expelled from the lungs.

Artists' Portraits at Toronto Art Gallery a Feature

Toronto (By The Canadian Press) —With contemporary writers entirely given to biographies, and everyone thirsty for the literary revelations of all-important men and women of yesterday, the opening of the November exhibition of Cosmopolitan Artists' Portraits at the Toronto Art Gallery is a most fitting feature. Yet to those writers to whom the idea of portraiture is linker with that of likeness to the sitter, this group of self-portraits by famous contemporary artists is somewhat beyond redemption. In fact the "serious-minded art lovers" who is coming to this show with his current opinion well "rehearsed" is going to find it well nigh impossible to reconcile all that he has heard on the standards of portraiture with the contents of this exhibition.

The worst of it is that when leaving the portrait-room to seek a refuge in the gallery where hang the Audubon water colors, this unfortunate visitor will feel that he has fallen from Charlie to Beryl. There the comparison with last autumn's exhibition of Canadian water colors will seem odious, and the faithful devotee of the sedulous careful, minute drawing and conscientious use of color will throw up his hands in despair. Painters such as George Biddle, Guy Pene Du Bois, Rockwell Kent, Glenn Coleman, Andrew Dasburg to mention only a few of all the collection—all names to be conjured with—will seem astringently when considered by the standard of the Canadian water colors jumbled last month at the Grange. The looseness of their color, their flagrantly compositional arrangement that speak the language of great talent and authority are interpreted by the constituents pupils of our local masters of prettiness as the signs of incompetence and carelessness. In the meanwhile these very men, the Coleman, the Dasburgs and their confreres in our leaping lizzes from international juries who pass on the work of the most noted artists of Europe and America.

As for the names represented in the collection of self-portraits, they are of major importance in the movement of contemporary art. This exhibition was arranged by the Carnegie Art Association and is to tour the museums in the United States, after having been shown in Toronto. With all its unpleasant lapses to look at, this group offers a remarkable panorama of the various modes prevalent in the art of to-day, in the United States and in Europe.

No lesser man than Diego Rivera, the Mexican, James Kroer, the Belgian, Oskar Kokoschka, the German, Picasso, the Franco-Spaniard, Epstein, the Anglo-American, Walter Pach the denouncing satirist of the Paris Salon, Alexander Archipenko, the American, are among the men who have portraits are known here.

In fact, color and mere a brother Canadian, who after having become famous in the United States, now feels very much at home at the Toronto Gallery visiting with his country people whose esteem has grown with his fame. Here is Boardman Robinson, the mural painter born in Somerset, Nova Scotia. As we go about the room being unable to talk with every one let us at least introduce you to Mr. Kreugnis of Paris, France, who seems to have gone to school with our own Valley of Vancouver, formerly of Toronto, unless Mr. Varley went to school with him. The colors with which Mr. Kreugnis paints us own head are very much like those used by the British Columbia painter in his recent portraits.

The two yellow-faced men in the one room are a double self-version of Vincent Canade, the Italian American who paints landscapes with the same strong sense of delineation and the same intensity that he paints his own traits. The gentleman in high hat who is so incongruous behind and to the late Monsieur Cottet. You may remember his sensational drawings of people in mourning, his Britany series in the Luxembourg museum in Paris. He has described himself in the same gloomy atmosphere which pervades his descriptions of windows and orphans.

"A convict, or a sailor?" someone asked before the self-portrait of Max Beckman, the German. Kerr Beckman has answered this question in another self-portrait, which time a lithograph which is shown with other prints in another room and he has replied that his answer as a background, or shall we say a back? to his own head: "Circus Beckman." This artist is a philosopher, at times a cynic, and he looks at himself as he looks at life, with a fair sense of humor, also with an underlying sadness and bitterness of thought.

"Who is the man under the broad rimmed hat?—Yun Gee, the 52 year-old Canadian painter who has the wisdom of the wise prophets of China in his heart and in his mind. Back in 1924, this young Chinese, then a mere boy left San Francisco for Paris as a steerage passenger on one of the cargo boats that go to Europe via the ananna canal. His luggage consisted of a trunk-full of pictures. Friends of the year of which his Canadian friends had written messages of love and wishes for his success. From this trip he has returned a wise man. Glory has alighted on his path and the French Government lately recently purchased his "Confucius", a remarkable canvas embodying the philosophy of. China together with the sophistication of the western world.

"Who are all those men and women with exotic names and oriental looks?" Here you are with six admirable leaders of art, and their influence is strong on the other artists.

Quite regularly you claim that Canadians have very little in common with all these artists and their methods, but even more convinced of this the visitors to the Toronto Art Gallery, this month only needs to step into the room where the small pictures by members f the Ontario Society of Artists are being shown. How nice these little pictures are, how candid, well done, restful, intimate, and simple. No cosmopolitanism here, no sophistication in these O. S. A. Christmas pictures. The exceedingly well done still-life by Charles Comfort, which is the most extreme example of painting in the show, indeed looks most gentle and suave after a visit to the other rooms. "The Red Chair" by Arthur Lismer might be traced to the master Van Gogh from the standpoint of the subject matter, but how content, thoroughly complacent it is in color, design and atmosphere!

"Duck Feeding", by Mary Wrinch, "Changing Pastures", by Herbert Palmer; "Oak Trees, Autumn", by Fred Haines; houses and more houses by A. J. Casson; lakes and more lakes with stiff islands by Frank Carmichael, epitomize the Canadian point of view and its scope of inspiration in this "Small Picture" show, as it does in most of our art exhibitions. This month is certainly a time for being brought on this gentleness and candor because, for us, our Canadian work finds itself in truly cosmopolitan company.

THE WILL AND THE WAY BACK IN 1871

Halifax, N. S.—A perfect merry-go-round of teas, bridges and dances is often the modern woman's interpretation of being "busy". In 1871 dates on the social calendar of the semi-town women were few and far between. From the November files of the Halifax Chronicle of that year is the following item from Yarmouth, Nova Scotia.

"There lives on Cape Sable Island Shelburne County, a woman aged seventy-six years, who has woven ninety-five yards of cloth and spun one hundred and twenty skeins of yarn since May last. She has also rake twenty tons of hay, raised four calves, seventeen turkeys, and one hog, done her own ordinary work, she walks to Clark's Harbour and back, a distance of eighteen miles."

most delicious OATS... finest CHINAWARE

In Quick Quaker packages . . . larger pieces of genuine English ware with pretty colours and new irregular borders

IN Quick Quaker packages you get the finest, most delicious oats, for no other oat grains are selected so carefully or milled so expertly.

And in the packages marked "chinaware", the finest china too. Genuine English ware of old ivory tint, with pretty patterns and the new irregular borders which every woman likes. Fine, handsome pieces . . . cups and saucers (both in one package), cream pitchers, cereal bowls, plates.

No other oats contain such a liberal assortment or such good value. Just compare with the china in any other oats.

How you will please the family with Quick Quaker. Hot steaming bowls with a delicious aroma that tempts appetites. Nutlike flavour of big plump grains roasted in an open oven till they burst with goodness, then rolled into tender flakes.

Be sure all your packages bear the name and picture of the Quaker. In large household packages, either with or without chinaware . . . never in bulk.

INJUNCTION TO BE ISSUED

Haileybury Council May Be Thwarted in Awarding Contract

Haileybury, Ont. Nov. 26—Hints that an injunction may be taken out locally to prevent the town council here from awarding the contract for the new water work scheme to an outside firm are in circulation here today. According to H. Davis, ex-member of a committee of three appointed by a number and the ratepayers who are objecting to the council's methods of handling this relief work, legal advice has been secured in the matter and action on the subject has been deferred until tomorrow at the request of the lawyer whose advice has been sought. It is complained that if the contract is carried through as awarded by council to McNamara Bros. of Sault Ste. Marie, only about $2,500 will be spent in wages, and that by day labor methods the amount distributed in wages to workmen would be substantially increased. It is urged by the men that the relief of unemployment here is the chief object in view, and that the government's grant of $10,000 toward the cost of the scheme had that end in view.

RENEW APPLICATIONS

SUGAR BUSH LICENCES

Applications for sugar bush licences to operate for 1932 under the Maple Sugar Industry Act are now being received by the Dominion Fruit Commissioners at Ottawa. The Act requires sugar bush owners who sell their products outside the Province of origin to have a licence issued by the Department of Customs and Excise. The charge for this licence, but application must state name and address of owner, location of sugar bush or orchard by lot numbers, concession, township and county, and must also show number of trees in orchard and number of trees it is proposed to tap. During 1931 a total of 1,000 licences to sugar bush owners were issued as well as 24 licences to manufacturers.

CREOSOTING AND WHAT IT MEANS TO LOG

Reporter Sees Plant at Trenton in Operation —Its Output

When you board a train for Toronto or Montreal or wherever you may be going by rail, and sink down into a parlor chair and the train slips away without a jerk or jar, ever stop to think of the work and care that is expended to make your riding more comfortable. A good road bed ballast and last but not least Ties, railroad ties. A railroad tie is to be cut and squared on the bush and shipped either by rail or the latter by water for a few years at most as great as Canada's timber supply is it cannot stand the demand that is placed upon it by the various industries. So Creosoting came into its own and a large plant was erected in Trenton in 1913 and ties were shipped into the yard and piled leaving a space between each tie to allow it to season properly. The usual time is about one year then they are loaded on trams on a narrow gauge railroad where a large gasoline motor hauls them to the adding mill where they are lowered by automatic lifts to make the driving of the spikes easier, they go on from there to the inevitable which puts thousands of small holes into the ties along the deep tissue to insure better treating. They are then loaded on the trams The adding mill is able to run about 4000 ties in 24 hours through the boring and incising machine. Then 18 trams of 8 ft. ties are run into the creating cylinder. This cylinder is 132 feet long and 9 feet in diameter. After the ties are run into the cylinder the great door is closed and the hugs bolts are drawn tight.

The real treating of the tie then begins, steam is turned on until the temperature of 200 degrees is reached. At the same time air is being run into the cylinder from an outside storage tank until 30 pounds pressure is reached. The air is then run into huge oil tanks set just up above the cylinder and the oil pours in. The oil enters the cylinder at a temperature of 200 degrees. A pressure pump is then started and the oil is started being forced into the ties. This pressure gradually increased over a period of 1 hour until 175 pounds is reached this is held for about three quarters of an hour, all the while oil being forced into the ties. A tie on being treated receives 140 gallons of oil. The pressure is then released and the oil left in the cylinder is pumped back into the storage tanks or mixing tanks as they are sometimes called. The treating combination being mixed in them, a mixture of 60 per cent tar and 40 per cent creosote being used. After the oil is all pumped back a large vacuum pump is started and a vacuum is created in the cylinder, about a 26 inch vacuum-tis the usual vacuum secured during the hour it is on. This vacuum opens the pores so to speak of the ties and lets the surplus oil in the ties run out. The oil thus secured is pumped back out of the cylinder and the ties are creosoted the great door is again opened the ties are run out and another charge is put in. Mr. D. E. Terry the present superintendent of the plant, while treating engineer at the plant set a world's record for the most ties treated in a 30 day period at one cylinder plant, this has never been equalled, treating 186,000 ties in 30 days is some job. Two chars are another cylinder was installed doubling the capacity of the plant. The Telephone Co., and the Hydro are following in the railroads footsteps and are having their poles treated. A good deal of lumber is also being treated. Treating triples the life of any wood, no insect can get through the creosoted timber the creosote killing it. It also withstands the elements much better than the untreated timber.

Mrs. F. Mitchell of Wooler will reside in Trenton during the winter, staying with her daughter Mrs. Harold Wrenn of King Street.

DOES BARD FRIGHTEN THEATRE - GOERS?

LONDON, Nov. 26 (CP)—"Hushing Up Shakespeare" is the title of an editorial in The Times paper on the attitude of theatre-goers in general with reference to Shakespeare which follows:

"A story told at the conference of the British Drama League at Hull the other day and reported briefly recently shows the whirligig of time bringing in his revenges. For revenge indeed it is upon the old indiscriminate admiration for Shakespeare that his name should have been suppressed last it should scale away a shrewd and intelligent public.

"The story comes from New Zealand. In that country, as in some others that need not be mentioned, it sometimes happens that those in control of theatrical productions underestimate the taste and the brains of their public. Miss Elizabeth Blake was advised that the New Zealand public would not like Shakespeare. Miss Blake appears to have known both Shakespeare and the New Zealand public better than her advisers; but she also knew, no doubt, that the name of Shakespeare had become associated, through examinations at school and other causes, with the high-brow and the inhuman. So she kept Shakespeare's name off the bills. And her public, left to their own judgment, likes Shakespeare very much.

"A different but a similarly successful course was followed when the Memorial Theatre at Stratford-upon-Avon first set Shakespeare to the middle and western portions of another continent. There was no hushing-up the guilty secret of the authorship of the plays; but, with lecture and talk and newspaper article, forerunners prepared the ground by explaining that Shakespeare was not all high-brow, or high-hat, but real theatre-guy, who, though no longer actually at work, had written some fine, stirring dramas and some very amusing comedies, most of which had been produced with great success. And in the end even Hollywood accepted Shakespeare, and on the whole very handsomely. When 'The Taming of the Shrew' was being filmed, a great leader admitted: 'It is Shakespeare —but we're making it comedy.' The old play has been more warmly praised; but it was a great thing for Shakespeare in Hollywood as a possibilities in him.

"It is possible to be too hard upon the devotees who had turned Shakespeare into a monument of perfection. What they chiefly meant to do was certainly not to scare away the general reader and the general playgoer. It was, indeed, the opposite: it was to show that Shakespeare was 'universal' enough to appeal to every one, and to get on appealing it them for all time. And that is what Shakespeare continues to do, when he is given a fair chance in the theatre, as the story from New Zealand proves once more.

"A lingering effect of the bardolatry, increased, perhaps, by a sense of the Shakespeare lessons in schools is that people do not like to be bored with the cander of King George III and to say (if they think so) that some of Shakespeare is 'sad stuff.' And that is a fright which every play and verse, and of which it should never be deprived. How to maintain it for the future is indeed a not an easy problem. It invites, beyond all else, a great deal of regular acting of Shakespeare, under the conditions which will make him most effective to the contemporary playgoer; but what those conditions are each one and each town can best see to, perhaps, must settle for itself.

"To know Shakespeare in the theatre is the best of all cures for think ing that his plays are highbrow and the enjoyment of him an affectation. In his own time it is probably too late to follow the example from New Zealand and keep his name off the bills; and, indeed, that would rouse the wrath of all the critics, professional and amateur, of the kind who does not know what to say about a play but can tell you exactly who the author is. But anything that could give Shakespeare his fair chance as a dramatist among other dramatists would be the public a good turn. And the entertainment of the public, not the fame of Shakespeare, is the really important thing."

BUTTER EXPORTS GROW

The current issue of the Dairy Market Review issued by the Federal Department of Agriculture shows butter exports for 1931 to date at 159,000 packages as compared with 41,900 packages for the corresponding date last year. These exports this year to date totalling 813,688 boxes are 66,206 boxes ahead of last year when cheese figured for grading at 1,113,912 boxes to date for 1931 is 100,000 boxes behind last year.

Mother of Five Looks for Early Release

When one is only 37 the strain of raising five children on limited financial resources is a heavy one, but when one has reached the age of 50 and is still caring for all of the children of Mrs. W. some of them for many years at factory work, the burden seems to be greater and greater as the point where tuberculosis stepped in and claimed her.

Fortunately for Mrs. Wood, she was sent to the Muskoka Hospital for Consumptives and there with the expert medical doctors and nurses to look after her, she is getting well. Since then, like a rain-drenched flower, she has responded to the carefully planned treatment and has shown a wonderful progress, looking forward to the time when she will be able to join her little ones.

There are many such cases, but without the generous assistance the Muskoka Hospital cannot aid them. A gift from you will be gratefully received if sent to Mr. A. E. Ames & Co., Toronto.

It is said that originally Japan was occupied by a curious people known as the Ainu, who are not of the Mongol Race.

DECLARE WAR SAY STUDENTS

Bitter Struggle Results in 64 Deaths as Chinese Retreat

Paris, Nov. 26 (AP) — Representatives of small nations in the League of Nations Council were reliably reported Wednesday to have assumed the role of champions of China in the Manchurian deliberations.

Spokesmen for certain smaller countries were said to have accused the big powers of letting the League Covenant go to pieces by their unwillingness to exercise its coercive measures it provides.

84 Killed

Mukden, Manchuria, Nov. 26. — (AP) — Sixty Chinese and four Japanese were killed and nine Japanese wounded in a sharp battle between Japanese and Chinese when two Japanese companies routed 250 Chinese, according to an official report received here today.

The Japanese force was a railway guard from Chiuliuhsu, composed of a company of infantry and one of engineers. They were fired upon, the report said, from the Chinese position on a neighboring hill.

The fighting ended at 7 p.m. when the remainder of the Chinese force fled, leaving many rifles and a trench mortar behind them.

Student Demand War

Shanghai, Nov. 25 (AP)—Demanding a declaration of war against Japan, more than 8,000 Chinese students rioted here today, held up all railway traffic and wrecked the station master's office until they were given five trains in which to go to the capital at Nanking.

At intervening stations they were joined by 3,000 more students.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 25 (AP) — The United States Government is prepared to support a neutral commission of inquiry in Manchuria without the consideration of the question of withdrawal of Japanese troops from areas outside the railway zone.

SWORN IN

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP) — Sir William Mulock, Chief Justice of Ontario, was sworn in today as administrator of the province during the years of absence of Hon. W. D. Ross, "Lieutenant-Governor. The ceremony, of a few minutes' duration, took place in the cabinet council room, parliament buildings, in the presence of the premier G. S. Henry and members of the Ontario cabinet.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY G. BRITAIN STRONG

(By Edward Stanley, Associated Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Nov. 26 (AP)—Great Britain's textile industry is showing a strong spurt, chiefly due to the slump in the pound and the Chinese boycott against Japanese goods. Germany is the only other in any way keeping pace with Lancashire's busy looms.

France, Czechoslovakia and Switzerland all are in trouble. All the branches of the French industry have been hit by the renewed activity in England, replaced in Lille, Alsace and Lyons to the ministry of commerce reports. Plants have closed down, others gone on a part-time basis.

Wholesale prices of textiles have fallen. A recent survey of nineteen articles showed the index fell in 1931, the index figure for October was 377, whereas it was 423 for August.

Swiss silks and cotton industries are working on a part-time basis, with a number of mills closed down. Unemployment is 20 per cent to 30 per cent. In recent weeks. The Swiss manufacturers feel they are isolated by high wages.

In Czechoslovakia, especially in Theresienstadt, Reichenberg and Moravia industries, the worst slump within memory is running its course. Cotton, Jute and linen manufacturers are all affected. The woollens and silk are perhaps slightly less desperate.

There still is idle capacity in the British industry, and the buying has been selective, particularly of goods and yarns intended for China. There has been, curiously, a demand for a yarn which hasn't been made since 1890.

Yarns are selling double and treble the maximum daily production because of bookings far ahead, and the increased activity has been reflected not only in the spinning industry but in all of the allied industries such as packing, dyeing, transportation and so on.

Now much China has figured in Lancashire's boom can be told from the October figures although it is still early for reliable statistics. In October, 1931, Britain exported 3,-686,200 square yards to China, as against 812,500 last year.

The total exports to all countries exceeded September by 34,600,000 square yards, but with 143,060,100 were 7,000,000 under last October.

All this has an effect upon cotton. In the fifteen weeks up to November 1, there were 306,366 bales of United States cotton moved to spinners, against 267,000 last year.

Canada holds fourth position among the countries of the world in the production of motor cars and second position in exports.

Colombia will regulate food prices.

LOAN WILL BE SUCCESSFUL

Stability of Guarantee is Its Best Feature

Mr. E. V. Ilsley, president of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce has received the following telegram from the president, Mr. W. L. Mc-Gregor and the chairman, Mr. A. C. NEW TRIAL ORDERED

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP) — The appeal of David Rosenthal, Port Arthur, against conviction and sentence of three years for conspiracy, was allowed today and a new trial ordered. Rosenthal was convicted before Mr. Justice Kelly of conspiring to defraud the creditors of the late W. Mathews Co., grain and stock brokers of Port William.

Jobless Lion-Tamer in Town How He Gets Lion's Goat

Receives Animal on Four Points of ... Chair

SCARS BY "CATS"

A newspaper man was hurrying home Wednesday night about nine o'clock, when he was stopped by a man small in stature, who enquired: "Where is the shelter, Boss, the place where a guy can stay the night—the 'big works' at the police station says they ain't putting up travellers no more and told me to get round to the new place on the main drag"?

"You are not far from the place," replied the scribe, "you see the Germania machine has arranged across the front of the building up the street—that is the building and you will find comfortable quarters in the basement and also a large bowl of good, hot soup."

"That's fine," the ... er said, "thanks a lot, Boss," and he started to move on, but stopped when asked, "have you been out of work long?" "Quite a while, Boss" he replied, "you see, I'm a lion tamer and things is kind of slow in the circus line now." "A lion tamer," exclaimed the reporter. "That's just what I am, Boss, and I'm some guy at the game. I've been at the business for some years, and I can train anything with a hairy hide—lions is my specialty."

"What circus were you with?" was asked and he replied "The Hagenbeck and Wallace Shows, Boss, why I can show you scars the big cats have put on me. See that scar on my face; a kitten tiger gave me that and I got another big scar on my leg from a real he lion."

Sure enough he had a scar on his face and his word was accepted as to the existence of the other big scar. "You are a very small man to tackle a lion," said the reporter, "how much do you weigh, and how old are you?"

"Being small don't cut no ice, Boss—it's the quickness of the eye and the quick foot shirt that counts. I'm twenty-nine years old, Boss, and I weigh one hundred and eight pounds—my height is five feet three inches, but if I am small I'm some lion tamer."

It was a nasty night but this little fellow was interesting and instead of letting him go, more questions were put to him. To the re-mark:

"I suppose you get nervous sometimes when in the cage?" the little man replied: "Who, me—not on your life—there ain't no lion I'm afraid of. Let's see your umbrella, Boss, and I'll show you. You see I use a—chair, light chair, and I don't tire much—I hold it in front of me with the four legs pointing towards the big beast, and then I crack the whip. The points of the four legs of the chair puzzle Mr. Lion—he can't see them all at one time and I keep him cowed in this way. Now if I used a thing with just one point like this here umbrella—the cat could see that all the time and he would not fear it—but the four points gets his goat. That's how it's done, Boss, and, of course, one or two other little points which I can't give you or you might do me out of a job some time—but take it from me, Boss—I'm some guy with the big cats and I'll get a job in the cage next spring or I'll miss my guess. I'm going home to Montreal now—have not been there in a long time, but, Boss, if you have any wild things to tame some time and for me—gives I'll get that soup you told me about now—so long."

Thursday morning the newspaper man stopped in at the transients' rest and took a look at the regular—and sure enough there was the name of his chance acquaintance of the night before and after his name was written, "Lion Tamer." So perhaps he was not "stringing" the innocent newspaper man, after all and yet again—perhaps he was.

R. B. BENNETT IS HONORED

Brilliant Company in Attendance at Dinner

LONDON, Nov. 26. — A brilliant company of two hundred guests attended a dinner in Canada House last night, arranged by Hon. Howard Ferguson, Canadian High Commissioner in Great Britain, for Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, of Canada, who is now in London. Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, several members of the cabinet, and Lord Chief Justice, Rudyard Kipling and two Canadian-born peers, Lord Beaverbrook and Lord Greenway, were among the guests.

The first loaf of bread baked here from wheat exported to Great Britain from Churchill over the Hudson Bay route was served. After announcing this fact, the Canadian High Commissioner in quaint style he hoped if Great Britain inaugurated a wheat quota, it would be small.

Speeches Informal

The speeches were of an informal character. The Canadian Prime Minister, alluding to the recent change in government here, said such circumstances made it exceedingly difficult for him to make a statement of any special interest, but at another time and place he might contribute something "to the cause of the nations."

Dwelling on past memories was of little avail, proceeded Mr. Bennett. The political aspect of the empire had passed and "we shall have to substitute for it another aspect if we are to remain an empire of free associations of peoples in equal status. I do not prophesy about me on this visit, the same manifestations this spirit I see in my own country. By united efforts we may be able to accomplish much.

"I do believe", proceeded the Canadian Prime Minister, "the problems which have asserted themselves during the last few months, affecting the country and my own, can be brought to a solution by the combination of your own matured intellect and our pioneer spirit."

Speech Is Highest Terms

Prime Minister MacDonald, in proposing the health of the Canadian High Commissioner, spoke in terms of the highest praise of the leisure of office of Mr. Ferguson. "I hope most sincerely," said Mr. MacDonald, "that through the conference to be held in Ottawa next June or July, the high ideals of which Mr. Bennett spoke last night will be fulfilled and that from those results the dominions and ourselves will be knit together in one splendid unity."

If the Imperial Conference is a success, much will be due to the Canadian High Commissioner, proceeded Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, "for whom all of ourselves" during his stay in London, added the British Prime Minister.

Since his arrival in London, replied Mr. Ferguson, he had been delighted to find the people here had shed much of that "insular encasement" with which they formerly surrounded themselves.

MUST STOP ALL EXPENDITURE

Drastic Curtailment is Necessary at Scarboro

TORONTO, Nov. 26.— Drastic measures must be taken without delay by the municipality of Scarboro to adjust its financial affairs, according to pointed advice tendered to the Township Council by H. L. Cumming, Municipal Law Officer at Queen's Park, who was consulted after the township's request was granted earlier in the week taken a hand in matters.

If rents came to a head last Saturday, when it was intended to proceed with the construction of a new watermain to connect with East York, which derives its water supply from Scarboro'. The two municipalities had reached an agreement to go ahead with the project, which it is estimated would cost in the neighborhood of $30,000. Intending to carry out the undertaking in a relief measure, workmen had been notified to report for work on Saturday morning, but when they turned up their hopes were cut short by the announcement that the job had been "called off", temporarily at least. Although no explanation was made at the time, it was later stated that action on the part of the municipal bankers was responsible for the sudden change in plans.

Elgin, Scotland, will build many houses for workers' families.

The Gift MOTHER WANTS A NEW Beatty $69

IF MOTHER COULD CHOOSE

If mother could choose a gift for herself she'd pick a Beatty. They are so much easier to operate—are longer lasting and are priced right.

★ She'd Like The New Beatty Washer

No washer can equal the new Beatty at this price. It washes much faster—washes cleaner—and is much easier on the clothes.

Santa, why not put a Beatty under the Xmas tree for Mother? You'd make an immediate saving of many dollars on the purchase price of a Beatty by getting one now. It's the lowest-priced standard washer on the market.

And remember, Santa, there is no better way to reduce mother's household expenses. You'd save her the heavy expense of outside help and give her the best washer on the continent. For proven, careful performance buy mother a Beatty — comes direct from factory to you, and is backed by money-saving factory service.

XMAS CLUB TERMS ARRANGED

★ SANTA, HERE'S ANOTHER SUGGESTION

Santa, supposing mother has an electric washer, it would be mighty nice of you to give her a Beatty automatic ironer. It would complete her washday equipment. The Beatty is simple to operate—is efficient and economical. All mother would have to do would be to sit down and guide the clothes through. She would be saved that tiresome lifting and pushing of a heavy hand iron, and the ironing would be done in half the time.

★ OTHER BEATTY GIFT APPLIANCES

If mother has floors to keep waxed and polished, and rugs to keep looking fresh as new—she'll find the Beatty Floor Polisher and Waxer—and the Beatty Cleaner amazingly efficient and economical.

And let us remind you, Santa—that on any of these Beatty appliances you may pay what you like down and you don't need to pay another cent this year.

KOGUT GIVEN TOUGH TASK

Meets Arthur Dick in Main Bout of Wrestling Card

Such famous wrestlers as Jim London, world's heavyweight champion, McMillan, the former heavyball star and George Zaharias, the villain of the mat game, have stated that Jack Kogut, Canadian light heavyweight champion, would be a serious contender for the title now held by London if he were ten to fifteen pounds heavier. He has plenty of speed and possesses an amazingly thorough knowledge of the game, so much so that London and other first mat men who have worked out with him have expressed surprise at his ability.

Kogut, who meets a severe test when he clashes with Arthur Dick of Evansville, Ind., in the main bout of the show at the Arena next Monday, is a keen student of the wrestling game. He is quick to adopt new holds and his satisfied with that, tries to improve on them. Some years ago he invented the flying leg scissors which is now used by some of the leading grapplers.

On six different occasions Kogut competed for the world's light heavy weight championship. He drew in three of these bouts and lost the others and firmly believes, that the fact that he was unable to weigh self making the weight was all that prevented the champion from beating last him. So he is in the peculiar position of being just a little too heavy to be at his best at the light heavyweight limit, and too light to develop into a first class for the heavyweight crown.

Speaking of adopting new holds Kogut last year decided to try his luck with the flying tackle made famous by such men as McMillan, Sonnenberg, and the late Gurbiadi who, like Kogut, adopted it after he had become proficient in other wrestling tactics. Kogut has been so successful in the use of the tackle that the pants writers call him "Little Sonnenberg". It was this tackle that caught Dick off guard and gave Kogut an unexpected victory in their bout on the London-Romano card at Toronto but Dick, a former football player who also uses the tackle effectively, declares that he will not be caught napping a second time.

Announcement of the semi-final and preliminary are expected tomorrow.

THOMAS CRACKNELL ESCAPES HANGING

OTTAWA, Nov. 26. —Commutation of the death sentence passed on Thomas Cracknell, Chatham, Ont., has been granted, Cracknell will spend his life in prison at Dartmouth Penitentiary.

Cracknell was sentenced by the courts to die at Chatham, on Friday next, for the murder of his wife. Application for commutation was considered by Cabinet Council; and decision was made to commute the death sentence to life imprisonment. The murder arose out of a dispute between Cracknell and his wife.

Charcoal is now being manufactured from waste wood in Fraser Valley, B.C.

CANADIAN DEPARTMENT STORES LIMITED

HEDGE FEUD

by Paul Hawk

A tall hedge separated the spacious grounds surrounding Hilton's two pretious homes. And there at that hedge, Gregory Lansing, just arrived from four years of schooling in the east, found his father, Mr. Lansing's lean frame was quivering with rage. He seemed about to leap over the hedge. On the other side and no less angry, old Daniel Baldwin, squat and bald-headed, stood glaring upward at his tall antagonist.

"The subject of this surprising and apoplectic debate Gregory could not find out. It seemed to consist mainly in vieing with each other in the application of such terms as "unsanitiy little shrimp" and "skinny old reprobate."

"What was all the fireworks about, mother?" Gregory asked after he finally got thru separated.

"I don't know, Greg. They've been going on like that for ages. And Mrs. Baldwin doesn't speak to me any more either. "I've never seen your father act so."

"That beats me," Gregory mused. "You four used to be together all the time before I left — and always making me entertain that darned little Valerie."

One week later, Valerie arrived home from the finishing school she had been attending. She found the two old men at the hedge shouting and fuming at each other. She caught hold of her father's coat tail and dragged him away.

"A nice reception for the returning offspring!" she scolded him. "What's the matter anyway?"

"That — that —" Mr. Baldwin sputtered inarticulately; then he whirled and shook his finger in Valerie's face and looked up at her fiercely. "And I don't want any of my family having anything to do with his. Understand it? I'll catch you with that young upstart of his's here!"

Valerie tossed her head. "Humph!" she said.

Mr. Lansing strode purposely into the house, still raging.

"That Valerie Baldwin's back," he said to Gregory. "An' let me tell you something. I don't want you even talking to her, I'll — I'll disinherit you!"

"Humph!" said Gregory.

The next time the battle at the hedge was resumed, both Valerie and Gregory went to act as pacifiers. Both started to speak; then they stopped and stared.

The Valerie that Gregory knew had been a chubby, freckled kid with stringy hair. This Valerie was tall. She wore clothes that must have been smuggled from Paris. She had a delicate, transparent skin. She had golden-brown hair. She had blue eyes. This Valerie was enough to make one stare! He forgot completely his ancient custom of calling her a "darned nuisance".

The younger Lansing Valerie knew had been a rough, untempt kid who was always interested in dogs and machines. This Gregory, tall, well-groomed man with sleek black hair and sharp brown eyes was a new one. He was decidedly attractive.

So they got rid of their respective fathers and sauntered and meandered until they met at the hedge once more. They met, of course, to talk about the feud.

"What in the world has happened to them, Greg? They're positively savage!"

"Yeah, we've got to do something. It's not right that neighbors be so unneighborly."

After a while, Greg said, "I say, Valerie, we better meet and settle this matter after we investigate a little."

Valerie thought they should. They did. They met, dined, danced, and discussed — all in one night.

But the investigation proved to be slow. Neither could get much information as to the cause of the enmity between their parents. Other meetings were required for the matter was assuming serious proportions in their minds. What must the people of Hilton think of such actions of two such prominent citizens?

Nor did talking with the two fathers help.

"I say, dad. Hadn't you better not pedal the lie a bit? You know, it's indecent that two old friends should be on the outs this way. Why not declare a truce?"

"Truce — never!" said Mr. Lansing firmly.

Valerie tried too. "But, daddy won't you just up with him for me?"

"Hol" roared Mr. Baldwin.

So six more meetings of consultation went by with no visible results. Then, when Gregory had slipped away from his father's factory to meet her for lunch one noon, he said, "Val, I'm gettin' tired of this sneakin' out to see you. But I can't get the gov'nor to give in."

She looked at him in a way that made his heart leap at the thought he had. "I can't get mine to agree to quit quarrelling either," she told him.

Gregory's heart did another somersault as he leaned forward. "I know a way," he said huskily.

"Tell me," she demanded breathlessly, her eyes on his.

"Let's elope!"

For an instant, all breathing was suspended. Gregory reached out and clasped her hand on the table as her eyes became starry.

"Oh, let's!" she said.

It was romantic carrying a ladder to her window, Grekory thought. It was the way things were done in stories. But it was practical, too, for it would be ticklish business if old Mr. Baldwin discovered them. But they got away unmolested. At midnight they crept out of the driveway in Gregory's car, which he had slipped out of the garage before he went for her.

At first fifteen minutes after midnight, Mr. Lansing and Mr. Baldwin were opening a bottle that gave every appearance of being aged. "I've had it waiting," Mr. Lansing chuckled, pouring out two slender stemmed glasses of it with a flourish.

"They fell for it hard, didn't they, Ben?"

"Did they! But they never would've married if their mothers kept thrust-ing them at each other like they used to do. I'm glad I thought of us gettin' mad, Dan."

"You mean you're glad we thought of it. Well, here's to our son and daughter."

"And how!" said Mr. Lansing.

APPLE STORAGE FACTS

For the past ten years the Federal Experimental Station at Summerland, B.C., has been making a special study of commercial storage practices in respect to apples and now issue, among others the following findings.

(a) The commercial life of apples is influenced by the soil and climate conditions under which they are grown, by the stage of maturity at which they are picked, by the treatment they receive in the packing house, and by the promptness with which they are cooled, as well as by the conditions under which they are stored.

(b) Even within one variety subject to similar treatment through out the growing, harvesting, packing and storage periods, keeping quality is materially influenced by size and grade.

(c) The commercial life of many varieties can be materially extended by storing at proper temperatures.

(d) More attention should be paid to harvesting apples at the proper stage of maturity to ensure full development of quality and maximum storage life.

(e) Greater care in the handling of apples at along the road from orchard to retailer is necessary in order that the fruit may be delivered to the consumer in an unbruised condition.

(f) Apples should be removed from cold storage as soon as they reach prime eating condition.

(g) The intelligent use of refrigeration materially extends the time in which apples can be sold to the consumer in prime condition.

We should give as we would receive, cheerfully, quickly and without hesitation; for there is no grace in a benefit that hangs in the fingers.—Seneca.

MILLION DOLLAR INCREASE IN CAR LICENCE

SHOULD BE NO PART OF NEW WATERWAYS

A. P. Patterson's Address is Most Interesting on Subject

NO SUPPORT

Project Should Be Opposed By The Maritimes

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 26 (By Charles Bruce, Canadian Press Staff Writer) — The Chignecto Canal, to connect Northumberland Strait with the Bay of Fundy, should be constructed on its own merits and the Maritime Province transportation facility — not as a feeder to the Saint Lawrence Waterway. That, in effect, was the substance of A. P. Patterson's address to the Maritime Board of Trade Wednesday afternoon, in which the veteran Halifax John commentator on the rights of the Atlantic provinces under the confederation pact, declared his belief that "apparently the accomplishment of the Chignecto Canal is justified as a project by itself, and should in no way be connected with or made party of the proposed St. Lawrence project, which I feel should be opposed by the Maritimes with every constitutional means at their disposal."

The present movement in connection with the canal in Mr Patterson's opinion, had been started "largely for the purpose of getting the people of the Maritimes to agree to a further tie up with the United States on the St. Lawrence, or, to put it the other way, to prevent the people of the Maritimes giving their support to the Montreal interests which are opposing this further tie up with the United States."

Ontario interests, he said, had never advocated anything for the economic betterment of the Maritimes as far as he knew, "Yet I understand the conservative Hon. Chignecto Canal as a feeder for the St. Lawrence waterways was resurrected in Ontario, and at least one Ontario gentleman visited the Maritimes advocating its construction prior to its being brought publicly for any Maritime people."

The St. Lawrence project, said Mr. Patterson, should be opposed by the Maritimes, "because, as it was foreseen by the statesmen who arranged the union, and as we know from experience, it is not humanly possible to effect the just economic assimilation of the Maritimes with the rest of Canada so long as our transportation facilities and freight routes are operated as they have been operated for some time. On account of the geographical layout and physical attacies of this dominion, it is apparent that the only way this assimilation can be effected is in a manner not with the interest of government machinery functioning as laid down by the colonial and British gentlemen, who arranged the Canadian Federation, and obviously the sooner their instructions in this respect are carried out, the better for Canada as a whole."

BEST SCHOOL-DAY SNACK IS A GLASS OF GOOD MILK

School-days will be happier and rightly so, because no other food is so refreshing, delightful and nourishing as milk. When boys and girls come from school at four o'clock they are hungry and tired the wise mother knows that a glass of milk is the most healthful and easily prepared food she can provide. The four o'clock glass of milk should be part of the school-day program.

YOUTHS SLIDE ON RINK ROOF

Snow Makes Going Rather Dangerous For Youngsters

While the first hockey game of the season was being batted out on the ice below, a number of youths with the agility that would put a Rocky Mountain goat to shame, were slipping and sliding on the roof of the West side of the building in order to view the game from the opened transoms of the building.

Snow which lay heavily on the roof made the going rather precarious for some of the boys and a few spectators who witnessed the actions expected momentarily to see one of them slip and slide off the sloping top. There would have been a considerable drop if one were luckless enough to fall that distance, but the boys, like all good supporters of the game should, took no consideration of risks involved when it has to do with their love of their pastime and moral support to the old home team in this initial game.

Rabbit Disease Breaks Out Must Use Care in Handling

Malady is Caused By Scratch on Hand of Human

BLOOD DISEASE

NORTH BAY, Ont., Nov. 26 — With the discovery of a case of Tularaemia, at Strucedale, Ontario a blood disease which is considered reasonably serious out account of having a mortality of ten per cent., Dr. W. E. George District Health Officer, has issued a warning to persons throughout the district to take the utmost care in the handling of dressing of rabbits which are known to be carriers of the germs.

Due to the fact that there are so many rabbits being killed at present, Dr. George wishes to warn persons that in dressing these animals, to be careful there are no injuries or scratches to the skin of the hands as the disease is extremely infectious and is usually spread by such means.

The disease usually forms a small sore on the hand where the infection takes place and extends then to the blood and becomes a blood disease. There is no specific treatment and it develops into the chronic stage in about three weeks. One attack seems to render immunity to subsequent attacks, Dr. George stated.

REMOVE AIDS TO NAVIGATION

Department Takes No Chances With Winter

OTTAWA, Nov. 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—Despite the mild news of the fall weather, management of marine officials realizing from years experience that winter may set in at any time with alarming suddenness, have announced that annual task of removing floating aids to navigation in the inland waterways and taking off the crews of lightvessels in isolated positions. Reports of the vagaries of the weather, which may retain summertime long past the season for ice and snow, marine officials have found that they can generally depend upon all navigation of the Great Lakes ending by December 15 at the latest.

Last year more than 2500 floating aids to navigation between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the sea canal to Montreal in a few days they commence work long before weather forecasts give any warning of the necessity. For a number of years the Department has followed the policy of starting this work two or three weeks in advance and government vessels have already been commissioned out to ports where they can best be spared. These are mainly in harbors in which the activity is seasonal and has now died. At other points they are taken up at the ratio of about every buoy in four along the lines of navigation, at the discretion of divisional officers. In this way the maximum safeguards against a sudden arrival of the ice and the consequent loss of buoys, lightships and possibly of life.

STOCK MARKET AGAIN WEAK

Inability of Cotton to Hold Gain and Pound Weakness, Factors

New York, Nov. 25.—Fresh weakness appeared in the leading financial markets during Selling of wheat and other grains inability of cotton to hold yesterday's gains, weakness of the pound sterling and the heavier tone of bar silver contributed to selling in the stock market. Discouraged security holders apparently abandoned hope of early settlement of the railway wage problem and other little of cheer in various trade reports. Activity at times was heavier than in preceding market sessions of this week.

Publication of additional railroad earning reports for October, disclosing shrinkage of more than 25 per cent in revenues as compared with last year, and the car loading total which was down a shade more on the week than seasonal, caused early selling in the rails and in the afternoon it spread to other sections of the list.

New lows were made by Aschison which was off around 4 points, by Union Pacific which gave way more than 3 and by Southern Pacific, New Haven, Pennsylvania, New York Central and Baltimore and Ohio among others which lost one to more than 2. U.S. Steel, Westinghouse Electric and International Telephone likewise went to new low ground, the Steel corporation responding to reports of slackened production with a loss of over 3 points.

Little change was evident in the money markets, with call money continuing at 2 1-2 per cent. Scarce what better demand was reported for bills.

ALLEGE RELIEF GIVEN WHERE NOT NEEDED

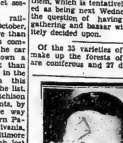
Unemployed Women Discuss Mimimum Wage Laws

MEETING TIME

Miss Edmondson Retires —Mrs. Garbutt Succeeds

At the second meeting of the ladies' auxiliary of the unemployed held in the City Hall last evening, several matters which were left over from the original meeting were brought forward and disposed of, in the short time, the meeting of about seventy-five who attended.

After the minutes had been read by Miss Edmondson, the secretary of the auxiliary, Mrs. Hutton, who occupied the chair, accepted the resignation of Miss Edmondson whose which had been appointed at the first meeting. Very great progress had been made in the organization of needy cases, and several of the families had been attended by these ladies. Donations are being received regularly and Mrs. Garbutt is vice-president, and a car will be available from now on for the purpose both of making collections and donations that which had been received by them already. Several matters then came up for immediate investigation in the committee who will be appointed, chief among them being the allegation made by one of the members that minimum wage laws are applied to women and girls of the city were being openly flaunted by several of the particular turers and other industries. The allegation given that relief was being given where relief was not needed also evoked much discussion from the members. This was laid over for the executive to handle, and to investigate the names of some of the people alleged to be receiving this donation, and will be answered at the next meeting.



Need of Organization

Mrs. Kent, vice-president of the association, then spoke a few words to the members on the organization, the need for them to organize and support the movement they had started. Parallel instances of unity were cited by her as a means of obtaining what was really needed for the out-of-work people of the town and the kiddies some of them are forced to support. She claimed that more improvement in the matter could be paid to good fresh milk and other necessaries, "if money and groceries are to be given they should be distributed," she stated.

The question of changing the meeting place was mooted, if children at home who would have to be left alone after the father or the mother was considered but it was felt by them that now that they used it the had always been the same night, but the matter is left with the executive to arrange.

Before the meeting was concluded the resignation of Miss Edmondson was received and on account of her other duties as secretary of the membership was accepted with much regret, and it was only after considerable discussion that Mrs. Garbutt was induced to accept the nomination of succeeding her. At the next meeting to be held by them, which is tentatively announced as being next Wednesday night, the question of having a chairlady-secretary and bazaar will be definitely decided upon.

ONE MILLION INCREASE IN CAR LICENCES

Ont. Minister Announces Passenger and Commercial Schedules

CABINET APPROVES!

How Fee Goes Up Under Cylinder Basis is Shown

Toronto, Nov. 25—Designed to yield an additional $1,000,000 in revenue, an increase in motor car and motor truck annual taxes was announced yesterday by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, following ratification of the recommendation by cabinet council.

The new scale of taxation eliminates the old system of taxing on a horse power basis and replaces it with a cylinder basis. All classes of cars are affected, the increase ranging from $2 to $20. The schedule of fees adopted comes into force with the purchase of 1932 licenses. For just one of these cars the fee will be $7, formerly $5; for six cylinder cars, $13, formerly $9. Mr. Macaulay said: eight cylinders, $18, formerly $10; 12 cylinders, 30, formerly $15; it was stated all citizens, $40, formerly $25; electric and steam cars, $30.

Mr. Macaulay stated that the fees for commercial motor vehicles had been increased, is being generally applied to all vehicles with pneumatic tires will range from $2 to $100 a year. Vehicles with solid schedule ranges from $8 to $120. Trailer fees under the new schedule range from $6 to $150 as against the old schedule of $3 to $120.

Late Registrations

"In the case of both trucks and trailers, the increased rate is higher than the increase applies than the lighter ones," said Mr. Macaulay, "in order to discourage the practice to reduce registration fees by one half the annual rate after Sept. 1, in addition to this reduction in 1932, a further reduction will be made in fees for motor vehicles and trailers registered after Nov. 30. The fee after this date will be but one-quarter of the annual rate.

Despite the increase in auto taxes, it was stated Ontario will still be considerably lower than those imposed by the other provinces of Canada. Mr. Macaulay said: Ontario, under the new scale, the fee for a four cylinder car is $ 23 in Prince Edward Island it is $18.46, in Nova Scotia $43.74, in New Brunswick $52.90; Quebec $72.50; Manitoba $31.50; in Saskatchewan, $17.50; in Alberta, $17.50; and in British Columbia, $22.25. The cost of auto taxes for six cylinder cars would be also higher in the other provinces than in Ontario. A $12 tax in Ontario costs $52.13 in Nova Scotia, in New Brunswick and $19.25 in Quebec.

CAR UPSETS NEAR BAYSIDE

R. Benford Loses Control and is Cut About Face

Trenton, Nov. 25 (Special)—On Tuesday afternoon about 2 o'clock a coupe driven by Mr. R. Benford coming west on what is known as Bayside hill near Bayside was turned over on its side. It seems that Mr. Benford lost control of the car and it crashed into the guard rail of the protecting fence just where there is a sharp curve. The car then continued up onto the bank turning over on its side. Mr. Benford received some cuts about the face and bruised ribs. The other occupants of the car were not injured. All the glass was broken out of the car and one door of the body pretty badly smashed. The car was later towed to Belleville.

A special machine which can determine the presence of hardening of the arteries in a physician cannot determine it by ordinary tests was recently shown.

Large Gathering of Masons is Held at Wellington

Mr. John Maidens, District Deputy Grand Master, Prince Edward District, paid an official visit to Star-in-the-East Lodge, A.F.&A.M., at Wellington, Tuesday night. There was a very large attendance of the members of the craft from Belleville, Picton, Trenton, Frankford, Stirling and other places in the district. The master of the lodge, Wor. Bro. R. D. Leavitt presided at the meeting of the lodge and also acted as toast master at the banquet which followed the closing of the lodge business. It was specially arranged evening for the Past District Deputy Grand Masters of Belleville and Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity, Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke and Rt. Wor. Bro. Jesse Barlow were associated with the present District Deputy Grand Master, John Maidens in the events of the meeting.

At the banquet the toast to the Grand Lodge was proposed by Wor. Bro. Hilton McCartney and was responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. John Maidens, D.D.G.M., in an eloquent address on "The Material Necessary." Rt. Wor. Bro. H. J. Clarke gave a very interesting address on "The Principles of Free Masonry" and Rt. Wor. Bro. Jesse Barlow gave an excellent address on "Benevolence." The toast to the visitors was proposed by Wor. Bro. E. D. Clemmison and was responded to by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. O. Herity in a masterly address on "Masonry and the World Today." The toast to the ladies was ably spoken to by Rt. Wor. W. Brown.

NO NAMES ARE ANNOUNCED

Executive Committee of Liberal Party Has Been Formed

OTTAWA, Nov. 25 (CP) — The names of the members of the new executive organization committee of the Liberal party will not be announced out at present. Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King, Liberal leader, explained this morning that, while a committee has been appointed, provision is made for substitutes to act in the event of members being unable to act. Also, there is a possibility of some changes in the list as at present constituted. the committee is a membership of fifteen, of which nine are members of the national Liberal organization committee, and six representatives of the national federation of Liberal women and the Twentieth Century Club.

Mr. King made it clear that the object in organizing an executive organization committee is to have a body which is less cumbersome than the full membership. The executional committee comprises approximately sixty members from all provinces of Canada. It will meet at least once every year, and it continues to exercise control in organization matters. But the smaller committee will be in a position to meet more frequently and to act more quickly.

The meeting of the national organization committee did not, as expected, conclude at noon. It sat throughout the morning and early afternoon, and will continue until this evening, when it is expected to conclude the work. At the conclusion of the meeting this evening, a statement will probably be issued by Mr. King. The executive organization committee has held a meeting, a report from which will probably be made to the parent body this afternoon. No announcement was made today in respect to the appointment of an organizer or the initiation of a publicity campaign.

2 YEAR TERM FOR ASSAULT

Fred Miron, Young River Driver, Pays For Folly

Haileybury, Ont., Nov. 26. Pleading guilty to charges of indecently assaulting Mrs. Agnes Groves, an elderly woman of Cobalt, and of committing assault against her husband, Fred Miron young river driver, today was sentenced by Judge Hartman to two years in Portsmouth Penitentiary on each count, the sentences to run concurrently. Miron has been in the district for some time since July, and his counsel, George Mitchell, K.C., unsuccessfully asked to have the terms date from that time. Accused, coming of a river drive had been a temporary resident at the home of the elderly couple, where the offences complained of took place.

Melee Closes Game.

The fight at the end of the game was unnecessary but the visitors were to blame. True, there were a lot of high sticking and elbows but nobody was hurt. Gray' deliberately gave Shiller the stick over the back of the neck and Sherry bested Shill to get even. A general melee was on in a minute with players of both teams taking part. The combatants were finally parted but they continued to battle as they were trooping to their dressing rooms. The referee after the fight had subsides banished Sherry and Shill from the pastime.

CALUMET DICK BRINGS $13,500

Old Glory Sale at New York Has Low Prices

NEW YORK, Nov. 25.—Although the average prices at the 19th Old Glory horse sale have not been particularly high, a promising race horse brings over $13,500. While 190 horses that went under the hammer yesterday brought an average price of only $353. One of them, Calumet Dick, equalled the sale record made more than a decade ago, when he brought $13,500.

Calumet Dick, one of a consignment from the late William Wright's Calumet farm at Lexington, Ky., went to Frank Piper of Boston after a three-cornered bidding duel with Tom Berry, trainer for the Hanover farms of Hanover, Pa., and S. Rohland Harriman of New York. The yearling colt is a son of Guy Abbey-Sumatra.

In three days of sales, 451 horses went under the hammer for a total of $2296,470.

FRANK NIGHBOR LEADS BISONS

On Toy of League By 2 to 1 Victory Over Olympics

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 25 (CP)—Buffalo Bisons, headed by the veteran centre ice star of the National Hockey League, Frank Nighbor, made their initial appearance in Windsor last night and handed the Bulldogs, last year's international league champions a 2-1 setback before a capacity house. Superior team work and an improved defensive system gave the Bisons two points, which sends them into the league leadership a game in front of Detroit Olympics and Cleve Indians ahead of Windsor.

The Bulldogs opened their scoring shortly after the halfway mark of the initial frame, had been paced when Earl Roche took a goal mouth pass from Brother Rosie to beat Tangiers in the Bisons' cage. The lead, however, was short lived as Babe Bogardis fired a shot from Cecil Blue line that bounced off Herb Lewis and by dexterity in front of the Bulldog cage. Both speedy forwards of the Buffalo aggregation came in fast and rifled a low shot into the corner of the net to even the count. Ronnie Martin, reliable winger of the Bisons, gave his side the winning marker early in the second frame when he took a long pass from Lederman and went right in to beat Kerr.

Six of the seven clubs in the league will swing into action tonight, when Buffalo meets London at home, Cleveland engage Pittsburgh in the smoky city and syracuse hosts play host to Detroit Olympics.

W.A.A.A. STAMP NEW RECORDS

Miss Alexandrine Gibbs is Elected President of Body

TORONTO, Nov. 26. — Seventeen Canadian records were approved yesterday by the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada at the annual meeting here yesterday. The awards were presented by Mrs. Myrtle Cook, Montreal, of Montreal, the chairman of the records committee.

They included the time of 2 3 2 seconds, established by Lillian Stasz of Montreal in the 220 metres; the 220 yard indoor mark of 23 7/10 seconds, made by Stella Walsh of Cleveland at the Toronto Coliseum; and the 400 metres, clay track, entered by the Canadian Ladies' Club, Montreal, with time of 59 2 3 seconds, which equalled the old mark. A Dominion record of 16 yards on an indoor dirt track was awarded to Gertrude Phinney of Halifax, who covered the distance in 5 4 4 5 seconds.

Miss Alexandrine Gibb of Toronto was elected president of the W. A. A. F. of Canada, and Mrs. H. Gowan, of Montreal secretary.

DIVIDED HONORS

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26.— Canada and the United States divided honors in the leading classes at the Ice Carnival at Mutual Street Arena here yesterday. Douglas Gibbons of Troy, Ont., a brother of Lorna Marchant, Canada's lone entry in the lightweight junior class on Buffalo ice, defeated Jack Ryan, of Cleveland engage Pittsburgh in the smoky city and syracuse hosts play host to Detroit Olympics.

DEFAULT TO ST. MICHAEL'S

St. Andrew's Unable to Find Team For Game

Due to the fact they were unable to field a team at the appointed hour, the St. Andrews Midget team elected to default their fixtures to the St. Michael's Quintet. Only two players representing the former turned up for the game.

The second of the Midget fixtures was won by Bridge St., from Christ Church by a rather lopsided margin, the final count standing 40-4. The winners are a much rangier team than the Christ Church representatives and although the latter put up a hard fight they were not able to overcome the handicap of the greater height held by their opponents This coupled with more experience in the game accounted for the results shown on the score sheet.

Christ Church—Pindall, Scott, Blaker, Bone, Hogan.

Bridge St.—Wilson, Martin, Sparling, Cook, Bunnett, Cowain, McKeown.

St. Michael's Spring Surprise

By winning from the Bridge St. Juveniles, last year's champions, the St. Michael's boys crossed up the critics and fandom in general. Confidence in their ability to win may have had something to do with the poor showing of the Bridge Street players, in any event they worked off one of the poorest games they have ever played on the Campbell Street floor. Besides being off in their shooting they failed to show the combination and their usual good team play and in addition that they were guilty of many infractions of the rules in their defensive play. Their winners shown any aptitude in foul shooting their margin of victory would have been even greater. The Irish on the other hand were able to do nothing wrong and a number of their successful tries for goals earned off the foul variety that that is merely the fortune of the game. Their defensive game was with a much better follow up system they might yesterday have won.

St. Michael—Sinfield, 8; Forster, 2; Miles 8; Callighan 8; Temple, 4.—Total 30.

Bridge Street—Orrom 2; McBrown; Cole 7; Morgan 4; Bell 9; Cleaver 1; Hogg 1.—Total 24.

St. Josephs Too Strong for Baptist.

St. Josephs, who are an amalgamation of two of the Church league teams and the Judeans, proved too experienced for the Baptist quintet. The latter are playing together for the first time this year and although they have had very little experience in the game, taking into consideration the Victoria Avenue Quint deserve a great deal of credit for making as good a showing as they did against the league leading St. Josephs. Had the losers experienced a little better luck in their shooting there is no telling what a different story to relate.

St. Josephs—Tebe, 3; I. Tebe 2; Ecett 14; Folwell 7; Samuels — Total 29

Baptists —Harris 7; Faulmer; Lynch; Austin; Lerry, Cook, — Total 8.

PROJECT IS PREMATURE

Waterway Would Be Costly and of Little Use

QUEBEC, Nov. 25—The project for the canalization of the upper St. Lawrence River was described as premature costly for Canada, and of little use for sale country in an address delivered before the Quebec Legislature yesterday by Hon. Athanase David, Provincial Secretary, speaking on his motion for Nov. 13 in which he declared that the Province of Quebec does believe that the United States should delay its hurry to develop natural resources, which are the property of Canada.

Mr. David quoted reports of engineers in support of his contention that the project would not justify canalization on the river in that the necessary improvements and other works would be totally inadequate to meet the traffic offered by Great Lakes to the St. Lawrence.

TORONTO LEAFS WANT THE WIN

Flying Frenchmen Are Opponents in Montreal

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 26 (CP) A general shake up in the standing of clubs in the Canadian section of the National Hockey League is expected tonight, when the four clubs lock horns in group contests at Montreal and New York. The other game on the night's sport brings together Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks in the Hub City.

After their startling upset at the hands of Boston Tuesday night, when they were forced to take a 5-1 trouncing, Canadiens return to look home ice tonight to tackle Toronto Maple Leafs. A win for the Canucks coupled with an American defeat at New York will send the flying Frenchmen into the Canadian division leadership, while a defeat is liable to drop them to third place in the standing. The Toronto club, on the other hand, who held the habitants to a one all tie in Toronto recently are out for their first win of the campaign at any cost and a hard battle is assured. Benny Grant is expected to replace Chabot in the Toronto nets.

New York Americans and Montreal hook up for the first time this season in New York tonight. The Americans will be pulling hard for a triumph which will give them an even standing in the race at present have a game in hand over Canadiens, but the Maroons after their impressive victory over Detroit in Montreal Tuesday are expected to take the Americans.

Two strong American group rivals of other years are the Rangers in Boston, when the fast travelling Chicago Black Hawks are to meet for the first time in the 1931-32 campaign. Boston, who opened the season by start, came out of the fog on Tuesday and handed Les Canadiens a severe trouncing. They will meet stiff opponents in the Hawks who are the only club in the N.H.L. to have no losses chalked against them to date.

SEA FLEAS WIN IN FAST GAME

Defeat Hamilton Tigers 2 to 0 and Lead Senior O.H.A.

TORONTO, Nov. 26 (CP)—Hamilton Tigers, senior hockey champions of Eastern Canada, suffered their third straight defeat at Maple Leaf Gardens last night, when they dropped a 2-0 decision to National Sea Fleas. Although the Tigers showed a powerful offensive their defence was rather weak at times and mighty Sea Flea rushes penetrated the rearguard with the result that Marsh in the Tiger nets had a busy evening making many miraculous saves.

Defensive play featured a dogged counter early in the first period when a perfect line combination play between Bruce Paul and Kenny Reardon set up the opener.

Claire McIntyre, centre of the local, added to the Sea Flea lead in the second frame when he banged the rebound of Ross Paul's shot past Marsh. Numerous penalties were put on a furious attack during the closing minutes of the game but they were unable to beat the sensational Mueller.

SITUATION IN INDIA ACUTE

Officers Fearful of Lives Says Marquis of Lothian

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Information received here today from India said that the situation there was grave following indication that the round table conference here will probably end this week without a settlement satisfactory to the Nationalists.

The situation in Bengal is said to be especially critical and the Marquis of Lothian, Under Secretary of State for India, declared in the House of Lords that in some Bengal districts every British officer is doing his duty in "deadly terror of his life." The menace of bomb throwers it is reported, has recently become so great that Lord Willingdon, Viceroy of India now travels in armplane instead of by train.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(AP)—Mahatma Gandhi today announced that plans the Round Table Conference have come to nothing he must go back to India and start his campaign of "non-violent non-cooperation" all over again.

"I condemn violence and anarchic outrages in India as sincerely as anyone," he said, "But my aim in the future must be to fight the legalized terrorism of the government as much as the illegal perversion of revolutionaries."

LONDON, Nov. 26.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The draft report of the federal committee on defence and external relations of the Imperial Round Table Conference made public today states, the majority of the committee members considers it impossible to vest in the Indian Legislature, during its transition period constitutional responsibility in the control of defence as long as actual responsibility cannot be transferred.

Regarding external affairs the majority reaffirms the view expressed in the committee's second report that the Governor-General should be responsible.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

ABSORBING PLOT, BRILLIANT ACTING MARK "THE SIN OF MADELON CLAUDET"

An engrossing story acted to perfection by a brilliant cast, headed by the New York stage star, Helen Hayes, makes "The Sin of Madelon Claudet," which opened last night at the Belle Theatre one of the most interesting and entertaining talking pictures seen here in some time.

The picture marks the first appearance of Miss Hayes on the screen, and her outstanding performance leaves little doubt but that movie goers will see a great deal more of the fine actress who scored such a success on the stage in "Coquette" "What Every Woman Knows" and "Dear Brutus."

HELEN HAYES

Adapted From Stage Hit

The picture, which is an adaptation of the Edward Knoblock stage success, "The Lullaby," tells the story of a girl who loves, not wisely but too well. She is caught in an amazing web of romance and melodrama when her artist lover kisses and runs away, and when subsequently her only friend, whom she believes to be a Count, turns out to be a notorious jewel thief.

The perilous path of the tale is bound up in the girl's devotion to her child for whose success she descends to the lowest depths of society. During the course of the narrative, Miss Hayes changes some fifty years in age, who heralds a refreshingly convincing feat of acting.

Film Has Brilliant Cast

Lewis Stone as the Count, Conrad Nel Hamilton as the unfaithful lover play their respective roles with rare skill and dramatic feeling. The remainder of the supporting cast is equally proficient, including Robert Young, Cliff Edwards, Jean Hersholt, Marie Prevost, Karen Morley and others.

At The Capitol

"LONELY WIVES" AN AUDACIOUS STORY

In releasing "Lonely Wives," a farce comedy talker Pathe announces that it has another dialogue feature which will rank with its 1930 productions such as "Holiday," "Her Man", and "Sin Takes a Holiday". The story was written by Walter De Leon and is based on the Al Woods stage success. Russell Mack directed a cast which includes Edward Everett Horton, in a dual role, Esther Ralston, Laura La Plante, Patsy Ruth Miller, Spencer Charters, Maude Eburne, and Georgette Rhodes. "Lonely Wives" will be on view at the Capitol theatre today (Silver Screen Night) and Friday.

Horton, a veteran star of stage and screen, is well remembered for a number of roles, but best perhaps for his characterizations of "the third assistant vice-president of the second largest nail factory in East St. Louis," in "Holiday", In Esther Ralston, Pathe has secured another beautiful blonde along with its famous trio, Constance Bennett, Ann Harding and Helen Twelvetrees.

Laura La Plante, star of a dozen brilliant roles, some with Reginald Denny, has been a popular favorite for years. In the same category there is Patsy Ruth Miller, in private life the wife of Irving Thalberg director of "Her Man". Domesticity kept her from the stage and screen for a time, but she returns to the screen now in a characteristic comedy role.

Capitol's New Policy

After much thought, and discussion with many of his patrons, manager Holmes has decided that the enormous number of pictures exhibited in Belleville does not allow for those desirous of seeing the majority to do so.

The remedy lies in extended runs, and with this in mind, programmes will run at the Capitol for three days and will be changed every Wednesday and Saturday.

This will enable the presentation of two big feature hits each week.

THE TIMELIEST PICTURE

"The Spirit of Notre Dame," rapidly filming football picture which presents Lew Ayres in the starring role, is regarded as the screen's most timely and genuinely interesting story of the gridiron. It is booked to play the Capitol Theatre starting Saturday for three days. It takes advantage of the seasonal football fever.

In addition to the fact that the engaging Lew was recently acclaimed the most popular male star in motion pictures, additional interest is brought to "The Spirit of Notre Dame" by the presence on the screen of an entire team of the most famous football players ever developed at Notre Dame by the late Knute Rockne.

The women folk will thoroughly enjoy "The Spirit of Notre Dame" because of the love interest and romance so wonderfully blended with the action. Sally Blane will captivate the audience with her delightful charm and the little ingenénes not unmixed with some excellent comedy will make this picture one of the most outstanding of the season's bookings.

North Manchuria's wheat crop is 15 per cent greater than that of last year.

MEAT INSPECTION SERVICE

Probably one of the most valuable services carried out by the federal Department of Agriculture is inspection of meat and canned foods by officers of the Health of Animals Branch of the service. During year ended March 31, 1931, a total of 66 meat packing establishments operated under federal inspection. Total slaughter amounted to 991,046 head of cattle, 1,268,857 sheep, 1,268,857 swine, 234,015 poultry, and 25 goats. The high general quality and health of Canadian live stock is evidenced by the fact that only 1.46 per cent of the dressed carcasses were condemned. The small purple stamp appearing on all meats dressed at plants operating under government inspection is an absolute guarantee that it is fit for human consumption. The meat inspection service is an important safeguard to Canadian health.

VAULES OF FISH MEAL

Dr. Frank T. Shutt, Dominion Chemist, in discussing the nutritive value of fish meal states "The use of fish meals in the rations of all classes of live stock and especially in those for pigs and poultry s steadily increasing. These meals may perhaps be regarded primarily as sources of protein, but the fat the mineral content and the 'iodine are also constituents of very considerable value in stock feeding." He points out also that edible fish meals must be made from fresh fish. The flesh of the fish is the most valuable source of protein, while the mineral content is highly valuable.

Canadian mines produced nearly 2,000,000 ounces of gold in the first nine months of 1931, the output being 21 per cent about the corresponding period of 1930.

INDIA WILL STRIVE FOR GOAL SAYS GANDHI

Churchillians Have Won But Victory Brief is Gandhi's Last Word

India Will Continue Fight For Liberty, Says Mahatma

READY TO LEAVE

Famous Indian Will Visit in Switzerland With Biographer

LONDON, Nov. 27.—(AP)— Mahatma Gandhi disappointed but not disheartened at what he regards as the failure of the Round Table conference to settle the Indian controversy, today made his final plans to return home.

"Yes the Churchillians have won, he said grimly referring to the adherents of Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, "but their victory may only be at a terrible cost.

"For practically ignoring the Hindu land's failure to keep her pledges to India will now go through acoustic purgatory of shouting to reach their goal of liberty.

"No army, no armoured tanks, no aeroplanes no machine guns can frighten them."

With Miss Madeline Slade and two secretaries the Mahatma will leave next Wednesday for Villa Neuve, Switzerland, where he will spend a week as the guest of Romain Rolland his biographer. He has abandoned all idea of broadcasting speaking engagements but he may address a meeting of the Friends of Geneva about December 5th.

He will proceed Switzerland for Venice on December 10 and embark on a Lloyd Triestino steamship for Bombay, arriving about Dec. 28.

INCREASE WORKING HOURS OF SPINNERS

Liverpool, Nov. 27 (AP) — Reports from Manchester today said cotton mill owners had decided to give one month's notice of an increase in working hours of spinners.

The increase has been the subject of boomfire lately, partly because of the pledge given by the spinners' union immediately after the country went off the gold standard, and partly because the Chinese boycott of Japan brought important new business to this country's mills.

35 HOURS FOR VERDICT

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 27.—A verdict of acquittal in the retrial today by the jury in the retrial of Alexander Pantages, theatre chain millionaire accused and once convicted of a criminal attack on Dorothy Pringle, youthful dancer. The jury was out 35 hours.

Wheat Quota to Affect U. S.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 27.— (By Ken Dixon, Canadian Press Staff Writer).—A United States trade to the value of $30,000,000 will be affected to varying degrees by the adoption in Great Britain of a quota limit upon foreign wheat. In 1930 the United Kingdom imported from the United States 21,114,000 bushels of wheat valued at $244,000,000 and 1,600,000 barrels of flour valued at $8,500,000.

BERT HINKLER NOW OVERDUE

Paris, Nov. 27 (AP)—The General Aeropostale Company reports that Bert Hinkler flying from Natal, Brazil, landed at Saint Louis Du Senegal, French West Africa at two o'clock this afternoon.

The statement added the time of the landing 10.00 a.m. Eastern Standard Time.

The achievement also would give Captain Hinkler, a noted British flyer, another record for the first solo to-Australia speed record. The Australian left Natal on his flight to fly across the South Atlantic ocean to Africa.

The Aeropostale message said that Hinkler left Natal Louis immediately by Port Etienne.

Natal Louis Du Senegal is a comparatively short distance north of Dakar, the town at the tip of the Cape Verde which Captain Hinkler was headed.

The distance from Natal is something more than 1,050 miles.

Rio De Janeiro, Nov. 27 (AP)— Captain Bert Hinkler, noted British flyer, set off to look off from Natal Brazil, on Wednesday on a flight to Dakar, French West Africa, was 24 hours overdue this morning and there had been no word from him since the took off at 10.00 a.m. Wednesday for the flight of 1,500 or more miles, but the weather was good and he was not sighted over Fernando De Noronha Island, the closest land to the Brazilian coast. Two mail-carrying destroyers planes and steamships were out today and Dakar, kept a lookout for the plane but neither sighted it. It was thought possible that he may have landed in some lonely part of the African coast from which he could not get word to Dakar.

PRINCE OPENS BURMA PARLEY IN SPLENDOR

Orient and Occident Meet in King's Robing Room

A GREAT CHANGE

Burmese Seek Separation From India By Treaty

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

London, Nov. 27—In color and splendor Burma's first parliament on the road towards fellowship in the community of British nations at the conference which is to decide the terms of the separation of Burma from India opened.

In the King's robing room of the House of Lords where they met the delegates to the conference assembled a contrasting picture of the Orient and the Occident. Men clad in the burmese black of mourning coats sat side by side with others whose robes flashed with the colors of the gorgeous East.

Significantly enough the Prince of Wales, who opened the conference was the first guest of the evening. Seated at the side of King Arthur which depicted the admission of Sir Tristram to the fellowship of the Round Table.

The Prince spoke of the pleasant memories he had formed retained of Burma—its romantic scenery, great rivers, forests, its rich mines, its plentiful paradise, and, above all the friendliness of its people.

"It used to be said" the Prince continued, "that the East is slow to change, but that saying is no longer true. Nowhere does political liberty record a more rapid transformation, at once so radical and so swift as that which has occurred in Burma within the space of my own lifetime.

"Twenty years ago there were no politics in Burma, politics in the sense of the word, no real representative, institutions, no vernacular press. But now, and for some time past the elected representatives of the people of Burma have constituted a great majority in its legislature and have shared responsibility for a large part of its administration.

STOCK PARADE CLOSES FAIR

Brilliant Colorful Scene Marks Closing Events

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP) — A stirring military display featuring the musical ride of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, martial strains of several massed bands, and an impressive parade of prize winning live stock and glittering, massive showmanship exhibits, the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair to-night entered the final day of record cars into which Canada's blue-blooded cattle, horses, sheep and swine were herded, en route to their new homes or the next show on the circuit.

The last class of the Horse Show, the spectacular six-horse hitch, resulted in a Canadian victory with the C.P.R. Oakland Farms hitch winning first and third place—the latter with Lightfoot with only one and a half faults, and third with Rosana, the only mare among the fourth places went to the French Canadian hitch from Notre Dame, getting over with four and one-half faults and Lieut. Du Breuil on Lightfoot.

In the horseback pitching contest the prowess of rural Canada was again demonstrated when precision with the pitchfork was demonstrated in the semi-finals. The junior championship, however, went back to an older claimant to the title, Stephen Sikora, the Ontario farmers. John Simona, an Indian from Christina, Ont., resident in the Muncey Reserve, captured the singles with a score of 190 points against Bill Sr. Fred Zaharich of Cromarty, Ont.

The Dog Derbies the title went to Hasburn and Paul Boe of Hensall, Ont., while W. Wing and Fred Neilson, St. Catharines, Ont., were second.

SEEKS RECORD OF HIS FAMILY

Paul E Van Valkenburgh's Father Once Lived Here

Mr. J. O. Hertly, manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, has received a letter from Mr. Fred E. Van Valkenburgh a prominent jeweler in Chicago asking, if possible to be put into touch with some one in this district who may be able to furnish him with information from which to obtain data regarding early family history. In his letter Mr. Van Valkenburgh says:

"I am taking the liberty of writing you, thinking you may be in a position to give me the information I am seeking or to direct me to the right parties to write. I have been informed that my father, Johnathan Van Valkenburgh, who died while I was quite young, was born in or near Belleville about 1832. His father, Paul Van Valkenburgh, was a farmer in the vicinity of your city and was born in 1817.

It is my wish to compile a history of my father's family to hand down to future generations. Any information you may offer in this regard will be greatly appreciated."

NEW PEAK FOR UNEMPLOYED

Estimate Six Million Men Are Jobless in United States

Washington, D.C., Nov. 27 (AP) — Unemployment, finds the American Federation of Labor is not increasing any faster than normal and has now but the total of men out of wage-has reached a new peak.

For two months in succession, reported Chairman Green today yesterday, the abnormal rise noted since last February has been checked and the November total was 200,000 less than expected because farm layoffs have been light.

Green estimated the industrial unemployment now at 6,000,000 or 20 per cent. of normal employment. He predicted the total would rise to 7,500,000 by January unless increased efforts are made to keep men at work.

DOG IN NEED OF A FRIEND

Animal in Dog Keep is in Jeopardy of His Life at Present

Rescued from starvation, fed and housed and feeling that at last it has found a friend in man, a dog, lame and tan hound is at the city Dog Keep. Much, however, as the dog Thorn would like to give a home to and will do so when he can, it is of course, impossible for him to do so and unless some lover of animals comes to the rescue of this dog, it will be necessary for the pound to destroy it by bring its life to an end.

The hound is well bred and in first class condition, it was in a very pitiable condition when Mr. Thorn, in response to a telephone message, went to Coleman street where the dog was found by the dog keep. From the report, which Mr. Thorn received the hound had been wandering around for several days in the locality, where it was found it was about starved and so thin that its ribs could be easily counted. Mr. Thorn went to the dog keep immediately to the rescue of this poor homeless young hound.

SERVICE LOAN IS 2 3 TAKEN

For First Four Days 101 Millions Have Been Subscribed

Montreal, Que. Nov. 27 (CP)—The National Service Loan has passed the two-thirds mark. During the first four days of the campaign saw $101,000,000 of the $150,000,000 loan subscribed, the Central Committee reported tonight. The total subscription of the total up to last night was being completed today after provincial applications were challenged by official clerks to keep abreast of the returns.

Indications were present today that several more heavy subscriptions by large companies and financial institutions are still to come. Approval by boards of directors are being awaited before definite commitments possible. Among the larger applications announced today by the Central Committee was that of $1,000,000 by the T. Eaton Co. of Canada, Ltd.

The committee's compilations are based on telegraphic and by mail messages from all parts of the Dominion. Returns are still to come in progress and further returns now in the mail are expected to increase considerably the final figure for the first four days. In the enthusiastic response of the public the country reasoned any shadow of doubt as to complete success success of the issue, considering that the selling campaign has still a considerable period to run, the belief in financial circles is that the loan will be substantially oversubscribed.

Impetus for purchase by private persons has been given by arrangements announced by many industrial firms. Employees are being given an opportunity to take over by instalment payments bonds purchased for them by the employers.

WHEAT QUOTA CRITICIZED BY NEWSPAPERS

Unfriendly Attitude Voiced By Manchester and London Papers

"MERE NIBBLE"

No Mention of Offer Made to Dominions

By THOMAS T. CHAMPION
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Nov. 27.—The Premiership of Sir John Gilmour in the House of Commons yesterday that the government would introduce a bill next Monday to inaugurate a plan setting a minimum content of British wheat in domestically milled flour. The bill would afford unfriendly criticism by both extreme left and right wing newspapers.

The Manchester Guardian and the London News Chronicle unite in a statement that the measure is not an end nay pretence that protection remains an open question with the National government.

The Guardian questions if the quota is worthwhile, saying there is a common delusion that wheat growing is the panacea for British agriculture, whereas it is actually less than five per cent of the total agricultural output of the country.

The Daily Telegraph regards the proposal as a mere nibble at farm protection, also points out that Canada receives a small percentage of Great Britain's farm production, but adds, in a critical tone, there is no mention of the quota being offered to the Dominions.

"There is not a word about bacon, beef, mutton or the vast range of poultry and dairy produce," the Telegraph says. "Not a word about the great imperial plan for the exchange of Mother Country manufactures for Dominion foodstuff, not a word about the produce pouring in from Soviet Russia. The failure to deal with the Dominions is astonishing."

The Daily Mail wholly has been a great champion of the British farmer, treats the proposal in a more genial character. Its sole point of criticism is that there was no mention of any offer to the Dominions. The Mail says: "Mr. Bennett of Canada, who is in the country, should get an hone explanation," the Mail remarks. He should take up in the home tangible proposal.

The Yorkshire Post which is widely read among agricultural population says the quota should make no difference to the advocates of a tariff policy applying to Empire wheat if at the Ottawa Imperial Economic Conference before, it is decided to fix one. The paper added that the quota should be set to be tested by actual experience.

There was much speculation regarding the probable protection the quota would give the British agricultural industry. While no information was forthcoming in official circles, observers were ready to guess the quota would be fixed at British wheat content of 15 per cent. in domestic flour.

TWO COLLIES GIVE LIVES

Have to Be Shot Before Officers Gain Entry

MACLEOD, Alta., Nov. 27 (CP).— Two collie dogs were shot by police here Wednesday in a heroic display of canine love for their master. Mrs. William Anderton, 77-year-old Macleod woman lived alone and the dogs slept her husband's death three years ago. Neighbors who had not seen Mrs. Anderton for several days becoming alarmed informed police who found her widowed dying in her bed.

When police arrived at the house the dogs attacked them. A bitter struggle followed between the dogs and the aged woman's protectors. The animals finally had to shot by the police before they could gain entry to the bedroom where they found Mrs. Anderton unconscious.

Later, the aged woman died several hours later.

WRIGHT RE-ELECTED

Kingston, Nov. 27.—Mayor G. C. Wright was today re-elected by acclamation for 1932, at the civic nominations for controllers and public utilities commission. James Harris and James Halliday were re-elected to two year terms in the utilities commission.

Orders Son to Work Then Shoots Self

St. Thomas, Nov. 27. — Joseph Henry Humphrey, 55, farmer on the 11th concession of Dorchester, Elgin county, arose at half past five this morning, aroused one of his sons to go to work, then went out into the yard and shot himself through the head. Members of the family hearing the shot, found him lying on the ground and called a doctor, but he died before the latter arrived. Humphrey, who leaves a widow, two sons and a daughter, had suffered a nervous breakdown and was worried about financial matters.

PRIMO CARNERA IS THE FAVORITE

Meets Compolo in Madison Square Garden Tonight

New York, N.Y., Nov. 27. — Primo Carnera, giant Italian ring titan, and Victorio Campolo, Argentine heavyweight, will fight tonight in Madison Square Garden tonight in Carnera a heavy favorite.

Indications today were that Carnera would be the king in public choice at odds at least as good as 2 to 1. The rush of tickets was unusual, the 15 ringside seats in the upper showings Compolo made many friends among Tommy Loughran and Ernie Schaaf.

UNDERWEAR AND FOOTWEAR NEEDED

Supplies for the Central Relief are coming in slowly but surely all the time. Today a number of potatoes and other vegetables were delivered by a rural resident, while several citizens also brought a number of large boxes of clothing and other supplies.

What is needed more than anything else now is underwear, shoes and socks, but more particularly children's sizes, and a few more overcoats. Several pairs of shoes are on hand but all of these are of large sizes and some difficulty was experienced by many of the men and a few of the women in trying to fit themselves out. Children's sizes of all clothing is more urgently requested.

Gifts have become so numerous in fact so lately that they are to be issued householders paying $5 for the first lumber light, $15 for the second and 20 for the third.

Boy Falls Out of Car and Hand Run Over in Odd Accident

Geo. Ketcheson Applies Brakes to Avoid Rider of Bicycle

DOOR IS OPENED

"Bobbie" Ketcheson, two-year-son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ketcheson, 92 Victoria Avenue, narrowly escaped serious injuries when trying to hitch a ride on the running-board of his father's car in which he was riding, he was thrown with such force against the door of the car that it opened and he fell out onto the pavement, the rear wheel of the car passing over his left hand. The little fellow was taken at once to a doctor's office and the only bruised hand was attended to. The little chap also received a severe shaking up but it is expected that he will be as lively as ever in a few days.

The accident occurred in a peculiar manner, the youngster accompanied by Mrs. Ketcheson and their little son, was driving east on Bridge street on Wednesday evening, about five-thirty o'clock and was just about to turn north on Victoria street, when he saw a bicycle coming from behind, and applied the brakes on his car. Mr. Ketcheson applied the brakes suddenly in order to avoid a collision with the bicycle and succeeded in doing so, but the car came to a sudden stop his small son, who was in the rear seat also was thrown from the car. It is thought that the little boy came in contact with the handle of the door in such a way as to cause it to open.

The bicycle was being ridden by Jack Hamilton, a young lad and it is said that no head light was attached to the bicycle.

The accident was investigated by Constable Izzard.

AMELIASBURG BUILDINGS ARE DESTROYED

Fire Causes Heavy Loss on Farm of Wm. Knox

4 COWS ARE LOST

Horses and Motorcar Are Saved, But Machinery Destroyed

Breaking out from an unknown origin a fire completely destroyed the barn, drive shed, hog-bed and most of their contents on the farm of Mr. Wilmot Knox of the second concession of Ameliasburg last night

The Knox family awoke at about 1.30 a.m. this morning to find their barn in flames. It is not known how the fire was started but everything was all right when the family retired for the night. No explosion was heard and whether or not a fire-bug is responsible for the fire is problematical, up to, and around Hamilton, it's been a question. The neighbors gathered to fight the fire but the flames prevailed under the conditions, but with little avail as they were forced to use the bucket system. The fire spread rapidly, it had started in the barn and the glowing embers were blown over to the drive shed and hog-house and before help enough had arrived all three buildings were in a mass of flames. The horses and motorcar they control their activities upon the mainland and saved it well with water. The wind changed at this time and it is thought that this change of wind is about all that saved the home from the spreading flames.

All contents of the barn, which included four cows, 2 pigs, a set of sleighs, a wagon, all the crops and some other implements, was a complete loss. The horses and motorcar, while were in the driveshed, were saved before the flames had caught fire. But some implements stored at the back of the building were burned beyond repair.

The loss will be quite heavy for Mr. Knox as he had little, if any, insurance and the buildings and contents were practically a complete loss.

STRAINS OF OLD TIME MUSIC HEARD

Strains of old-familiar square dance music pervaded the atmosphere of Odd-fellows Hall last night as over one hundred guests crowded into the main room for the card playing and the dancing which followed.

Winners of the progressive euchre were:—First Mrs. Boyle, Mrs. Connors. Mrs. Dawe, all in the order named. For the men Mr. Huffman, Mr. Adams and Mr. Price carried off the honors. Mr. Jordan received the special prize of the evening. After the cards had been concluded dancing was continued until a late hour to the music supplied by Mr. Adams and his orchestra.

AROUND THE DIAL WITH MR. JACQUES

"Mr. John Jacques, of Foxboro, the champion radio fan of them all is out for more laurels and in tuning in last night got splendid work in pulling in the elusive long distant stations. He started out at 9 o'clock with a Mexican station XEN, but the name of the place remains a mystery even to the radio kips it seems because it is not listed possibly if we did know it we couldn't pronounce it. JAX, Jacksonville, was the next stop and then back to Mexico, XEB Mexico City, and at 3.03 another Mexican station, XEW with the name of the city not listed. Nine music was then heard from these Mexican stations, Mr. Jacques reports, and the reception lovely. The announcing was done in English and some Spanish and the programs carried out in Spanish. Hollywood was heard from at 3.16 KPT, and ZAE at 3.10, WLWL, Tennessee at 3.28 wound up a most successful radio tour for Mr. Jacques. It's the early bird that gets the stations all right.

Word goes, as goes the city".

It is understood that after, or previous to their experience at this meeting, aspirants for office have been invited to state their nominating to the members of the first battalion club, who are advancing the date of their regular monthly meeting for this purpose. This meeting will be held in the sergeants' mess at the armouries and how office seekers who may not have received official notification and desirous of availing themselves of this privilege are urgently requested to be present. Ex-Sergt. William Crerar will be in charge of the evening's proceedings.

CAGES OF MINKS ATTRACT ATTENTION

Several cages of bloodthirsty looking, savage little minks kept engaged the attention of motorists one late for lunch today as they gathered around the cages on Front at the corner of Front and Bridge streets to watch the antics of the little animals whose green eyes glared out from the wire enclosures. Their sharp, white fangs, brass coupled, and sharp white claws, as they paced their cages as fingers were poked too close as they prowled restlessly around.

The animals are the property of the Fergus Fur Farms, who have headquarters at Fergus, Rev. Lavracdor, and Fergus, Ontario The animals have been taken from Fergus, and will be exhibited next in Hamilton, Ontario's Canadian fair. The object of the display is to stimulate interest in the raising and breeding of mink and it is said that those who are now engaged in that industry are making a very handsome living at it. Their fur is in great demand for coats and trimmings of all varieties.

Obituary

LATE JAMES EDWARD GLENN

The funeral of the late James Edward Glenn was held from his late residence, Roblin's Mills, yesterday afternoon. The funeral service was conducted in Roblin's Mills United Church by the Rev. W. G. Fleischer assisted by the Rev. J. D. F. Knox. The largely attended funeral and the many beautiful floral tributes only went to show the high esteem in which the deceased was held in the community in which he lived.

The bearers were F. Russell, H. Noxon, J. Black, N. Gooding, I. Wood and F. Wood.

Interment was made in Salem Cemetery.

NICHOLAS MacDONALD

One of the district's oldest residents passed away on Friday morning in the person of Nicholas MacDonald after a very short illness. Mr. MacDonald died at his late residence on Hershimer Ave., where he had been living a retired life for a number of years. Mr. MacDonald was born in Thurlow township 84 years ago and was the son of the late Nicholas and Susan MacDonald.

Previous in his retirement Mr. MacDonald was a farmer and operated one of the finest farms in Thurlow township. He was a member of the United Church and a Liberal in politics.

Two daughters, Mrs. A. W. Grant of Joliett, Ill.; Mrs. R. E. Pettingill of Port Colborne, two sons, Harry of Oshawa and Ralph of Bloomfield, survive to mourn the loss of their father.

The many friends of the late Mr. MacDonald will be sorry to hear of the passing of their old friend and neighbor whom they had come to know and respect.

LATE A. E. THOMPSON

The funeral of the late Ex-Alderman Albert Edward Thompson, formerly of Belleville, and latterly of Toronto, will be held Friday afternoon at his home at 2.30 p.m. 349 Runnelme Road, whence the body will be brought by motor to Belleville Saturday for burial in Belleville Cemetery at two-thirty o'clock.

FREDERICK S. LEAVENS

Frederick S. Leavens, 186 Elmore street, brewhouse inspector under the Ontario Liquor Control Board, died yesterday after a brief illness at the age of 67 years. He was born in Belleville, lived for some time in Saskatchewan, where he enlisted in the Great War. After the Armistice he made his home in Toronto. He was a bachelor, a Presbyterian, member of Antiquity Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and of Ward 4 Conservative Association. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. A. M. Peeler, Toronto, and a brother, R. G. Leavens, in Saskatchewan.

Builds Modern Woodworking Shop as Relief Operation

F. Foley, of Fruit Machinery Company, Gives Men Work

TWO-STOREY PLANT

Fifteen men are now busily engaged in demolishing the large frame structure behind the factory of the Fruit Machinery company on Front street, and more men are excavating the material necessary for the foundation of a new and modern one to house the entire repair department for the overhauling of all makes of gas, steam and possibly electric motors, besides many many other machines and farm implements.

This work of construction has been ordered by Mr. Frank Foley the owner of the Fruit Machinery plant for the past year-or so, but he explained this morning that now while prices were comparatively low in building products and work was needed so badly by the local men of the city he had decided to commence erection immediately to do his share in this relief condition.

The building which will be erected will be of concrete and corrugated iron construction and will be about forty feet long by thirty-four wide. It will be of two storey construction and house the repair shop on the upper part which will be probably reached by a ramp. The lower part of the building will be given over to the woodworking machines which will do all the lighter kinds of manual work for the products used by this company. Mr. Ralph Smith is now in charge of the erecting of the building.

Taxation Burden Too Heavy to Carry

Peterboro, Nov. 27—Resolutions declaring that the Ontario Government should assume the whole cost of building and maintaining provincial highways and county roads, and that the salaries of all government, county and township employes should be reduced by 25 per cent, were carried at a mass meeting of Peterboro county farmers here yesterday. Organized as a demonstration against heavy taxation, the delegation emphasized the fact that, while rural incomes had been reduced materially by low prices for farm products, the burden of taxation had increased beyond the capacity of many farmers to pay.

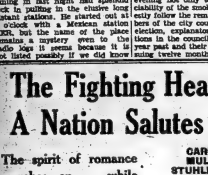
DINO GRANDI HOME BOUND

Mutual Fear and Distrust Arising Out of Armaments Cause

New York, Nov. 27—Dino Grandi's 11-day visit to this country ended today.

The Italian foreign minister and his party were to sail for home aboard the steamship Augusta at 3 p.m.

Since his arrival early last week Signor Grandi has held conversations with President Hoover, Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and other high officials of the government, and has been the guest of New York, Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Both Signor Grandi and the White House have stated that the Washington conferences were most satisfactory in their results.



In his most ambitious public address, delivered last night at the Foreign Policy Association dinner, Signor Grandi avowed Italy's desire to see the peace of Europe based upon disarmament and arbitration. Italy is convinced, he said, that "at the very bottom" the political uneasiness throughout the world is due to "mutual fear and distrust arising out of armaments."

WATER PIPE BEING LAID

"Sheer Legs" Used to Lower Sections of Pipe

The 36 cast iron pipe supplied on the 2nd of October arrived for the spare water main is now being laid as fast as received by employees of the department of water works. Joints are being filled with molten lead, securely caulked in with hand tools, and the work presented a scene of activity when visited this morning.

The pipes are handled and slung into place by means of a portable three legged tripod, called "sheer legs" by the men, and when lowered into the excavation are forced into place and then made ready for the pouring of the hot lead by a ring around the joint composed of asbestos. This section, over two hundred feet of the pipe had been laid, and it is expected that today's run will exceed that.

TWO YOUTHS LEFT SHELTER

Sent On An Errand and Have so Far Not Returned

Given an errand to do by the matron of the Children's Shelter, two boys, James Bird, aged 11 of Stirling, and Percy Martyn, aged 17 of Frankford, left the Home last night and have not returned.

Miss Harris, the matron, asked the boys to empty the garbage cans at about 7 p.m. last evening but after emptying the pails the boys failed to come back to the home. As Ralph Letts, as far as known, only wore overalls, good shoes, smock and cap and Martyn only had on a suit of clothes, it is thought that they could not have gone far as neither had an overcoat, that is to the knowledge of the officials of the Home.

Any information as to the whereabouts of these two boys will be gladly appreciated by Mr. T. D. Huston, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society. Martyn is of slight build, fair complexion and when the two boys would make for Mr. Huston was not able to say today.

Martin Trophy Won by Stirling Cheesemakers for Third Successive Time

Now Becomes Permanent Possession of Stirling District

PRIZES GIVEN

C. F. Linn, Dairy Instructor, Given Credit For Fine Showing

Long before the meeting was called to order over two hundred people had gathered in Stirling's Community Hall for the third annual Cheesemakers' distribution of session's prizes and their annual social held Wednesday evening. The meeting was over an hour late in starting, but once the chairman, Mr. H. W. Rogers, president of the Stirling District Cheesemakers' Association, called the meeting to order little time was lost in getting over the business that preceded the social evening.

The hall was gaily decorated for the occasion and presented a picture that reminded one of the achievements of the Stirling district cheesemakers this year as they had their records, etc., conspicuously hung at intervals upon the walls.

Address of Welcome

Mr. Rogers, the chairman, was the first speaker and welcomed, on behalf of the cheesemakers' association. He also welcomed the makers of cheese in the Stirling district, explaining to those present that they had won the Hon. J. S. Martin trophy again this year, thus winning it three times in succession and the trophy was now their permanent possession. In the past four years, the Stirling district has produced cheese that was of prime-cent, grade cheese and this, the speaker thought, was a record for any district to be proud of.

Mr. Thos. Maloney, reeve of Stirling, welcomed the delegates and their wives, families and friends to the village and presented the keys of the village to them for the evening. In the past meeting that although he was retired now he did at one time milk in a cheese factory for a period of twenty-one years, being a cheese that he was proud of. Now that he is retired he could at least eat the cheese and drink the milk, he said.

Mr. W. J. Bailey, cheese instructor of the Madoc district, rose and congratulated the Stirling district on their wonderful showing in the past season and stated that he was glad that the trophy had at least stayed in Hastings' County for another year. He went on to explain that although there was a slight cut in the price of cheese at present he thought that the best way to overcome this difficulty was by manufacturing more cheese. This could only be accomplished by the producers sending their milk to the factories. He explained that there had been thirty groups in competition for the Martin trophy and it was an honor to win such a coveted prize.

Mr. Tucker was then called upon and he thanked all for being present on behalf of the farmers themselves. He congratulated Instructor Linn on his accomplishments. Mr. Tucker thought that the cheese making business was a national asset to the country and that all producers should co-operate with the makers in making the business a profitable one for all concerned.

Speak on Cheese Grading

Mr. W. H. Rodgers, reeve of Sidney, also congratulated the men in the village, stating that the farmers would be well advised to turn out to the summer meetings of the cheesemakers. He was sure that the Stirling district had won the prize as they were the most deserving in this part of the province. Mr. Rogers was not in favour of having the cheese graded in Belleville or anywhere outside of the factories.

Mr. W. A. Morton, reeve of Huntingdon, congratulated the association in their endeavours and their achievement of winning the championship of Eastern Ontario in the cheese making business. He also thought that the farmers should co-operate as do the cheese makers in order to get more information regarding about a medium prosperity as all concerned.

Mr. Bert Bedford, on behalf of the farmers, congratulated the Association, and wished them continued success as did Mr. Wm. West, the manager of the Stirling cream-eries.

Mr. J. Wilson, agricultural representative for the district was called on and stated that he thought that the cheese business exactly he was keenly interested. He also thought it a great asset to the agricultural work that he was so interested in. "The cheesemakers have proved their worth to this district," said Mr. Wilson, "and I went on to explain that cheese factories that have been closed for some time will have to re-open next Spring in Western Ontario. All that is required is the necessary was to put the business on a sound basis was a little co-operation from the wives interested.

Instructor Speaks

Mr. Chas. Linn, instructor for the Stirling district, then rose and stated the makers of cheese in his district. He explained that the cheese business was a real asset to this country. He stated some time to the extent that Denmark were now sending 2½ times as much cheese to England as was New Zealand. He also thought that if the Canadian manufacturers would but make more cheese they would get some of this English market. This idea could only be fulfilled by the producers sending their milk to the factories. If everyone concerned does not get totally interested pretty soon Mr. Linn said of the opinion that the cheese business might end in quite a drastic way in Canada. He concluded his talk by stating that the Stirling district without a doubt made the best cheese in the world.

Prizes Distributed

The distribution of prizes for the year followed. The Martin trophy, of course, was presented to the Stirling district. Mr. A. S. Mumford, on behalf of the Royal Bank, presented a silver cup to Mr. Mitchell, of Harold factory, for the best kept factory sign and out. The De Laval Company presented six thermometers to the following special prizes: Geo. Pollard of Sidney Town Hall; A. Ruby of West Huntingdon factory; J. Bateman, of Rawdon factory; J. M. Wilkinson, of Roblin factory; A. L. Wood, of Evergreen Factory; and D. H. Carleton of Eclipse Factory. Thomas Spry presented prizes for the best kept factory: First, Jack Akerly of Stirling; second, M. Rose of Central Factory. The prizes for the highest scoring points were presented by Mousie Rigg to C. Pollard of Sidney Town Hall factory; second, R. Brown of Maple Leaf Factory and third to J. Wood of Evergreen Factory. These prizes were presented by Mr. Lawrence Monroe. The cash prizes given by the Stirling Cheese Box and Basket Company were won by Geo. Pollard of Sidney Town Hall factory: first; R. Brown of Maple Leaf, second and J. M. Wood of Evergreen, third. Mr. T. S. Wallis, of Tweed, presented a half-dozen butter knives to A. H. Dudgeon of Moira Valley factory for having the highest scoring cheese.

The prizes given for the makers having the highest average score on their cheese for the season were: First cash prize, presented by Mr. W. H. Nolan, on behalf of the Bank of Montreal, won by Geo. Pollard of Sidney Town Hall Factory. Second, dozen silver knives and forks, presented by R. W. Mackechnie, of Stirling, won by H. G. Henderson, of Beulah Factory. Third prize, a rug donated by Fox and Anderson, won by R. Rosbury, of Frankford Factory. Fourth, a cash prize, donated by the Tweed Bird Trough Company, won by O. W. Henderson of Plainfield. Fifth prize, a new hat, donated by T. T. Ward, was won by J. N. West, of Evergreen Factory. Sixth, a cash prize donated by W. B. Gordon, and won by R. Brown, of Maple Leaf Factory. Seventh prize, a cash prize, given by the Bank of Montreal and presented by Mr. W. H. Nolan, won by V. Curry of White Lake Factory. Eighth a cash prize, donated by the Tweed Bird Trough Co., presented by Mr. Gordon and won by D. W. Carleton of Eclipse Factory. There were also cash donations by the Bank of Montreal, Hon. J. R. Cooke, M.L.A., and Jas. Cooke of Belleville.

After the distribution of prizes the floor was cleared and the grand promenade was started in which all took part. This was followed by an evening spent in dancing. There were dances for the young and old, both square and round dancing being indulged in and the music was supplied by the Rosebrugh orchestra. At midnight refreshments were served which had been prepared by the wives and families of the Stirling and district cheesemakers. The evening's entertainment was enjoyed by all who were present and it was voted a hearty success. Just previous to the final waltz the visitors showed their appreciation of the efforts of the Stirling cheesemakers and their wives by giving them hearty applause for the most excellent entertainment that they had supplied. After the National Anthem all wended their way home with nothing but praise for the manner in which the Stirling cheesemakers.

Shaw Not So Important in Opinion of Late Frank Harris

Thought Greatness of Shaw Exaggerated By World and Self

"FADING OUT"

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—George Bernard Shaw was regarded by the late Frank Harris as a man who lived intimately, as a far less important figure than Shaw himself or the world believes him to be.

The opinion of Shaw is found in his posthumous biography, "Bernard Shaw", which will be published today.

In biographical dictionaries thousand years hence, Harris wrote, Shaw will be mentioned as "Shaw, Bernard; subject, a bust by Rodin otherwise unknown."

Harris believed that Shaw's life as a dramatist ended after the writing of the play, "St. Joan." For surely, said Harris, "The Apple Cart" was written by a dead man.

Shaw, in the view of Harris, has been a hard worker, but all his plays lack the something that stamps greatness. One usually has a good time in the theatre with Shaw, said Harris, but no better than a circus or a cinema.

"He is the wittiest author of our time; he made even the writers of English literature," wrote Harris, "but his plays, almost all of them, lack vitality."

"On re-examining Shaw's forty odd volumes —on every subject in the world and beyond it—I find only one consistently considered idea throughout all of his work and life. And that—incompetence."

Harris expressed the belief that Shaw's fame would last longer as a personality than as a writer.

WILL PROTEST INCREASED FEES

Truck Owners Called in Conference to Consider Question

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 26.—(By the Canadian Press)—Special meeting of the Legislature Committees of the Ontario Motor Associations, the Motor Truck Owners' association and the Ontario Motor League to consider the possibility of a protest against the increase in road license fees announced by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways.

W. G. Robertson, Secretary of the Motor League, in announcing the meetings, expressed disappointment that the Government had not continued the policy of reducing license fees and making up the difference in gasoline tax.

Mr. Robertson expressed the belief, however, that, generally speaking the method of taxation according to the number of cylinders, appeared to be a more reasonable one than the present old method of computing horsepower.

NOTED ENGLISH MEMBER DEAD

Was Civil Lord of Admiralty on Different Occasions

London, Nov. 27—Rt. Hon. Ernest George Pretyman, former Conservative Civil Lord of the Admiralty, died today as the age of 77.

Mr. Pretyman's parliamentary career started when he entered the House of Commons as Conservative member for Woodbridge, Suffolk, in 1885. He first served as Civil Lord of the Admiralty from 1900 to 1905, and in 1903 he was Secretary of the Admiralty. He was Parliamentary of the Bolsena union, mun-Trade in 1915 and 1916. Then in 1916 he returned to his office of Civil Lord of the Admiralty holding it until 1919.

FRANCE TO ACCEPT NO REPARATION CUT

Paris, Nov. 27.—France will accept no cut in German reparations without a corresponding cut in war debts, Premier Laval said today, and she can not accept the proposal that Germany's private obligations be considered before reparations.

He took this stand in a speech defending his government's foreign policy in the chamber of deputies and deputies of the right, left and centre applauded.

ASKS PREMIER TO REPEAL TAX

Should Be Economy in all Public Bodies at Present Time

Toronto Ont., Nov. 27 (CP) — A large delegation from the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Commerce, headed by their president, A. N. Smith, of Cornwall, yesterday asked Premier Henry and the Ontario government to enact legislation including the repeal of the corporations tax act passed this year.

The resolution also spoke of the need of economy for all public bodies spending public money. It was contended a tax on capital was fundamentally unsound and a wider application of this principle in the province was deemed most inadvisable at this time. The speakers declared that the Ontario Corporation Tax was more severe than corresponding taxes in some other provinces, which would induce the tendency to withdraw investments from Ontario."

FIRE LOSS DECREASES

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 27.—Fire losses in Canada during the week ended November 25th, 1931, are estimated by the Monetary Times at $360,-599 as compared with $377,750 for the previous week and with $411,000 for the corresponding week of last year. From January 1930 to November 26, 1930 fire loans totalled $20,176,799 and from January 1, 1931 to November 25, 1931 they were $24,230,000.

WAGE DISPUTE HEARING OVER

Presentations of Case Are Concluded at Montreal

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—Concluding with expressions of mutual regard for each other, the disputants in the conference respecting the proposed 10 per cent wage reduction for railway employees wound up their presentations before the railway board yesterday. All evidence has now been placed in the hands of the board, comprising J. M. MacDonnell, Toronto, chairman; Hon. Pierre Gladu, K.C., Winnipeg, for the railways, and A. J. Glazebrook, head McGill University, Montreal, for the men. The commissioners now analyze the mass of material in their possession and will hold private conferences with the parties before they finally submitting their report and recommendation to Hon. Gideon Robertson, Dominion Minister of Labor.

SCREEN STAR AT CRISIS OF ILLNESS

Hollywood, Cal., Nov. 27 — Tom Mix was at the crisis today in the fight being made to save his life. His physicians said they thought that by nightfall they would be able to tell whether the famous star of the screen and circus would survive.

Mix, suffering from peritonitis which developed from a ruptured appendix, showed a slight improvement yesterday. His physician, Dr. R. N. Smith, however, was not optimistic.

BANKERS' STATEMENTS

Bank statements are looked upon with much confidence by the people who realize that the banker has to be conservative in his discussion of conditions and not say what may be interpreted as too optimistic or too pessimistic a view of any financial situation which may develop Hence the opinion expressed by these organizations is really the voice of the best current thought on a financial matter which comes under discussion. The reason for this is natural—unfair or authorized unwarranted statements would only react against the bank in the future so the dictum of the banks may accordingly be taken with a great deal of faith.

In banking president speaking this week talks of the political and economic changes in Great Britain, with special reference to the protective duty recently imposed, "a bold and courageous policy which we Canadians should appreciate." He notes the fact that British Dominions will have a preference of 100 per cent. over foreign countries under these duties and he suggests that Canadians show their appreciation by purchasing British goods while taking the fullest possible advantage of the preference extended. Looking farther afield he sees the financial leaders of the world in closer harmony and he expresses the hope, shared so universally, that some policy for the material reduction or abandonment of war debts will be agreed upon. Touching upon the slight improvement in commodity prices, he expresses the wise view that a slow improvement will be preferable to violent fluctuations. "He reminds us," says The Montreal Gazette, "as so many others have done, that depression has always been followed by recovery, and he stresses the importance of public confidence as a factor in bettering conditions. In this regard he points to the proven stability of the Canadian banking system which has stood up so well against depression and which has not witnessed a single failure in a decade." Quite properly, as the chief executive of an important banking institution, he makes some reference to the increasing weight of taxation and expresses the hope "that our Government expenditures, federal, provincial and municipal, will be considerably reduced." It is necessary, as he says, to get back to a saner basis of living, which involves a readjustment of expenditure and a simplified basis of administration. "This is sound advice, and to the extent in which it is accepted by public administrations, in all fields, the public will benefit, and the business of the country will be stimulated. Bankers, of course, understand this most clearly. Public men in office understand it, and they preach economy; the difficulty is now, as it has always been," comments The Gazette, "to convince them that example is better than precept."

FIRE CALAMITIES

News reports are all too full of lost of property and life through the use of coal oil for starting or bolstering up fires. This is the time of year when there is likely to be anxiety and haste about heating and consequent carelessness, which, however, gradually disappears as people with weeks and months of experience in living come to realize that there is nothing like extreme caution.

Yesterday accounts told a tale of the use of coal oil and resultant explosion in the loss of a home, two lives and injuries to other members of the household.

Coal oil and gasoline have their place and they fill their purposes well when they are used as they are intended to be used, not near fire, however.

At this season of the year people do not understand their stoves and furnaces as well as they do later, and too many words of caution cannot be given.

LINK IS BROKEN

The death yesterday in Toronto of Albert R. Thompson, a former member of the city council of Belleville, severs a link with the city council of about twenty years ago. Mr. Thompson was a member when Belleville began to take an important step forward in growth of population and his devotion to the duties of his office in those days about the end of the first decade of the first century was appreciated by the citizens and the council. It was with a great deal of regret that the city saw him depart at the call of his duties for another city, but Mr. Thompson always preserved an interest in this city where he had lived for so many years.

LOVE BEYOND WORDS
By Aline Michaelis

So many words that laugh and sing,
As gay as April hours;
So many words whose measures bring
The scent of vanished flowers;
But no sweet word I ever knew
Can tell the faith I have in you!

So many words like stars that shine
Across the night's abyss,
Abrim with promises divine,
Words tender as a kiss;
But not one word that I can say
To tell my hopes for you each day!

So many words with power to paint
Life's beauty, like a gem—
Words colorful, exotic, quaint
For fancy's diadem;
But not one word of all will do
To tell my boundless love for you!

MUSKELLUNGE FISHING is the greatest of fresh water fishing, although my friend from Corbyville argues that casting for bass with a plug is the finest sport in the world. Quinte waters are favorite haunts of the big game fish and while the fame of the many battles of the finny fighters with hook, line and sinkers, spread abroad, and more lunge fishermen are lured this way each year. The popular verdict is that Quinte lunge are bigger, more gamey and smarter than those of any other lunge territory.

DO YOU KNOW that there are twenty-five major industries in Belleville, including Corbyville and Point Anne, with normally over three thousand names on the payrolls? Do you know that nearly all are looking forward to a year of expansion, that if all goes well 1932 should be Belleville's biggest year industrially? So, if times should be a bit quiet in some lines now bright visions of future prosperity should take the sting out of slim pocketbooks. Andrew H. Brown tells Arthur Jones that prosperity is just round the corner, and when he locates that corner all will be well.

An English physician declared recently that when a girl is in love she digests her food better. Whereupon Lucio, Reed of the Manchester Guardian entreats some imaginary fair one to "Come live with me and be my love, and your digestion will improve." Again he bids her love him "for the uses affection has on gastric juices." Offering further inducements, he goes on:

If we can but our bargain strike,
Why, you can eat what'er you like.
Reckless as vermouth or puffins,
From hot roast pork to buttered muffins.
Agree with me and then 'tis true
Life can be filled with food and laughter,
Without a single qualm thereafter.
Then be my love and cast off care,
Attacking any bill of fare.
For now 'tis proved beyond all question
Love laughs at locksmiths—and indigestion!

NO NEED TO FILL POST

Hon. W. D. Ross has asked to be relieved of the duties of lieutenant-governor of Ontario for the rest of his term. Until his successor is appointed, Sir William Mulock, as chief justice, will fill the vice-regal role. The chief justices of all the provinces could do the work of all the lieutenant-governors at great saving to the taxpayers, and wisdom dictates that they do. What better time than the present to begin such economy?—London Advertiser.

EASY TO CRITICIZE

Every one knows that the League of Nations has a difficult task assignment on its hands in dealing with the Manchurian dispute. The attitude of reasonable observers is one of gratitude and relief that there exists such an international organization to consider the complicated issues, rather than of criticism because strong-arm methods are not employed by the League to impose its will upon the disputants. Undoubtedly, it is disappointing now that the international machinery has been put to a severe test to find that it is not effective enough to stop the quarrel. But the reason for that is well understood, at any rate, is comes with ill grace from American critics to chide the League on its "loss of prestige," as the great New York dailies are doing. It certainly has not added to that prestige that the United powerful United States has seen fit of jump in as political expediency dictated. The league has to do its best it can in trying circumstances, and has at least the satisfaction to feel ashamed of its performance. It has, at least, managed to exercise a restraining hand, if not the chailed fist, which is an intolerable rot to be seriously considered in present conditions.—Hamilton Spectator.

TWO BERRIES FOR ONE

When the United States Department of Agriculture turns its botanists or other researchers loose it does not expect them to come home in a week with a seedless apple in one hand and an eyeless potato in the other. But it is not surprised when a few years of experimentation result in some useful product to help the farmer and amaze the public. Dr. Frederick V. Coville, who has been retired this year from the Massachusetts Horticultural Society after his achievements in the plant world, is a botanist with an eye for the unusual. One of his most valuable discoveries is how to make the wild blueberry grow in a garden and like it.

Plants are buried in their distributions as people. Some have been domesticated with little trouble to man, while others have long resisted. Every wild-flower lover who has tried to make the delicate plant of the early Spring woods into his own yard knows how stubbornly they resist his kindness. There may be a hint in the experiments in the methods employed by Dr. Coville in "taming" the blueberry. In fact, he recommends cultivating it in sandy, arbutus, mountain laurel, azaleas and other botanical specimens through an identical procedure.

When blueberries grow in a state of nature as they do in Maine, the farmers gather them in harvests. About once in three years they bear heavily, and the land lies idle while other work consists of harvesting the crop. New Jersey and other farmers, wishing to grow blueberries for market, have treated them like other garden crops, by planting to get finer plants and bigger berries, they have cultivated the land and given the same kind of care, that they have given other small fruits. But the blueberry bushes responded to this treatment by giving, and the better the care the fuller they died.

Harsh treatment, it is said, thus would kill ordinary garden plants is just what the berry has to have. It is stimulated to rapid growth and the production of larger and bigger berries by a long, cold winter.—New York Times.

FIRE ALARM GIVEN BY BARKING DOG

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 27.—(CP)—Roused by the barking of his dog, Eugene Bartlett, Beverley township farmer, found a fire burn on his roof last night. A pig and 50 chickens perished, the large barn was totally destroyed with the season's crops and implements. The loss was estimated at close to $7,000. It was the fifteenth barn fire to occur in Wentworth county during the past six weeks.

Ma was pushing crooked things straight and straight things crooked and pop was smoking and thinking and Mrs. Hagerman and fellow members of the deer old class of 1900.

Whats all that? ma said, and pop said, Im going to be called on for a speech at the class reunion and I been thinking over the best opening line. This start of a speech is like big-thinking, the impression you make on them with your opening words, he said.

If its anything like the preceeding class reunion you went make any more impression on them than the man in Africa, for the simple reason that they'll all be in a most shameful condition and wont pay attention from one end of the reunion to the other, ma said, and pop said, Or maybe to better brake the ice with a more sociable topic, classmates and buddies, lend me your ears.

Land, me your flask would be more to the appropriate point, ma said. What a way to celebrate an educational event instead of reclining from the classic or discussing the modern trend of the present day as manifested from the back sword march of the passed, she said, and pop said, The main thing is, let their attention and made a fa' pel their attention and made a fa' impression the moment I open my mouth, thats what'll decide weather or not to liasen to what my pet to say.

If you want them all to keep to their feet giving you a cheers in one breth, just start in by telling them a recipe how to drink a ceeseless hours without geetting a bed ake, ma said, and pop said, Much as golfers. Ill start in by proposing a toast, Boys, here's to wood sheigh as we is, I would. Thanks for the up, he said.

And we wood it do more in his note book to be surr not to forget it.

We had a lesson about berds in school today, Miss Kitty telling us all about them. Birds are very gentle time by instinct instead of by scientific information, and always find their places to build their nests and different things saying. How do they do it, my intelligent question to ask on the subject I shall be glad to answer it.

Wich Sam Cross raised his hand, saying, If a berd was quick enough could it charm a snake before the snake had time to charm it first?

My goodness berds arent snake charmers, Miss Kitty said.

Meaning properly not, and Raymelin Levy said, Well are they rain charmers, except a berd charm a storm so he could eat it without having to chase it?

I asked for intelligent questions and I dont consider these in that catteggry, Miss Kitty said, and Thomas Magee raised his hand, saying, Can a mocking berd imitate a berth imitating a woman berd? Anybody considering that an intelligent question please raise their hand. Miss Kitty said.

With everybody in the class duly including Charles Magee, and Miss Kitty said, anybody else that wants he knows what an intelligent question is?

With them was, being me, saying Supposing there was a big flock of berds and one berd one started to fly north instead of south just for a lake, would all the rest follow it?

Of all things, we will now go on with nature study, Miss Kitty said.

Not saying weather my question was correct intelligent either or sensible she just dident know the answer.

Poet's Corner

AUTUMNAL RETROSPECT

Though in our frank autumnal retrospect
We grant this desperate world has locked on doom,
And ask the tangled in the world's swift loom,
Yet on this mellow old feast day
With which life's woof is fleckled,
The liberal thought and leaf bloom
And brilliant fruit that leaves, indeed, scant room
For somberness. Now blithely we
All lurking doubt, anxiety and grief
Forget the blights, the wormwood, the bitter sloes,
And with this weathered truth our souls are filled:
That plenty breeds unthrift—industrious clods
That times of trial develop power and poise.
To old installed springs our thirst is led.
The wondering craving heart, when it all is said,
Is simple, sane, enduring joys.

NEWFOUNDLAND TO ADOPT NEW SYSTEM

St. Johns Nfld., Nov. 27— Announcing that the Newfoundland government has retained the registration of J. B Keating, Deputy Minister of Finance, and installed J. H. Penson of the British treasury department to carry on the work under a new system, Premier Sir Richard Squires yesterday made the following statement:

"The government has decided to inaugurate a new and modern improved system of financial control, which will ensure greater efficiency and economy in the expenditure of public money. The present system which has existed ever since Newfoundland obtained responsible government, has been responsible for considerable waste of public funds.

HAPPENINGS IN ADJACENT COMMUNITIES

Madoc Junction

The "News Argus" correspondents gave the editor Mr. A. E. Doble a surprise party at his home on Tuesday evening in Stirling and presented him with an address and a handsome clock.

On Wednesday evening of last week a reception was held in the church for the boys and girls who had expressed their desire to become members during the two week services.

At the close of the service the pastor asked the members to form a circle and all sing "Blest Be the tie that binds", Mrs. Everett Truscott presided at the organ.

On Sunday afternoon the pastor preached a very impressive sermon from the text in Revelations "Behold I stand at the door and knock".

The November meeting of the W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Andrews on Thursday afternoon last week.

DRY PETITION IS CIRCULATED

W.C.T.U. Calls on Ontario Gov't to Cut Out "Colossal Waste"

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 27.—(CP)—Petitions asking the Ontario Provincial government to discontinue this colossal waste due to the traffic in alcoholic beverages, to the extent of your vested power, are being circulated for signature in all parts of the province, the Provincial Women's Christian Temperance Union announced today.

The organization's executive sub-committee in charge of the movement met here today and reported progress in this connection.

Mrs. J. A. Wallace of Hamilton, Ontario, is chairman of the sub-committee and Mrs. John Wright, of Brantford, vice-chairman.

The petition, which is addressed to Premier Henry, Provincial Premier, and the executive council of the province, declares the total expenditure for all government purposes during the last fiscal year was $57,949,353 while the expenditures for education during the same province was $54,943,822. It is contended the latter expenditure is "unquestionably a contributing cause to economic depression."

"You are under no obligation to marry me," she said.

There was a long silence. She was afraid to look at him, afraid to speak. She was trembling a little, half with anger and the tears were back very far away. She kept her eyes fixed steadily on the wet road in front of them, but all she saw was a gray sea and a big ship slowly disappearing over the horizon.

She had given up so much! Those were all she could remember. She quite forgot that the man beside her was entirely innocent of any share in her tragedy, and that he was taking upon himself not only the risk of a loveless marriage but the burden of her family as well.

They had turned in at the drive of the Moorland House now, and Jonathan said suddenly:

"I am more than willing to help your brother. I will start him in any business he may choose, or try to find him a good position abroad. My father is an influential man in his own way, and it should not be difficult. Hugh ought to be made to work; he is wasting his time."

She turned on him in passionate anger.

"And you? What about you? Why don't you work? Just because your father has money—"

"Doesn't that make the necessity lesser less?"

She was silent for a moment, then she said helplessly: "Hugh would hate to go abroad."

"Hugh would hate to do anything that interfered with his freedom and pleasure," Jonathan answered grimly. "But it is not my affair. I merely repeat that he cannot live with us after we are married."

"After if I insist?"

He met her angry gaze. "You will not insist," he said.

She felt her heartbeats quicken. "What do you mean? Talking to me like that?"

"I only mean," Jonathan said steadily, "that as I always intend to be quite honest with you, I want you to know that I understand perfectly why you consented to marry me. That I know it was not in the least because you wanted money for yourself, but because you wanted it for your brother."

Jonathan drove up to the front door, got out and offered his hand to Priscilla, but she ignored it.

"Thank you for bringing me home," she said formally.

She turned to go, but Jonathan said "I will come in if you don't mind. I want to speak to you."

She made no reply and he followed her into the library. The big shabby room was filled with shadows and a strange feeling of loneliness.

Priscilla remembered that it was here she had said good-by to Clive only a few days ago. Good-by! Why hardly that, for he had left her without a word of farewell.

She looked at Jonathan, big and awkward, standing against the mantelpiece, and for a moment she hated him passionately. It was not fair, it was not fair that she should be sacrificed. And yet, when Jonathan looked at her so she guessed what he thought of Hugh, she had been driven to defend him fiercely.

She knew that he had and pardon her fingers wearily though her hair. If only he would go and leave her to herself! He seemed to read her thoughts for he said suddenly:

"I'm not going to stay, and I hope you are not angry with me for what I said. It makes no difference to me what your reasons are for wishing to marry me. There is only one reason why I want to marry you—because I love you. I told you that I knew about your brother only because I cannot bear to keep anything from you. We must be quite honest with each other if we are to be happy."

She gave a little, pitiless laugh. "Happy!"

"Yes, happy," he said steadily. "You will be happy some day with me. I know all about your brother—perhaps as much as you know—and I admire you for standing by him, even though I know he isn't worth standing by. You're wasting your affection, my dear."

She stood silent, her face in shadow and he went on—"If only you could give me a little of the love that belongs to him—"

She looked up then. "I wonder you want to marry me if you know as much as you say you do. Perhaps you don't think I'm honest. Aren't you afraid that perhaps some day you'll find out that you've been wasting your affection on me?"

"Im not afraid of anything."

She broke down suddenly, covering her face with her hands. "I'm so ashamed!" she said brokenly. "And yet it was one of her boy's, she was thinking, but of the man she loved, and she was ashamed because she had told Jonathan there was nobody else in her heart.

He crossed the space between them with a swift movement and took her in his arms.

"I love you—I love you," he said. He tried to kiss her, but she turned her face away, fighting desperately to get free.

"Let me go—let me go! Oh, I'll hate you if you don't let me go."

She began to cry brokenheartedly, and he stood back at once, breathing heavily.

"It's all right. Don't cry. Don't cry, Priscilla."

His voice sounded almost angry, and with a great effort she tried to control herself.

"I'm sorry, but I'm upset. I'm upset. I'm sorry—"

He turned away from her and stood staring down into the heart of the fire, and Priscilla said with a sob.

"It would be so much better if you went away and never came back. I warned you that I didn't love you. How could I when we hardly know each other? I don't want to make you unhappy. It would be much better if you went away before it's too late."

"It's too late now."

"If you mean because of Hugh—" "I don't. I mean because of myself."

Then suddenly his hands were on her shoulders, hurting her with their grip. "I will never let you go, do you hear?" he said passionately. "No matter how much you hate me, it makes no difference. I will never let you go."

Then he took his hands from her shoulders and was gone before she could move or speak.

Priscilla stood where he was, trembling and trying to check her tears. Her nerves were on edge and she felt terrified that if once she really gave way, she would go on weeping and weeping until like Niobe she died of her grief.

Jonathan was not the man she had thought him. Into his heart had upon him with faint contempt, believing that she would be glad to be rid with him just as she liked, without protest from him. She had not dreamed that beneath his quiet, shy exterior there was so much force.

She knew now that she had a real man to deal with, not merely an adoring lover who would accept her will unquestioningly.

"I hate him—I hate him!" she told herself passionately, and yet she was fully aware that this afternoon he had forced her to respect him.

"Well!" said a voice from the shadows of the room. "I would never have given Curtis credit for being able to hand out the rough stuff like that."

Priscilla caught her breath with a stifled cry as her brother came from the big window recess, yawning and stretching his arms.

"You've been there—all the time! How could you?"

"My dear girl, what could I do? I suppose I was dozing when you came in, and when I woke up it was too late and too embarrassing to move. I wouldn't have missed it for worlds; it was as good as a play. Jonathan behaving like a caveman and you calling out, 'I hate you, I hate you!'"

Priscilla said in a low voice: "You will make me hate you, if you're not careful, Hugh."

He only laughed at that. "You needn't waste you heroics on me, my dear—it's too late. You're no clever one, you know, Priscilla. There's nothing like keeping the men off to bring them on, as the old saying goes. You'd better look out, or you'll be falling in love with him next."

"What did you hear?" Priscilla asked.

"What did I hear? Oh, nothing very interesting. Just heard him say, 'I love you, I love you' like the hero in a melodrama. Oh, yes by the way I did hear something about my own name. What did you mean by asking him if it was too late because of me?"

He came closer to her peering down into her face "Have you been telling him about the Dawson business?"

"Oh, Hugh, of course not. On my word of honour."

"Humph! He yawned again. "Well, I should keep it dark, for your own sake till you're safely married. After that it really matter many family skeletons come trooping out of the cupboard. The Governor tells me old Corbin's going to be pretty generous with money—marriage settlements, you know."

Priscilla did not answer. She felt miserably that this was the last straw—that Hugh should have been in the room all the time and have heard their conversation. Surely, surely he might have made his presence known? She didn't believe he had been asleep.

Hugh seemed struck by her silence, for he put a careless arm around her shoulders, drawing her to him.

"Cheer up, old girl. Clive us a kiss." But to his amazement she repulsed him.

"Oh, let me alone!"

He stared at her for a moment, then he shrugged his shoulders and turned away. "Very well, if you're so snappy."

He sauntered off and she heard him whistling in the hall as if he had not a care in the world.

Then a sudden revulsion of feeling came to Priscilla. If Hugh did care what would she? What was the use of mourning dead affection when she had gone past recall? She had burned her boats. The only thing left to her was to laugh and take what life offered.

Jonathan was rich. He would give her anything she wanted. She would take her to all the places she had longed to see and had never been able to see.

If she had to pay for her sacrifice well so should he. She could not have love, but she would have every thing else.

Take what the good gods offer, and marry on—

Somewhere she had read these words, and she would take them to herself for her heart seemed to be dead, weep no more; fight no more what nobody else in her heart.

INSTALMENT II

Priscilla ran upstairs when Jonathan left and turned on all the lights in her bedroom. Clive Weston's photograph smiled at her with a friendly feeling of derision she took it from its frame, tore it across and across, and thrust the pieces away at the back of a drawer.

She would finish with Clive and with love. It was true enough when cynics said it doesn't pay to have a heart.

She bathed her eyes and smoothed her hair. She colored her lips and powdered her face, peering at herself for a long time in the mirror. Then she smiled a little and whispered, "Good-by," before she turned away and went downstairs humming a snatch of song. Nothing mattered any more. She would just take what the good gods offered and march on.

She went straight to the telephone and called Jonathan. When he answered she laughed a little, as if something amused her.

"Oh, is that you? I only wanted to say I'm sorry I was so cross this afternoon."

He said something which was unintelligible, and she went on lightly: "I suppose you wouldn't like to take me out this evening? Up to town? I think I want cheering up."

"Why of course. Where?"

"We might have dinner somewhere and go to a show—that is, of course, if you'd care to. It's ages since I went to a theater."

It seemed to her that she could feel his amazement, though he only said again, "Why of course."

"Very well. Will you call for me? I'll be ready by seven. Au revoir. I'll wear my prettiest frock."

As she hung up the receiver she felt a little giddy and excited. She went straight to her father's room. He had not come downstairs at all that day, and was sitting by a fire reading.

"Well, darling!" She bent and kissed his forehead. "I'm going to be very gay. I'm going up to town with Jonathan."

The old man took off his glasses and peered at her anxiously. She looked bright and happy enough, and yet there was something in her manner, something he could not quite define what it was.

He caught her hand and held it. "My dear, are you sure you are quite happy? I've been thinking a great deal about you today, and it is the way I did hear something

GUMS OF ALL AGES FOUND UNDER SEATS

Underside of Theatre Seats Popular Place of Mouthsful

OTHER FINDS

Gum Softeners Used in Theatres to Clean up Seats

Gum-crunching Americans chew their favorite confection to the tune of annual expenditure in real money of one hundred and fourteen million dollars per year. Those are the figures old gentlemen who hover over adding machines down in Washington tell us and we can believe it or not.

Also they inform us that if you are an average American you can champ your jaws each click for a tenth between one hundred and forty-nine sticks of it every year; and pursuing these statistics, we still further find that after you have chewed all the gumminess out of the gum you either make a ball of it with your tongue and eject it out on the sidewalk where it will lie in sure to be dirtied by some one in a desperate hurry—did you ever see it fall?—to the complete annoyance, since it some place where the baby can get hold of it and make spit curls in his hair with—lend to a friend, or more often it is left on the seat, or generally under it, or often right on stage, tab and all, carpet in front of their places in either of the theatres we have in town.

How much of this chicle in various forms and base, but all gum, under the name of gum, which is the same and just as sticky in any language, is used by our rabid fans here in Canada is unknown as our eminent statisticians down in Ottawa have other things to do besides indulge in such trivial and fantastical obsessities, but Mr. Forban and Mr. Simms say that no less than a ton dump truck-load of the used gum in various stages of freshness and decay is scraped off the benches of the seats, shovelled off the carpets, pried off the railings and melted out of the cracks in the various objects-de-arte which adorn the various lobbies of the buildings, and dusted away by the small army of workers they annually employ on the job. It is the most stuck-up place in Canada, say the managers of their respective theatres. Special gum softeners by the gallon are used in these places of amusement; gum hangs in festoons and graceful strings from balustrade to the orchestra pit—and would if the menace were not steadily fought by these latest foes of the delicacy. "Bubble Gum" is cracked resoundingly by the small boys who save their pannies for this article just for the fiendish pleasure of smuggling it into the show and doing gymnastics with it as the critical love scene approaches the grand climax. It is rolled in balls and used as a missile in the manner of sniping some one in front on the head with. It is chewed carefully until the degree of gooeyness is reached and then it is steadily deposited in the carefully brushed hair of the little girl who sits in the next row in front of them—and going out, as I have seen little Bill with which may remain in devilishly smeared on goddess Aphrodite or whoever it is that dolls the gumdrop with wings outstretched at the entrances to these shins.

But don't harbor the idea that that is all the harried and harassed managers have to contend with. Neither is the gum-chewing department has also its gray hair provoking angle. Never is there any sense for these well-to-do workers for amusement. When it isn't gum it's gloves—or maybe it's both—and that they are called out of bed at night about as often as eaten dinner for. If you can imagine the various articles on display at the counter of a real backwoods department store then you have a pretty good idea of what may be found in the boxes of the lost and found at either of the theatres. Listen to this for an example of what the up-to-date movie house collects in the course of a few weeks by absent-minded patrons.

One wedding ring, one set of false teeth, gloves, books of all kinds, umbrellas, canes a whisky bottle half full, coats, hats, overshoes, pocket knives and purses, a club bag, cigarette cases, cigar lighters by the dozen, a pair of dice, keys, love letters, a pair of ice skates and boots, pocket knives, cameras, feminine apparel of all kinds—and that means all kinds—a pair of spectacles, half a set of false teeth, visit the manager of the Capitol, or the is holding them for the clothiers owner. Or if you are say an umbrella and can give Mr. Forban a pretty plausible which and whereas about being there one time or another and leaving it behind you, go and see him. But does not that rear do not disturb him after three o'clock in the morning by hundred shrillings of nocturnal telephone. Even the loss of a pair of dentures could be detected before that time in the morning. As to this matter of gloves they are the greatest lost in this list, but it seems that the only gloves the average fan can keep is hand one. Why? The managers will not commit themselves to any actual statement, but we were given a to that conclusion by the gentleman, escorting the lady to her seat in the house aids on her right hand side. It is said that the right and ancient habit of holding hands is still in vogue, and to this the hand glove when it is removed for this purpose is apt and never missed when in the more tender moments of some impassioned love scene as portrayed by some of the screen's great lovers, its hand aids considerably into another hand ahyly waiting?

Women's Interests in the Home

DANGEROUS REMEDY

By Beatrice Fairfax, an Author-ity on Problems of Love and Marriage.

"My younger sister has been a widow for over two months, and her grief, instead of being less, seems to have grown greater. That, to me seems unnatural, to say the least. I have tried the consolation of reminding her that the life of a very attractive woman is always before her. Far from helping, this seems to have made matters worse.

"Now the question is this. In trying over her husband's things, which she asked me to do, I have come upon positive proof of his infidelity. Would I be justified in showing this to her in the hope of setting her free of this wasting and useless grief?

Martha.

Your impulse is both amiable and generous. But I advise extreme caution in the use to such heroic measures. In the first place, are you sure that your sister's depression of grief is not due, in part at least, to some physical cause? She might even be ill and in this case her physician should be consulted.

If you are so fortunate as to have no old fashioned family doctor, you are hardly in a position to take with guide, philosopher and friend. There are not many cases in which you could determine from a professional consultation whether your sister is strong enough to stand a shock as big as the one you propose to give her.

And don't you think, dear Martha, that you are thinking of undertaking chances altogether unwarranted by the facts? You live in your hands "positive proof of the infidelity" of this deceased husband. You hope to cure your sister by proving that the man she loved was unworthy. You don't say exactly what the detailed charge is.

Can you be sure about his guilt? Is it right to constitute yourself both prosecutor and judge? Is it fair to the memory of one who is helpless and defend himself?

There are other rights involved, his family for instance.

To all of these questions I am forced to answer, No.

The matter is too delicate to warrant your interference.

It involves not only the rights of the living but the memory of the dead. Leave it alone.

As to your child, she is, as you say an attractive woman. You won't be the only one to tell her so. The very violence of her grief will cause it to the sooner to repent. She is the best judge of her own health. She is the person, in a healthy reaction will follow. You will be wise to wait for healing her talks up life anew. Give her a chance to come to these normal things in her own way.

The climax cases of the tonic effect of the remedy you have in mind is comic in Thackeray's "Vanity Fair." It introduces Amelia who has always seemed to be unworthy of all the love she has given her. In that case, years had passed. And obviously the widow was hugging her sorrow in a way that made her ridiculous. She was finally won her was a wonderfully good person. But it was a tame ending when compared with the clodel the Battle of Waterloo.

My 11-lb. Gain In Weight Makes Housework Go Eas'er

Says Mrs. E. Lamoureux of 222 Waller St., Ottawa

One short month ago, she was very below weight, and miserably run-down. But now she is the picture of health.

"Your tonic helped me to gain 11 pounds," says Mrs. Lamoureux, "I think that's wonderful. I took only 3 boxes, yet gained 11 pounds. My husband has taken only 2 boxes and feels much better already."

That's because the makers of McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets so skilfully blend cod liver oil from the purest cod fish with tonic vitalizing, weight-giving, health producing elements they add their wonderful sugar - coated tablets.

All of the cod liver's rich nourishment is in these sugar-coated tablets, not none of the fishy taste and smell. And they're very pleasant to take—easy to digest, and assimilate. Remember your money back if McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets don't increase your weight at least 5 pounds in 30 days. All druggists—60 tablets 60 cents.

Intelligent Obedience

By Constance Cameron

There have been many arguments for and against telling child why he should do this or that.

The older generation says, "Why obey because I say so," while the younger element tries to explain the reason for the request. But the big problem in the latter method arises when a situation arises in which the child must obey instantly for his own safety—when his stopping to ask "Why?" may mean life or death.

A young and very fair intelligent mother told me recently that the major in which she had built up her boy's willing understanding obedience yet an instant one when it was necessary.

From the time Bob was so tiny he couldn't believe he understood it, I've told him that I never asked him to do a thing unless there was a good reason for it. I told him, too, that when I could I would always explain that reason, but that when I told him to do something he must do it instantly and do it instantly and, that, if I couldn't explain at that time, I would later. I explained to him, "the mother went on, "that when I said 'Stop!' he was to stop right where he was, no matter what step might mean death in front of a passing automobile, and that I would explain all about it later."

And her care to have the child get the full meaning of obedience straight in his mind has not been a waste of time. At a friend's party the other day the child afterward strummed on the piano, making sounds that only a person totally unacquainted with music can make. The mother asked him to stop and look at a book instead. His eyes held a question, but he obeyed.

Later the mother said: "I happen to know that our hostess has a violent headache and your 'playing' wasn't helping it any." "Oh, I see," said the lad. "I didn't know that." And he was sure, he did! But the mother's reward for fairness and a painstaking education concerning obedience was the fact that quietly, and without sulking, the child did as he told him.

"Tell even your tiny child the reason for your requests when it is possible, but tell him, too, of those times which come when the reason cannot be given—when the situation must be withheld until it later.

Be fair, in that you do not make requests without having a reason. We are so very prone to tell children around when it could just as easily let them jog along without any interference.

If one mother has solved this problem, surely, you can, too.

HOW TO ACHIEVE

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D. Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

No man, woman, or child can hope to do unusual things in the world unless he or she writes with system. In fact, one can't accomplish anything worthwhile unless carefully planning each and every day.

Often we are slipshod and slovenly in our methods without even realizing it. We day dream; we jump from this to that; we work hastily and have to do it all over again; we fail to master even the essentials of our various jobs, and hence blunder all along the line.

Sit down some night and review the day's occurrences. Find out for yourself how much might have bettered that day's output. It is not exaggerating it to suppose that at least one third of your time was actually wasted.

Then, aside from the work itself, study your every motion in your job. How do you feel about it?

Are you satisfied to receive the Saturday pay envelope or are you genuinely interested in what you are doing? It be best to prepare for a change to do your work as though you are your own employer and you were working for yourself. Never mind whether you think you are not getting your just deserts or that you are working too hard for too little money.

For if you work with interest you will keep on the alert always. Way. And, if, after a real good try—better, yet, repeated attempts to change—you still find yourself discontented, then is the time for something wrong about your relation to your job. You have had better consider getting another.

Then watch your personality if you would achieve in life.

Don't wait for the proverbial "lucky break." Make yourself fitted and wanted. Make people seek you out. Develop yourself along qualities that they will find it an actual pleasure to do something for you.

Be careful also about being letters of the fellow who seems to have arrived while you are still struggling up the first rungs of success. Never mind what he has already done in comparison with our own achievements. What will the result be if you keep on as you have been doing? That is what counts. Some are slow in reaching the goal they have set for themselves. Often however, having once created the interest and enthusiasm for themselves, they shoot far ahead of the mark of their most ambitious friends.

And don't let the mere accumulation of money be your standard. Never measure your own achievements or those of anybody else by the amount of money accumulated.

Money can do a lot toward promoting happiness especially when it means power and the ability to surround oneself with refinement, beauty and the things we all deep down crave. Yet material riches cannot compensate for lack of love, for instance, or for loyalty, friendship, health and a host of other values that life has to offer.

Be sure in any case, to study yourself, and to know yourself thoroughly in every detail. Know what you are, what you might have been and what you want to be. Catalogue your mental and emotional assets as well as your liabilities.

To be honest with yourself and to keep faith with yourself is surely the rock foundation for every successful career.

The Beauty Box

By Helen Follett

Some of the darling old dodos believe that they can't improve on nature, that you should stay as it, making no effort toward taking on loveliness. Such a dodo, indeed, had a raspberry and vanilla ice cream complexion, and every inch figure conformed to standard measurements, if ankles and waists were all slender, eyes lustrous and distinctive, hands and wrist supple, hair luxuriant and ambrosial there wouldn't be this frenzied scramble after creams that we would find form before the doors of beauty shops. Every woman would be contented with her inheritance. But that doesn't happen to be the case. Not yet.

Creams, in its various forms, rebels against soap and water. The thin surface should be covered with oil instead. Although they are skins that don't like that either, powdered sugar and lemon juice sooth the burning epidermis, and hand lotions that contain orange, canth and diosgenes soon after application meet the needs of some cases. The old family, doc should be called in when trouble becomes obstinate. A wrong diet may be responsible.

Pimply pimples on the arms pack up and git if the arms are scrubbed vigorously with cleanser tiliated. Alcohol rubs are helpful too, and vanilla (economical oil is good) and friction with borte talcum powder. Per the special reading dates, the rough surface can be covered up by calcimining with a powder puff made from the down of the skin.

Cleansing and keeping the toes directed straight ahead. To turn them out, to be in the style, results in the muscles of legs and ankles, to deform them, and end in ankle knock knees. Have a good, strong footbed, which makes that you'd better chuck those spikes that have the train basket and buy shoes that will permit comfortable locomotion.

Don't believe the mirror. It exaggerates every defect of the complexion. Every reflection in the looking glass is seldom flattering.

$84,000,000 IS THREE-DAY TOTAL

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—A number of new and important applications under the Dominion Housing Service Loan were announced yesterday by the Life Insurance Company of Canada and Canada Steamship Lines, Limited.

FINANCIAL NEWS

MARKET STILL IS GOING ON

No Solidified Support Comes Into Market Today

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 27.—Special buyers of stocks found little incentive today to execute orders and in the absence of any solidified support the stock market continued its downward course from last Wednesday with little interruption.

Brightest news of the day was the London report that Belgian copper producers had decided to accept curtailment and were now ready to form the outline of total metal from African mines. Copper shares in consequence, were firm.

American Smelting ran up over two points in the early afternoon and held that gain as the market entered the fourth hour of trading. Greenecanada and Cerro de Pasco with up a point or more. Anaconda was fractionally higher. National Stocks were subjected to heaviest selling, with all activity centred again going to new low levels. Losses of 3 to 5 points were suffered in Union Pacific Atchison, New York Central Chicago Northwestern preferred and Southern Pacific. United States Steel broke through 55, for a loss of more than 2 points and American Can was 2 points lower. American Telephone Public Service Allied Chemical, American Can and American Tobacco were off 2 to 3 points. Auburn broke 6 points.

While concern was expressed in speculative quarters over Premier Laval's statement that France would steadfastly insist upon placing reparation payments above German private debts in any consideration of figure German debt operations leading Wall Street Bankers were not disturbed.

COPPER FIRM ON DULL MART

Golds Generally Weak on Standard Board, Friday

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 27. Copper shares were firm in a dull and declining market on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange in the forenoon today. Noon changes practically all took the form of losses with higher-priced golds subjected to light selling pressure.

Improvement in Copper prices in London and reports of developments with regard to curtailment measures were reflected in improved tone among Base Metals, though Rainbirs dipped 63 in odd lots and Chibougamau reacted a fraction. International Nickel managed to sell up 25 to 810 Noranda 20 at 815.25 and Sherritt Gordon was firm.

Teck-Hughes displayed resistance to selling and was up at 55.15 when taken, but Dome fell 30 to 8.70, Hollinger 10 to 5.50 and Granada, Eldorado Wright-Hargreaves and Vermilion 5 or 6 cents apiece. Among cheaper issues Moss Mt. Moffat-Malartic were slightly lower. Oils were a dull section with chemical research off another 15 to 19-60 and Ajax oil up a couple at $1.12.

WHEAT COMES BACK SLIGHTLY

Decline Due to Weak Cables and Lack of Export Trade

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 27 (CP)—The dizzy initial hour decline in wheat values due to weak cables and lack of export trade appeared to have been effectively checked at the mid session hour and prices came back slightly to show losses of 7-8 to three cents.

November at 56 1-2 was 2 7-8 down; December at 58 1-2, three cents lower; May at 61 showed a loss of 2 7-8 and July eased three cents to 61 1-2.

Overnight export figures were not available but it was believed the trade was negligible.

FOUND STERLING DOWN

NEW YORK, Nov. 27 (CP) — A sharp break in the pound sterling marked early trading today on local foreign exchanges. Cable transfers were quoted at $3.85 in United States funds for sterling which represented a decline of seven cents from Wednesday's closing quotation. The Canadian dollar eased 1/4 of one per cent. to 86% cents.

FOREIGN RATES

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Foreign exchange easy. Demand rates, Great Britain in dollars, others in cents Great Britain 3.84½, France 3.91 1.16, Italy 5.14½, Germany 23.78, the Canadian dollar at 13% per cent. discount.

BRIDGE AND ST. MICHAEL'S WIN

Girls' Basketball Games Won By Onesided scores

Both games, which were played at the Y.M.C.A. form the schedled fixtures of the Girls' Division of the Church Basketball League, resulted in rather onesided scores. In the early evening game the Bridge St. combine proved too great an obstacle for the St. Thomas girls, the former winning 32 to 12. The losers however were playing together for the first time and in addition to that had not even had a practice previous to last nights fixture. For the ten Ladies Archer Monteir was in form accounting for no less than eighteen of her teams points while A. Cruji led the scoring for the losers.

St. Thomas—A. Cruji, G. Sketcher, M. Holway, E. Potter, H. Tilley, P. Evans, P. Davis.

Bridge St.—E. Mountjoy, A. Gatley, M. MacLean, S. Stillman, B. Olbert, M. Redfern.

The St. Michael's girls had their eye on the hoop throughout their game with the Christ church representatives and as a result were dropping in baskets from all angles. Against a more experienced team the showing made by the losers was far from being to their discredit. All they require are a few hard practices to develop them into a strong team which will not always be on the small end of the score column in future games.

For the winners A. Ross and S. Melchior shared high scoring honors while E. Sager led in this department for the losers.

St. Michaels—P. Melchior, A. Ross, J. Cruji, S. Melchior, L. Melchior.

Christ Church—E. Sager, M. Hobson, H. Sarley, E. Blaker, V. Hobson.

The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem. Thanks are due those who willingly gave of their talent and substance and also to Mr. Carmichael who loaned his piano for the occasion.

LORD SANKEY MOVES BILL

Not to be Kept Together By Act of Parliament

LONDON, Nov. 26.— (Canadian Press Cable)—Lord Sankey, Lord Chancellor, today moved the second reading of the Statute of Westminster Bill in the House of Lords.

"If our Empire is to be maintained it will not be kept together by acts of parliament," he declared. Still less will it be kept together by acts of parliament which fetter and restrict the legislative powers of our fellow subjects in the Dominions. If we welcome these new ideas and ambitions, if we guide and direct them in their proper channels like streams of living water, they will refresh and revive our empire. But if we struct and dam them back, as surely will they overflow and cause nothing but damage and destruction. It is not so much a question of the good this bill will do if it is passed as the harm its rejection will certainly cause," he said.

To save the cost of municipal elections this year in Colchester, Harwich, the three political parties have agreed not to oppose the reelection of the present office holders.

For some time the boy has been boarding out of the school and authority for his removal to the Institute at Orillia has at length been received.

Why gamble on the chance of safety when real safety costs so little?

When you place a deed in an unlocked wooden drawer; an insurance policy in a pigeonhole; a will in some hiding-place; a bond in a cash box . . . you are gambling on a mere chance of safety.

You are gambling with theft, with fire, with carelessness, with short memories.

Defeat Leafs 3 to 2 Due to Wasnie's Brilliant Play

BRUINS STRONG

Hawks Suffer First Defeat of Season, Losing to Boston

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 27.—(By the Canadian Press)—Leg Canadiens of Montreal, professional hockey champions of the world, flashed to the front of the Canadian section of the National Hockey League last night, when they outlasted Toronto Maple Leafs by a 3-2 margin.

Their win, coupled with New York Americans 1-1 tie with Montreal Maroons, sent the flying Frenchmen into first position, one point in front of the Amerks and two in front of Sprague Cleghorn's band of warriors. The Chicago Black Hawks, who have conceded until last night have a look chalked against them following their 1-0 defeat at the hands of Boston Bruins.

Game Back Strong

Undaunted by the severe trouncing handed them by Boston Bruins early in the week, Canadiens took the ice last night, and after turning in one of the best-looked hockey season skated to their dressing rooms of the long end of a three to two score, with Wasnie, deadly shooting wingman of the flying Frenchmen, was a thorn in the Leafs side all night and was responsible for two of his teams three counters. Joliat, diminutive star of the winning legion, was the man which aided to Wasnie's pair gave the battering their mates. Both Toronto tallies came in the second period, when the Frenchmen were short handed and were credited to Conacher and Jackson, right and left wingers respectively of the Kid forward line, Howie Morenz drew the first penalty, when he tripped Montreal hockey season, when he cut "Red" Horner, stellar Toronto defenseman, over the eye with his stick, in the final stanza.

Baldied to Sie

Montreal Maroons served notice in New York last night they must be considered in the running for the Canadian group title, when they baffled Americans to a 1-1 all over time tie. Maroons got the edge late in the second frame, when Babe Siebert skated down centre ice flanked on the both sides by Wingman. As he reached the American defence, who agreed open to cover the wingmen and Seibert went through to fire a backhand shot into the cage behind Worters. A four man attack toward the close of the final session, when the Maroons were shoot-handed gave the Amerks a life, when Normie Himes slipped a neat pass over to Rabbit Mc-Veigh who easily beat Smith. Both teams had a wonderful opportunity in the overtime period to end the scoring tally, when Lionel Conacher went right through only to be upset by Worters.

Bruins Hit Stride

Boston Bruins have hit their stride. At least this is the news flashed when the club scored their second victory in three nights, following their early shooting in Montreal, Saturday, when they dropped a 1-0 decision to Canadiens the Bruins were not considered to be up to the mark this year. However, their sweeping victory over the Montreal clan in Tuesday's game and last night's 1-0 win over Chicago has changed the attitude of critics and now the Boston Club is considered a strong contender for the American section title. The Victory last night hoisted Bruins out of the cellar into third place, three points behind the League leading rangers. A neat combination play, which started at the Boston defence gave the Bruins their lone counter when George Owen, husky rear guard player, grabbed a puck and skated up centre ice. Spotting the Hawk secondaries he passed to Clapper, who drove a high shot into the corner of Gardiner's cage. A great forward attack of the Hawks, the greater part of the first session was unable to penetrate the strong Bruins rearguard and as a result only five shots were fired at Thompson during the final period.

Denmark plans to increase its income tax.

Current Sport

By The Observer

We are recipient of a letter from one signing himself, "An Every Night Kid-Stuff" asking "if the management of the local hockey teams would encourage our own local hockeyists instead of imported material, there would be more experienced players, and better pageanary at the Arena."

In this respect we heartily agree with "The every night kid-stuff" but, after the exhibition of hockey that some of the local players displayed at Wednesday night's game there is certainly room for improvement on their part.

As for encouraging local players we might add: that this is the very thing that we have advocated for past few weeks in this column, when referring to a juvenile city league for Belleville. But we are reminded of the winners of the O. H. A. are announced each spring, that if they don't take very close observation of the players they will notice that there are at least four or five imports on each winning club. We are not in favour of imports, but, if the situation calls for them, then what alternatives have the executive?

After Wednesday's game we saw one of the spectators that Carl Morgan was about the best local player to display his wares on the courch we are not including players who had the O.H.A. experience. Morgan with a little coaching should some day develop into a real good defence player.

One should not criticize the Cubs too much for their showing against the Marlboros on Wednesday night, as the latter ners have been practising for a month and have played a O.H.A. game on every week. The local kids held their own until they tired from the fast pace set by the from Dukes. We venture to say that the kids will make a far better showing one week from today, after they have a little more practice.

Alex Kaskaboli has been signed to meet Alex Kuzik of Fleming in the semi-final bout at the Arena next Monday night. Kaskaboli made a good many friends at his last appearance in Belleville and always assure the fans of a real battle no matter who he takes on.

In the opening "roughneck" bout of the evening Frankie Hart of Holland takes on Jack Herman of Toledo O., Hart was a great favorite when "grappling" with Nickon on November 16th here and most likely the fans will again be pulling for the boy who has made Canada his adopted country.

We notice that the sport promoters are going to try increase on the ice up in Toronto this week. It will be of the "decrease" nature and when the players don't "shudder" it should be twice as fast as the game in the summer.

There have been a few enquiries as to the possibility of the forming of a fancy and figure skating club in Belleville for the coming season. The interest has been so great that it is thought a meeting will be called in the near future to talk over the possibilities of such a club.

It is about time the Central Ontario Baseball League held their semi-annual meeting to see just how many teams intend operating next season. Which reminds us of the fact that "Shiner" Johnson will be eligible to play in Belleville next year, "Shiner" has made a home in Belleville at present.

It would be queer to see "Shiner" and "Feeney" Mills on the same team. They would not know how to take each other after so many years of keen competition.

Jake Kirain, who fought 75 rounds with John L. Sullivan, Richbury, Miss., is healthy and at weight—185 pounds—and enjoys his duties as a night watchman in a shipyard at Quincy, Mass. He's held the job sixteen years.

Tom Brown's Estate will be Distributed

Toronto, Nov. 27. (C—Creditor of the late Tom Brown, former mayor of Stratford who died last year in Mexico City, will share $31,-861 which will be distributed on December 15, according to Donald H. McCannell, of Toronto, trustee. This amount is 25 per cent of such claims as have been fully proved and allowed, which total $111,444. Creditors not finally disposed of amount to $81,459 and another appropriation at the rate of 25 per cent, amounting to $22,865 has been set aside for their benefit. Disallowed claims totalled $133,576.

A GOOD STORY ABOUT HELEN HICKS

Helen Hicks, former Canadian champion, and one of the world's foremost lady golfers, is of a rather nervous temperament. When she plays in a championship match, she very often starts "pressing", or trying too hard. In a recent match, when Helen was lining up her putt on the 18th, and was already to drive off, the gallery was amazed when someone yelled "oomp! oomp! Helen!" Miss Hicks lowered her club and looked at the gallery. Everyone expected that she would complain to the referee, but instead she laughed, stepped up to the ball and drove a beautiful drive straight down the fairway about 170 yards. It appears that Miss Hicks becomes tensed and needs something of this nature to relieve the pressure.

BUFFALO BISONS CLIMB TO TOP

Hockey in International is of a Sensational Nature

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 27 (CP) — A fighting band of puck-chasers from Buffalo stand at the top of the International league race today last night they stopped into London and handed the Tecumsehs a 3-1 reverse to score their second victory in two nights and march unmolested to the group leadership, four points in front of Detroit Olympics who dropped at 3-1 decision to Syracuse Stars. The other league fixture of the evening saw Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets score their initial victory of the campaign against the Cleveland Indians.

Showing only slight effects from their strenuous battle of the previous evening, when they were extended to the limit by the Windsor Bulldogs, last year's champions, the Bisons rallied in a goal in each of the opening periods and managed to withstand the Tecumseh's rush rush to take a 2-1 verdict. Lloyd Gross, speedy winger of the Bisons was responsible for both tallies in the opening minutes of the first and second stanzas. The second score was of rather fluky nature when a corner pass-out struck a Londoner's skate and rolled into the Tecumseh cage. The lone tally of the home club came with two seconds to play when a pass-out from behind the net resulted in Queenerville scoring.

Second Setback

Detroit Olympics received their second setback of the campaign when the Stars beat the Olympics 3-1. In the second period Bobby Battling on even terms for the first two frames of the game, netted the scoring early in the final period when Deacon Waite netted a neat one. Detroit Olympics entertained terms shortly after on a disputed goal scored by Johnny Sheehan. Palangio put the game in the bag for the Stars on an open net in the dying minutes of the game, when he received from close in.

Indians Defeated

Pilling in a flurry put the Indians before their opponents found their bearings, the Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets took their first step toward the Cleveland Indians and scored their first win of the 1931-32 campaign in the Smoky City last night. Playing scoreless hockey throughout the opening period the Jackets scored twice in the second stanza, when Homes and Fraser bagged goals on passes from Hallsley and Rodden respectively. They added to their lead late in the third when a Pressley shot from centre ice got the drying minutes of the game, when Fraser received from close in.

JAMES DUNN "BAD GIRL" STAR NEXT AT BELLE

"Bob Sister," "For drama of an exhilirating sort who may boast to recognize her own love affair until it had practically passed her by, which opens its local engagement at the Belle, Monday, for two days, matinee daily, it hailed as being one of the year's most important pictures and for several reasons.

First it marks the second screen appearance of James Dunn, who bounded into the film spotlight overnight in his history making screen debut in "Bad Girl."

Second, it introduces to movie-goers a new leading lady, twenty-one years old, gorgeously blonde, a favorite of the Broadway stage, Sally Eilers.

Third the picture is the first theatrical effort of Harvey Fergusson who has record breaking success, "Sandy Lane," with Janet Gaynor and Warner Baxter. After that picture Sandell was given his choice of all stories owned by Fox Films and from them he chose "Bob Sister."

The right of a girl to make use of a winning smile and personality a hint of possible affection to gain her ends in business competition, and yet the danger of this means of attaining success is one of the most discussed topics of the times, that Sandell considers one of the said in "Bob Sister." In it said to present both sides of the question in unfolding one of the most unusual and yet most sincere and touching romances yet recorded for the talking screen. The film is reported by those who have already seen it as exceeding "Bad Girl" in heart touching appeal and virtues.

The large cast supporting James Dunn and Lilian Tashman includes such celebrities as Minna Gombell, who played Edna, the girl friend in "Bad Girl." Molly O'Day and Howard Phillips in the other featured roles as well as George E. Stone, Sarah Padden, Bette Dillon, Neal Burns, Lee Lindsay, Harry Beresford, among others. Edwin Burke, who wrote the sparkling dialogue for "Bad Girl," adapted "Bob Sister" for the screen from Mildred Gilman's novel of the same name.

Germans who wish to leave their native land now have to pay a tax of $25 a head.

London is said to receive more than 250,000 visitors on every day in the year, most of them coming from the provincial areas.

At The Capitol

"THE SPIRIT OF NOTRE DAME" FOUNDED ON REAL INCIDENTS

The story of "The Spirit of Notre Dame" is ninety per cent fact, ten per cent fiction. That is one of the reasons why this football picture is not only true to life in its foot-ball, but more important still, it is the kind of picture that everyone will enjoy as the real thing.

The reason that "The Spirit of Notre Dame" which opens Saturday at the Capitol theatre got that way, is three-fold. In the first place it had to satisfy the college authorities both in story and in its finished form before it could be released. Second, it contained real football players and real characters who were working whole-heartedly and with devotion in their hearts to create a fitting memorial to Knute Rockne. Third one of the authors of the story worked for six weeks at Notre Dame, lived in its dormitories, ate in its mess halls, sat in its class rooms, paced the beautiful quad of its campus, trunk in its traditions from teachers, coaches and students.

When Dale Van Every returned to Universal City after his inspirational visit to Notre Dame, Lew Schayer whipped the story into form, combining the real incidents and elements that made it a real dramatization of a college institution.

There is a real portotype, for instance, of the character of Lew Ayres, the boy from Hockerville, who was the whole thing on the school team. This portotype was the recipient of a testimonial dinner and a great send-off in the station in it's say, Whoosiville and a slighted crowd from all parts of the next station, looked the watch, which had hitch-hiked to South and with enough money to see him through the first month of school, and with his kind and impolite to mention his name.

But the story of Buck O'Brien's furnishing interference for Jim Stewart in the film story is the real story of Marty Brill all last year. Only, he performed his marvelous blocking and interference for all of the other future Dame backs instead of for any one of them. When the Pennsylvania team came around, Rockne gave Marty's "home town" folks a treat by reversing the situation and permitting Brill to display his phenomenal ability as a ball carrier.

The incident where "Truck" McCall, lying dangerously ill in the hospital, asks the boys to score a touchdown for him, has two original incidents that are known to every Notre Dame student. The inspiration of the Monogram Chap, who in his last hours, said to Rock as the bed-side, "Beat the gang that when the going is tough, tough to go out there and get out for the Gipper". The other incident is when Rockne himself is dangerously ill in South Bend when the team was playing the Army and talked over the phone to the last team. Coach Tom Lieb transmitted his message to the team in Yankee Stadium.

The incident where she tells Rockne to autograph their football, while treated fictionally, is typical of Rockne's well-known tendency to stop anything in order to cater to the wishful fancy of youngsters. Rockne's autograph is probably held by more people than is the autograph of most film stars. The scene in the hospital where the team visits "Truck" McCall is also reminiscent of Rockne's devotion to "his boys" Elmer Layden used to say, "Why, he has only taught us football—he even advised us in love."

"The Spirit of Notre Dame" opens at the Capitol Theatre on Saturday at 10 a.m. when there will be a special matinee for the children. Free football helmets will be given to each child and the usual charge of ten cents admission will be made.

The run of this sensational picture will be Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

LONELY WIVES

LEADS TO THE "BERRIES"

Large Crowd At The Capitol

Crowds thronged the Capitol last night to see "Lonely Wives", one of the funniest domestic comedies of the season.

The story of an otherwise brilliant lawyer who is normal until 6 o'clock at night, after which he seems to lose responsibility for his actions, particularly where beautiful women are concerned, Mr. Hardy developed in "Lonely Wives". It happens that he is married and his mother-in-law is due to be considered a guest especially after eight o'clock and attempts to do so when she is absent.

In order to elude the watchful oldduvager on an evening when the eight o'clock bell rings, Mr. the barrister employs a vaudeville impersonator. This trouper is so clever that he impersonates the lawyer sufficiently well to deceive the unsuspecting mother-in-law. At the time, of course, the wife is away.

However, as complications develop, the wife returns to discover the startled impersonator in her husband's dressing gown, drinking coffee and smoking cigars, considering to avoid her husband's mother-in-law. Then comes the under endeavor to bring husband and wife together, the former's chance to locks the wife and impersonator to escape in the confusion.

The risque situation is alleviated, however, by the fact that the ultimost confusion, naturally, but eventually, the wife convinces him that she recognized the impersonator all along. "As a matter of fact, she had known him, the butler had locked the door, leaving the worried vaudevillian much happier to finallyitout

The knowledge that all would be straightened out when the husband came home. She did it, of course to force her small male of darkling o'clock habits, which for so long had left her in the category of lonely wives.

There are various complications rich with humor and spiced with risque dialogue and situations. Edward Everett Horton, Esther Ralston, Laura La Plante and Phillips Holmes are featured in the cast.

"Lonely Wives" plus comedy and screen snapshots ends tonight.

PICTURES ARE BEING MADE AT TRENTON

Short Subjects Use Even Some Local Talent

COUNTRY IDEAL

Trenton, Nov. 27 (Special)—Mr. H. Strong, local contractor is building a new store, and has granted part for the Shell Gas Co., as their station just at the town limits on the Belleville highway. This will make a very attractive addition to the station.

Mr. Mark Tripp, local merchant paid a business trip to Toronto yesterday.

The relief work is started and is going ahead at a great pace under the able supervision of Mr. Hilliard. Mr. Hardy is also being laid along Spring St., Dufferin Ave., and Bridge St. About 100 men are employed at this work at present.

The film industry has not died out in Canada, a fact to be studied in Trenton soon revealed the fact that they are still making pictures here. Mr. James Rodwell of London England, is making some very interesting local pictures. Mr. Rodwell is an actor of some note having played in many productions such as Hell's Angels. While in Hollywood he met with a leading actor so is quite familiar with the work at hand. The Government is assisting him as much as possible to further this work in Canada. Mr. Jack Anderson reporter is certainly getting in some nice work.

They have just recently finished a short subject, taking some of the local talent such as Mr. George Labrash, Mr. Bill Williams and Mr. Jack Anderson. Some of the shots called for the use of a railway station, which Mr. Ellis courteously assisted. A complete booklet will be filled in later.

Mr. Rodwell states that the country around here is ideal for such work, being so diversified, and the people so co-operative. Pictures here for sometime to come.

The Trenton Intermediate team in the town hall last evening. A list of officers are as follows, Pres. E. A. Simmons, Vice Pres. H. D. Graham, Sec. Treas. O. M. Newton. Mr. Mark Tripp, Chairman of the Membership Committee. Mr. Fred Wrigley, Chairman of the Civic Committee, Mr. E. L. Fraser, Chairman of the Welfare Committee, Mr. W. W. Miller, Chairman of the Industrial Committee, Mr. H. Jarret, Chairman of the Publicity Committee and Mr. Thos. Allore, Chairman of The Sports Committee.

The subject of decorating the town for the Christmas Holidays was discussed; it was decided to accept Trenton's offer to bring the business section also part of Front St. They also co-operating with the other service Committees in having a large tree put up for the kiddies at the Post Office. The Bylaws of the Chamber and other matters of interest were discussed.

Last evening a very interesting lecture was given at the Baptist Church on Missions. Three missionaries stopped here enroute to Africa. They will go to Angola via the steamer Antonia leaving Montreal Thurs. Dec. 3rd. They go to Liberia in West Africa. Arriving there sometime in January. This is a black country, and a self governing country, being entirely ruled by the natives.

The missionaries that are going now are Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hancox and Miss Florence Stacey. They are doing some good mission work over there. Ordinarily it usually requires about 3 years to secure any converts but they will have 10 converts. They will be working among the Ovimbundu tribe and will have to learn the dialect as English is not allowed to be taught in the native. Mr. and Mrs. Horace L. Davy, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Sharp and Miss Hall are already on the field and will welcome the new missionaries.

Angola is that part north of the equator and the excessive heat makes a furlough necessary for the missionaries. Although cannibalism is not practised among the Bassa tribe which is along the coast, it is practised in the interior among the other tribes.

COLLEGE GRAD AT HOSTELRY

Three Well-Educated Men Seek Shelter at New Home

Thursday night a man entered the new home for wanderers which is now located in the basement of the Veteran's Memorial Hall, and requested shelter for the night. The attendant noticed at once from the man's manner of speech that he was considerably above the regular run of hostelry visitors. All his clothes gave evidence of considerable wear but was apparent that he endeavored to keep them as presentable as possible. For some time during the evening there were few men in the shelter—only two other "guests", and they, too, were a little above the average run of the men, who nightly come to the shelter, although they were not in the same class with the "first transient mentioned. These three eventually became engaged in conversation and they talked of many things, including literature, the drama and music. The first man to call out of the lounge and in an unguarded moment, it came out that he had graduated from a leading university in Canada, but as to the cause of his present position in life, he said nothing. This morning he thanked the attendant for the accommodation he had received and started out, hoping, no doubt, that during the day he might round "the final corner", but as it is said good fortune often awaits one.

COURAGE

. . . These are inherent attributes of every true Canadian.

Too much disturbing gossip—too much unjustifiable gloom—are, perhaps unwittingly, being countenanced in Canada today.

Every patriotic Canadian should be working now for a greater Canada.

Let us have aggressive, constructive leadership.

Build up! Do not tear down!

Our industrial leaders are beginning to a realization of a brighter future.

Retailers report an increasing demand for goods.

The shrewd consumer is buying to advantage today because the purchasing power of the dollar is greater now than it has been at any previous time in the present generation.

Put the dollar to work!

It means employment for Canadian men and women.

NAVY LEAGUE SAYS CHARGES NOT REFUTED

Statement in Form of 17 Page Printed Letter

NEW BROADSIDE

New Charges Added to Those Already Made

Washington, D.C., Nov. 26 (CP)—The Navy League, returning to the assault on President Hoover's policy, now maintains the principal charges of its renowned "round robin" memorandum statement stand unrefuted.

A new broadside by the league, issued late yesterday flung back the answer of the presidential committee which found it guilty of "inaccuracies, false assertions and erroneous conclusions".

The statement was in the form of a 17-page printed letter addressed by Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the board, to the directors of the Navy League. It promised a later "rejoinder" to the committee which Mr. Hoover named to demonstrate "untruths and distortions of fact" he found in the original league attack. This was issued by William Howard Gardiner, president of the organization. Gardiner, supporter by a vote of confidence from his executive committee, has not made the apology which Mr. Hoover said he would expect.

Five specific untruths are ascribed in the pamphlet to the report of the Hoover Committee. Contrary to this report, said Howe, the United States is not now engaged in more naval building than any other power, its own figures show that France is far ahead; Japan did not agree to reduce its auxiliary fleet to a 7 to 5 ratio with the United States under the London treaty; the tables published in the Gardiner pamphlet were not obsolete as charged "a long defense of this point was made." The Japanese auxiliary fleet (cruisers, destroyers, etc.) was not bigger than the United States fleet at the time of the London conference, and finally the League did not give Japan's ratio at 13.1 to United States 10 —that was the figure given for Great Britain.

WHEAT QUOTA ANNOUNCED

Imports of Non-Essential Farm Products to Be Cut

LONDON, Nov. 27.— (Canadian Press Cable)—Sir John Gilmour, Minister of Agriculture, today announced in the House of Commons that the government had decided to apply the principle of a quota to home produced wheat of milling quality and to introduce legislation in time to make the scheme effective for next year's crop.

Sir John added the government had decided to introduce the bill to bring about a reduction of imports of certain non-essential agricultural products which, when added to the early maturity outside Great Britain anticipated the harvest of the home crops.

Rt. Hon. L.C.M.S. Amery, former Secretary of State for the Dominions, asked if the Government's scheme would cover imports of canned and bottled vegetables and fruits, and whether any decision had been reached to extend the cocoa principle to include empire wheat.

Sir John replied that Mr. Avery would have to wait for an answer until the introduction of the Bill.

SIX MISSING FROM TUG

Probably Drowned on Fishing Banks of Nova Scotia

HALIFAX, N.S., Nov. 27.—(By the Canadian Press)—The following named are missing from the schooner Edith and Elmer, manned and sunk last night off Shelburne by the steamer Cygnus Prince:

Bradford Warnock, Ernest Gillis, Joseph Rose, Gus Pelley, James Brothers and Youlie Lovance.

The list was forwarded by wireless from the Cygnus Prince due at Digby this afternoon. The prince has the following survivors aboard: Simon Theriault, Captain, Hazely Cacchick, engineer, Alex. Mack, believed to be the mate Paul Amitte Oscar Lovadee and Jim Powers.

JAPAN AND CANADA AGREE

(By Ferry Whiting, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)

TOKYO, Japan, Nov 14 (by mail) — Japan and Canada are in the happy relation that the good of neither country comes with those of the other. Hon. Herbert Marler, Canadian Minister to Japan, said in responding to a toast to himself and Mrs. Marler at a luncheon given in their honor by the Japan-Canada society.

We have several bankers with almost the same distance powers as Stalin of Russia.—Senator Cousins.

Stone-Pit Yields Bones and Century-Old Pistol

Winchester, Ont., Nov. 26.—(By deep and three feet square. It was the Canadian Press)—In a deep, stone-lined pit, a pile of human bones and an ancient pistol believed to be more than a century old, left there after a duel, is the farm of Mahlon Hess, near Winchester.

Removing a pile of stone, Hess found beneath it a hole seven feet completely walled in with stone. The bones were found in such a position that it is believed a body had been lowered into the shaft and the stones placed on it.

The ancient pistol was badly corroded but some of the parts after oil had been applied were movable

CARD COMPLETE FOR MONDAY

Semi-Windup and Prelim Bouts Will Be Classy

The complete card for next Monday's wrestling show at the Arena was announced today and it is certainly one which promises to provide a maximum of action and excitement. Backing the finish bout between Jack Kogut (Dandie) light heavyweight champion, and Arthur Mack, the former Evansville, Ind., football star, will be a semi-final and a preliminary in which men who have won high honors in wrestling's hall of fame will compete.

The semi-final will feature one of the sport's roughest exponents, the rugged Polish star, Alec. Kasabouk, who will be remembered for his sensational bout here against Kogut. Kasabouk will not have things his own way by any means for he will clash with Alec Kosid, of Finland, a powerful grappler, who is said to be as strong as Kasabouk and quite a proficient wrestler. Kosid has been in this country just a few years. He competed for a time as an amateur and since turning professional has shown rapid improvement. He is as cooperative as any of them and should give Kasabouk a warm reception, when the Pole starts his usual rough house style of action.

In the opening bout Frankie Hart, the "Flying Dutchman", will tackle a United States man of mighty in the person of Jack Herman St Johns, Ohio. Herman like Hart is a clean-cut athlete with plenty of speed at his disposal. As a matter of fact he has been given the nickname of the "Pittsburgh Flash" so the pair should provide one of the fastest bouts possible. Both have many friends over than their display should be well worth watching.

The program is better, if anything, than the last local show and the attendance promises to be a large one.

ARRESTED ON FRAUD CHARGE

Complaint States He Paid Sixty Dollars to Fortune Finder

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 27.—(By the Canadian Press)—Charged jointly with conspiracy to defraud, Mrs. McNaughton, barrister of Toronto and Constable Cecil Walker, King Township, were arrested last night outside the York County Police headquarters.

The complainant was Nelson Milne of Toronto who alleged Constable Walker accused him of discourtesy and that while his automobile was parked in King Township and ordered him to appear in County Court. Milne also alleges that when he did as ordered, McNaughton told him he could avoid publicity by paying $50 and costs. Milne stated he paid McNaughton $40 to cover a $50 fine and $5 costs.

FEARS WORLD WILL PERISH

PARIS, Nov. 26 (AP)—Unless the world disarms it will perish, Lord Cecil of Chelwood told the 1,000 delegates of the world peace organizations at the opening of their international conference on disarmament here today. The delegates represent seventeen countries.

Apartments for married students are provided in a new addition to Otterbin College.

About 63,507 vehicles, of which 9,963 were horse-drawn, passed Hyde Park Corner, London, in twelve hours of daylight, at the taking of its last traffic census.

HOBOES MEET TO ELECT CHIEF

King of Union is Going To Settle Down From Now on

CROOKSTON, Minn., Nov. 26. —The "King" of American Hoboes will abdicate his throne and all, because of a wee Canadian lassie.

The Hobo King is none other than Joseph Leib Cohen Segal Lazarowitz, who for four years has ruled with iron hand his chosen realm.

The monarch has called a meeting of the "Bonafide Hoboes Union of the United States of America" January 2 at Ormel Park, Chicago, for the purpose of relinquishing his crown and election of his successor.

Yes, there's a girl—she lives in Winnipeg," the ruler confided here yesterday as he stopped en route to Chicago from the Orient. "I'm going to settle down and work for her."

Police protection at the convention will be demanded, King Lazarowitz declared in answer to Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago, who warned a "hot" reception awaited hoboes.

"Mayor Cermak places hoboes in the same category as bums and tramps," the Monarch said. "They are not. We are going in order to be a remote and Constable Cecil Walker, King Township, were arrested last night outside the York County Police headquarters.

The complainant was Nelson Milne of Toronto who alleged Constable Walker accused him of discourtesy and that while his automobile was parked in King Township and ordered him to appear in County Court. Milne also alleges that when he did as ordered, McNaughton told him he could avoid publicity by paying $50 and costs. Milne stated he paid McNaughton $40 to cover a $50 fine and $5 costs.

JAPANESE ALARMED AT ATTITUDE OF STATES TO MANCHURIAN SITUATION

Asks if Secretary Stimson Has Studied Articles

HELPING CHINA

Cables Minister in States For Confirmation

TOKYO, Nov. 28 (AP)—Throughout an apparently misinterpretation of news dispatches from the United States regarding the position of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson on the Manchurian situation, Japanese alarm for the Japanese Foreign Office expressed alarm today at concessions the attitude of the United States toward the dispute in Manchuria.

"In one limit" and Foreign Office spokesman, "the government expects to make a public statement after referring to Mr. Stimson's statement as published to Ambassador Debuchi at Washington for confirmation."

"In view of the remarks attributed to him in dispatches from the United States, it is to be noted that if Mr. Stimson has studied Article 1, Clause 4, of the Kellogg-Briand treaty dealing particularly with the question of nonintercourse policy concerning the security of friendly states.

"By nonintervention, as described in dispatches, Mr. Stimson's action might be taken as an implication of Japan or China unduly in violation of the nine-rule pact.

"If the United States took a such stand as might be deduced from the assertions attributed to Mr. Stimson then it might easily be interpreted that Washington countenances the attacks of Chang Hsueh-Liang.

"The statement attributed to Mr. Stimson in the dispatches may, as we view it, result in a stiffening of China's attitude, paving the way withdrawal from the Chinchow region and may encourage Chang's adamant, stand.

Not Paraphrase

(The news from Washington misinterpreted by Japanese News Agency sources, was not a paraphrase of what secretary Stimson said. It was material which came from various sources, much of which previously had been published as statement of fact. News dispatches which did not themselves quote Mr. Stimson were erroneously published as direct quotations.)

An indication of the Japanese feeling is revealed in the following extracts from the cable's text:

"If a man in Mr. Stimson's position loses his head at such a critical moment in the affairs of Japan very grave results may develop. Mr. Stimson says the Japanese army in Manchuria has run amuck. This is considered a very bold statement indeed and it is to be regretted if he considered the definition of the word before using it.

"The statement is not only unfortunate in its manner of expression but even more so in its matter, as it contained most serious accusations against Japanese motives. Several of Mr. Stimson's outstanding assertions call for immediate denial.

"Mr. Stimson says Japan expressed regret after the Chinchow raid, such a thing would not happen were a Japanese army in China on a military advance in Manchuria. Japan never expressed regret for her action in Manchuria, nor can she ever promise that she will not act again in self defence.

"We hope Mr. Stimson realizes that this statement was based on alarming rumors and we trust that by this time he knows better.

The Japanese government today awaited Ambassador Debuchi at Washington requesting confirmation of press reports of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson's statement expressing concern over the Manchurian situation and it was said in government circles that if the reports are confirmed strong diplomatic representations will be made to the United States Government.

The statement was regarded here, it was said, as of "an intimidating nature," especially if the reports are correctly quoted in press dispatches, and as a "virtual violation of the Nine-Power Pact" because it might serve to encourage Chinese resistance regarding the evacuation of Chinchow and eventually result in a clash between the Chinese and Japanese forces there.

If the reports of the secretary's statement which was published here referred to Japanese Army as "running amuck" had been published or broadcast before orders were given to General Honjo to stop the advance on Chinchow, one general sent authority stated, the army would have refused to accept the order, it was thought that it would have continued the advance regardless of the government's wishes.

All government departments were sighted over the statement.

ELEVEN MEN ARE MISSING

Were Taking Fisherman to Isle Royale For Winter

Houghton, Mich., Nov. 28—Three coast guard crews, four men to each, and seven men, who left Grand Marais November 20 from Grand Harbor, Isle of Royale and have not been reported since, when the first coast guard and six fishermen left in a coast guard life boat. The coast guards were taking the fishermen to Isle Royale for the winter and should have returned to Grand Marais, Thursday evening.

The coast guard cutter Crawford of Two Harbors, Minn., the coast guard cutter Escanaba of Grand Harbor and the crew from the Portage Ship Canal left Duluth Saturday morning to search for the missing men.

It was planned to have the Crawford cut across the lake to Washington Harbor, the Portage crew to Washington Harbor, and the Eagle Harbor crew to Rock Harbor, Isle Royale.

The three crews will meet at the first favorable point and forge to plan further search if necessary.

RELIEF FUND WILL BENEFIT

Part of Money From Sale at Hwaiking Shop Given

From the sale of goods at the Hwaiking Shop, in charge of Mrs. Mowat, in Belleville by the Comrade Club of Tabernacle Church, the ministry will make a donation to the Relief Fund of the City and they have to be congratulated for their cooperation in this matter. The Hwaiking Shop was located in Front Street, but will be moved on Saturday to 29 East Bridge Street for next week.

The Hwaiking Shops Limited is the distributing agency for the products of the Hwaiking Industrial School in Shantung, China, and its being used to maintain missionary work of the United Church. The idea was originated by the wife of a missionary, Mrs. Mowat, who gathered the Chinese women in their district to carry on embroidery classes. Their work was purchased and sold at first in the Hwaiking Shops. At the display here will be found beautiful embroidered articles at reasonable prices. Residents have been more than delighted with the goods and are also glad that the shop will be continued for a time. The Hwaiking Shop is very grateful for the kindness of Mr. Doyle and Mr. Burrows for office room.

20 YEARS AS ARCHBISHOP

Former Rector of St. Michael's Consecrated Archbishop in 1911

Kingston, November 28, (Special to Intelligencer)—Monday, November 30, will mark the twenty-first anniversary of the consecration of His Excellency Michael Joseph Sirati D.D., as Archbishop of Kingston. He lacks but eight months of being fifty years a priest. The Venerable Archbishop, who resides in the Hotel Dieu Hospital is enjoying fairly good health. His Excellency was born at Lindsay, Ont., in 1863, and was educated at St. Michael's College, Toronto, and the Grand Seminary, Montreal.

HON. ROBERT WEIR'S HEALTH IMPROVES

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Condition of Hon. Robert Weir, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, who has been confined to his room in a local hotel for several days with a severe cold, is much improved, it was announced last night. He may leave for Ottawa today. The Interprovincial Agricultural Conference which was to have been held here this week, has been indefinitely postponed.

Many Suggestions for Remedying Conditions

Directors of Agricultural Organizations Give Suggestions

OPPOSE PROPOSAL

One Suggestion is to Establish Marketing Boards

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—Suggestions for the betterment of conditions in the Eastern and Western Canada laid before the conference of their supporters at the Canadian National Exhibition, Col. W. R. McGregor of Windsor, president of the chamber, and Hon. Duncan Marshall, Evans who was unanimously selected as chairman. The first report came from George H. Barr, K.C., representing the Ontario Co-operative Wheat Producers.

Opposition to Mr. Barr's proposal that co-operatives such as he had studied this year be created in Canada, was voiced within a few minutes by A. R. Darby, secretary of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Mr. Darby claimed that Denmark offered the most willing contrast to Canada's widely different agricultural and economical methods and Canada faced problems to be solved, particularly those of production which Denmark never encountered.

Suggestions that a marketing board should control sale and governing selling prices were made by W. A. Landreth, president of the Canadian Poultry Pool, who stated that decreased purchasing power had brought reductions of low prices on their products was a disastrous situation.

Karl B. Conger, president of the Eastern Canada Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association, on the other hand claimed that this was a "golden opportunity" to market immediately have to accept surpluses coming on the bare bill of exchange her surpluses at any price. He believed the proposed conference could solve most problems.

Provincial Minister Edward was briefly introduced by W. B. Somerset, chairman of that body, who suggested provincial boards for marketing boards. Every province had different sets of marketing problems; all were affected by Federal administration. Provincial officials could co-operate with each other and the Federal council in study markets and balance prices. R. J. Scott, president of the United Farmers of Ontario, supported Mr. Amos, adding that agriculture was wearied by present conditions.

TOM MIX SHOWS SOME IMPROVEMENT

Condition showing slight improvement during the past 24 hours, Tom Mix, famous cowboy movie star, is still in a dangerous condition today.

"All in all, Mr. Mix is improving, but it is a bit too early for me to feel optimistic," said Dr. R. N. Boyd, Los Angeles physician.

Mix was operated on Monday night for a ruptured stomach ulcer. Internists had developed and he was in a serious condition when the operation was performed, Dr. Smith said.

MUNICIPAL NOMINATIONS

Toronto, Nov. 28 — Acclamations were few and far between as civic nominations were held yesterday in many Ontario cities and towns. Ottawa returned its mayor, J. J. Allen, for another term. In Kingston, Mayor O. C. Wright was granted his acclamation.

But in other centres the office was contested. In some cases as many as seven were nominated for the position of chief magistrate. Brockville had seven in the running; Sault Ste. Marie the same number.

Nominations by cities and towns for mayor include the following:

Hamilton—Controller Morrison; Controller Sam Manson; Con. C. E. Riesley.

Kingston—Mayor O. C. Wright, acclaimed.

2 CANADIANS HOLD WINNER STAKE TICKETS

Mrs. Grant Longman, Toronto, and Mr. Ganely, Winnipeg, Holders

$125,000 EACH

Toronto Woman is Ignorant of Good Fortune

Dublin, Ireland, Nov. 28 (CP)—Two Canadians today were richer by approximately $125,000 as a result of Irish Derby victories by the Manchester November handicap.

Result of Irish Sweepstake prizes announced after the running of the race gave 30,000 pounds sterling to Mrs. Grant Longman (176 Dinnick Crescent, Toronto, Ont., and H. Ganely (147 Osborne Avenue, Winnipeg, Man.)

Other lucky tickets distributed over the world as follows: Eleven in England; four in Scotland; six in Ireland and one in South Africa.

Second prizes of 15,000 pounds sterling were won in the following countries: thirteen in England; two in South Africa, three in the United States and one in the Malay.

Of the third prizes, worth 10,500 pounds, ten were in England, three in Ireland, one in France, one in Shanghai, two in United States, one in Egypt and one in West Africa.

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—Unconscious "out of town" Toronto woman, Mrs. Grant Longman, pursues the even tenor of her way unaware that she is the winner of $125,000 through victory of Mouth Idler in the Manchester November handicap run today at Manchester, England. Mrs. Longman held a ticket on North Drift which finished unplaced.

"I'm so exciting I almost die," said Mrs. Leonard Davidge, sister of Mrs. Longman's good fortune, "and she doesn't know it. She doesn't knows she drew a horse, of course, but had no idea will she would win." Mrs. Longman has been staying with Mr. Davidge for expected back there tonight.

The ticket was bought for Mrs. Longman by her father who lives in London, England, and is now on his way here to get in touch with his daughter all day long. Telephone operators at Mrs. Longman likewise is in ignorance of his wife's good fortune as his business takes him out of the city.

It is the first time in a twenty-stake Mrs. Longman ever held. She is a keen racing enthusiast and came to Toronto after her father's arrival after the war.

Winnipeg, Nov. 28 (By The Canadian Press)...Sudden riches came to Harry Whitlegg fabulists today when North Drift galloped home first in the fifth of the Manchester November handicap run today at Manchester, England, and came to Toronto after her father-in-law had a half interest. To the possessor of the ticket will be nearly $125,000, each man will receive some $60,000.

GATHER FOR LAST SESSION

Grandhi Remarks He is Only Silent Pallbearer

London, Nov. 28 (AP)—Representatives of India and Great Britain gathered today for the final session of the Indian Round Table Conference, expected to last until Tuesday.

Almost every one of the three score delegates has been on a mission to speak. Mahatma Gandhi was one of the few exceptions.

"I'm only a silent pallbearer now," he said, "and I'll be quiet to death of the dead." He was alluding to the burial of Indian unity at the Round Table Conference as a "lifeless corpse."

Lord Sankey, Lord High Chancellor, presented reports by the Federal Structures Committee, and it was expected that Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald would make a final statement regarding the government's Indian policy on Saturday.

It was believed that he would announce the intention of sending a parliamentary committee of inquiry to India, with Lord Sankey as chairman, following a minature Round Table Conference in India.

3 NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

Car Struck By "Paper Special" at Level Crossing

Gravenhurst, Nov. 28—A level crossing accident here last night resulted in minor injuries to three persons, escape from death was described as miraculous. John Wylie, 63 year old Muskoka township resident, was driving near town with his son, Bernard, and daughter, Margaret. At a level crossing he failed to see the train coming, the "Paper Special," fast freight from the north. The train crashed into the car and carried it 300 yards down the track. The conductor applied the emergency brake, and extricated the three motorists from the wrecked car. Wylie sustained head cuts, which required seven stitches. Margaret was injured about the face and Bernard was unconscious for some time after the accident. All were treated by Dr. Fisher here.

Medicine Men Thank Sun God, 600 Escape Blizzard

Gallup, N.M., Nov. 27—Medicine men thanked the sun god today for the escape of 600 Navajo and Zuni tribesmen from the snowswept lower plateaus and prayed for the safety of any more still facing death by starvation and cold atop the Mesas of Malapais.

The sun yesterday melted the snow thinning on the lower country by a blizzard almost a week ago and permitted many of the tribesmen, marooned on their annual pinon nut hunting expedition, to return to the settlements. Deep drifts of the high country, however still held the secret of the fate of their brethren.

Nine persons, four of them children, are known to be dead. Hungry, wet and suffering from frozen toes, feet and hands, the stragglers from the army of nut pickers swarmed into the Pueblos.

The little village of Zuni was crowded, with Navajos last night. Hawikku who, ignoring tribal feeling, laid down with Zunis and Moencopie to keep again on warm Pueblo floors.

NORTH DRIFT WON HANDICAP

Forty-One Horses Ran Mile and Half on Rain Soaked Course

Manchester, England, Nov. 28 (CP) J. T. Downing's North Drift today won the Manchester November handicap. Mouth Idler was second and Major F. B. Sneyd's Yard third.

Forty-one horses ran the race which was run a mile and a half over a course soaked in rain for more than 24 hours.

North Drift, ridden by Dowdall, carried 104 pounds, while Spearmint with Sharoe up was handicapped at 91 pounds. Pard, ridden by Smith, carried 97 pounds.

NEWCOMERS FOR COUNCIL MAY BE MANY

Interest Keener Than Expected in Local Field

MONDAY IS DAY

Hours at Which Nominations Will Be Received For Offices

Interest in the approaching municipal election in this city will no doubt be apparent on Monday when nominations for the various civic offices will take place. From 10 to 11 a.m. Mayoralty candidates will be named and those proposed will have from 11 o'clock to noon to have present their views on municipal matters also to give an account of their stewardship. Between the hours of noon and one o'clock aldermanic candidates, public school trustees and hydro commissioners will be named. Prospects are that there will be a large field of aldermanic candidates and possibly several for the position of Hydro Commissioner. Mr. C. H. Hanna is the retiring commissioner this year and no doubt will seek re-election. From present indication there is no likelihood of any opposition to the retiring school trustees but Monday will tell. In this connection it may be stated that nominations for all of the various positions have until 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in which to file their declaration entitling their names to be placed on the ballot. A word to the wise in this regard should be sufficient. It is also essential for candidates to be aware of the fact that they cannot run for both civic and school offices, the property on which they qualify have not been paid."

2 YEAR TERM FOR ENGINEER

York Township Official Appeals Sentence of Court

TORONTO Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—D. C. Strathearn, engineer of York Township Engineer, was sentenced to two years imprisonment and fined $4,500. Peter Mohan, contractor, received a sentence of twelve months. Both men were sentenced Friday by Judge Coatsworth after a jury found conviction a week ago on charges of conspiracy and bribery.

Strathearn was sentenced to twelve months on a separate charge of conspiracy and fined $1,000 or twelve months imprisonment.

Both men immediately filed appeals and were granted bail, Strathearn to the amount of $15,000 and Mohan $20,000 pending the hearing of the appeals. The bail bonds were made on the ground there was no reasonable evidence upon which the jury could find them guilty; that the verdict was against the weight of certain evidence and that the trial Judge misdirected the jury.

Strathern also contends that the trial judge also erred in refusing to admit the two indictments against him.

ARM BROKEN IN COLLISION

Motorcycle and Car in Mixup on West Side

Hugh Gray of Hallowsy, Ont., is a patient in the general hospital, Belleville, as the result of injuries received Friday night, when the motor cycle which he was driving collided with a motorcar. The accident occurred about ten-thirty o'clock last night at the intersection of Bridge Street West and James Street. Mr. James Hudgins, R. R. 1, Deseronto, was driving a motor car west on Bridge Street and was about to turn into James street when Mr. Gray coming from the hill on the motor cycle collided with the front of his car.

Sergeant Booth and Constables Ingram and Taylor arrived at the scene in ambulance and upon examination Gray's left arm was found to be broken and his face slightly bruised.

Both headlight, a bracket and the radiator of the car were slightly damaged. The motor cycle also received slight injuries. Mr. Gray is twenty years old, will be confined to the hospital for only a short time.

Muncey, Ont., Nov. 28— One Oneida Indian is dead while a second lies at his home here in a critical condition as the result of what police describe as an "alky" cocktail alleged to have been imbibed at the Indian's home. Little hope is held for the recovery of the second man, Fred Nicholas while his companion, Robert Dockstader was buried in the reservation cemetery yesterday. The latter, a middle-aged man, died in agony after Alfred Jacobs, 24, of Toronto, was charged with the theft of a motorcar belonging to Mrs. Ethel Hall, Toronto. Jacobs was arrested by Detective Sergeant Ellis and Detective Sergeant Hall. He was remanded for one week.

Corporal Ted Weeks, of the Provincial police, who is conducting an investigation in the affair, alleges Dockstater and Nicholas obtained a quart of alcohol sold for use in anti-freeze and mixed it with water. The Indians chose to drink it. They apparently knew the difference between the two. Good prizes. Cards 8.30. Dancing 11 to 1. Refreshments, admission 25c. n28-1t

COL. WM. MOREHAM IS GUEST SPEAKER

For the week-end of November 28, 29, 30, Colonel Wm. Morehen is conducting special services here. The Colonel has just lately been retired from active service having put in somewhere over forty-five years as an officer. He became an officer in the very early days of the Salvation Army and in the first few years of his officership had many very exciting experiences. On the Sunday afternoon he will be giving some of his experiences in those early days. While on the Monday night in the citadel on Pinnacle Street at 8 p.m. he will be giving a special lecture entitled "Wonderful Trophies of Grace I Have Met." He has with him one of the converted officers of the Salvation Army and in the first few years of his officership had many very exciting experiences. While on the Monday night in the citadel on Pinnacle Street at 8 p.m. he will be giving a special lecture entitled "Wonderful Trophies of Grace I Have Met." He has with him one of the converted officers of the Salvation Army and in the first few years of his officership had many important positions. Just before his retirement he was Field Secretary for Canada, which includes being third in charge of the Salvation Army in Canada and just prior to that had charge of all the army's social work in Canada. He is a very able platform speaker and the coming week end services conducted by the Colonel should be full of interest and help.

BALES OF SILK FOUND

Provincial police are endeavoring to trace ownership of six bales of silk or rayon, found on the highway in the early hours of Friday morning by Ingram Lean, truck driver for a newspaper.

Lean found the bales on the Kingston highway when approaching Belleville with his load of morning newspapers. He reported the find to J. R. Baker, circuit station manager, and the provincial police were notified. They are uncertain as yet, no loss having been reported, whether the silk fell off a transport truck, or whether silk thieves lost part of some box-car loot while moving it to a hiding place.

Glasgow, Scotland, police are rounding up robbers masquerading as window cleaners.

SCRIBE AMAZED

The sounds who sit before varyously designed factory built and home made radio sets, twirl dials and turn dials far into the early hours of the morning, and wonder with joy when they do connect with California or Deadly Valley (Addison Sims lives) or some other place north or south of here, should take a tip from Mr. Reynolds who lives here on Charles Street. He doesn't bother with them much, they log in from England or some other place on the Pacific, of which sound very cold and very distant, but hums of Hamilton quite a distant as New Zealand. How's that for "distance"?

HANGING "GRANDI"

A neckle party, in which "Dino Grandi," Italy's Foreign Minister, was the principal actor, was staged by a crowd of 300 anti-Fascists in the Piazza Colonna, Rome, to express their displeasure with Mussolini's right-hand-man visiting the United States for discussion of international political problems. After effigy had been properly hanged, as shown, the body was taken to Union Square, home of the "anti-Fascisti" and burned.

GOOSENECK MAKES EXIT

Familiar Fountain From East Hill Dries Up

The old spring which for years used to babble out of the familiar "goose-neck" on the upper end of Front street, and which was later dignified by a marble fountain for the benefit of the thirsty citizen, has at last dried up, or, as the theory has been advanced, the course of this stream has been diverted into some other subterranean channel, underneath the fountain. Installed a few years ago was removed by the department of public works and will be stored until next summer when more satisfactory arrangements will be made for replacing it in its old transient travellers. It has been suggested that the fountain remain as such a fountain could be well placed at or near the hall some other convenient place. Older residents will still remember the days when it was there at one time.

Obituary

MRS. JOHN BARLYNE

After an illness of quite some time Mrs. John Barlyne, of Consecon died very suddenly at her home on Friday. Mrs. Barlyne has been a native of Consecon and district for a number of years and will be sadly missed by those who had come to know and respect her.

Besides her husband she leaves two sons and two daughters to mourn her loss. The funeral will take place on Sunday at 2 p.m. the Rev. Mr. Tavener of the Anglican Church conducting the service.

DON BRADMAN'S 226 IS CRICKET RECORD

Brisbane, Australia, Nov. 26 (CP cable) — Australia put themselves in a strong position in the cricket test match with South Africa today when they piled up 450 runs in their innings. South Africa have lost three wickets for 126 when play closed for the day. The highest of the Australian effort was Don Bradman's 226, which was the highest individual score ever made by an Australian against South Africa, beating Victor Trumper's 214 in 1911.

AGED EDUCATIONIST DIES AT CORNWALL

Cornwall, Ont., Nov. 28.—John Connolly, 75, prominent citizen of Cornwall public school, and known throughout Eastern Canada as an educationalist, is dead here, aged 75 years. He had been ill three weeks.

Mr. Connolly was born in Ireland and came to Canada in 1871. He taught school for a number of years at Clinton, Mode School, Goderich township, Listowel high school, Aurora high school and finally at Cornwall Model and public schools.

LOSS IS HEAVY

Ottawa, Ont., Nov 28 (CP) — Fire fires in Ottawa and district during the past twenty-four hours have caused property damage of heavy loss and injury to one fireman, while Mrs. J. Valois, blind for ten years was rescued from her apartment when the flames threatened its destruction.

O.B.C. NOTES

A recent visitor at Ontario Business College was Mr. J. A. Dickinson, barrister and solicitor, of Jamaica, British West Indies, who has been attending a few months in Canada. Mr. Dickinson's son was a student at O.B.C. this year, but has returned to Jamaica, where he conducts a business of his own. Mr. Dickinson stated that a client of his in Jamaica has decided to send his daughter to attend O.B.C. next spring.

Miss Florrye Robinson, who came from England to attend O.B.C., has completed her course and is on her way back across the Atlantic.

Messrs. James Reid and George Bradford of Sherbrooke, Que., two of last year's students, visited the College while on their holidays recently. Both these young men are in good business positions, to which they went directly from O.B.C.

There is a good representation of students in O.B.C. from Quebec (both English and French), the most recent arrivals being Mr. Jean Valles of East Broughton and his friend Mr. P. E. Doyon of Tring Junction.

The November issue of the Canadian Magazine has an interesting article on the successful work of a former O.B.C. boy, Mr. R. W. F. Hemsley, of the Trade Commissioner for the Maritime Provinces. Mr. Hemsley came to O.B.C. from Nova Scotia.

Mr. Adrien Duranleau, of Montreal, has been coming at intervals this year to Belleville to audit the books of a large local industry. Mr. Duranleau attended O.B.C. three years ago and is now employed by a leading firm of chartered accountants in Montreal. He is a son of Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine in the Dominion Government.

Misses Carol Parker, Doris Mathews, Isabel Hutchinson, Marjorie Danford, and Mr. George Blanton, who entered Ontario Business College recently, have secured responsible positions where they are making good use of the training receiving at the College.

COURT ACTION MAY FOLLOW

Peculiarly Drawn Will is Subject of Litigation

Ottawa, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP) — A contentious, interesting court proceedings, centres around the Will of Sheri Jehan, local jeweler, fatally shot in Bentley Hotel, Ottawa, before Tuesday night. Edelson was charged with the murder.

Mrs. Worth and Mr. Horwitz and two of her brothers-in-law are the principal beneficiaries, and a family controversy to take possession of Edelson's stores operated by Horwitz Limited through Edelson and threatened litigation Friday.

Mrs. Horwitz and her attorney journeyed to one of the stores yesterday, are alleged to have obtained important documents and then to have changed the locks on the doors. Later, two brothers of Horwitz, named executors, had the new locks removed and the old ones put back in place.

The imposition of similar duties upon cut flowers, plants in flower, bulbs and rose trees also are authorized. The act's effectiveness will be limited to one year.

CHARITABLE FIREMEN'S PLAN MATURES

Necessities Piled High at No. 2 Fire Hall

SWEETS TO COME

Distribution of Relief and Cheer For Christmas

Hundreds of bags of potatoes lined against the wall, scores of baskets of carrots, turnips, onions, beets, parsnips and other vegetables, and generous supply of canned fruits are stored in racks and crates in the old hose room of No. 2 fire hall. Candies, oranges, honey, nuts and other delicacies have come later to be also stored in this room foot deep with new eleven shirtings.

The distribution of these necessities and luxuries will be commenced at short notice by the Santa Claus Santa to crack his whip — Christmas Eve. It is felt by the firemen that the people from whom they have on file as being the most needy and worthy of the city will appreciate these things to a greater degree then than if they were to be given out haphazardly and indiscriminately at this particular time.

Some station has been levelled as the boys for their attitude in this year of hard times. Anyone who claim that it should be all given out to firemen's families are asked to consider that these donations from the firemen are purely philanthropic and that this supply is great once the money will also be exhausted, then matters will be viewed in a different light. Thanks, instead of criticism, should be given.

PASTORAL LIFE EVEN IN CITY

Rodents Gambol, Cow Moos, and Fowl Seen

Rural visitors who enter the city occasionally and who perhaps become a bit bewildered by the noise and bustle of this thriving city need not become homesick for the sights and sounds of their peaceful pastoral surroundings, as there is everything the heart could desire. That is in the way of fowl and the like.

Nightly, rabbits gambol and disport themselves on the boulevard surface of our main street. Near the corner of Front and Thomas Church the streets are also dotted with the sprightly little rodents who make their home in the lee of the winter moon, and raccoons have been heard gaily whistling in the fields of the boundary.

Last evening at five o'clock also was observed on the lower end of Front street near Bridge No. 1 a real Harvell Rock hen, but we are sorry to relate it was in that language commonly referred to by medical men as rigor mortis. In common parlance it was extremely dead. Further up on Pinnacle street was heard the plaintive moo of a sleek fat cow who was being gently driven at a plodding gait by a rosy-cheeked lad to some unknown destination. So pastoral surroundings abound in their horns, and roar perilously around and across "the four corners", with machine-gun-like sputterings, and rushing shoppers dash along the crowded streets, we can still point with pride to more peaceful scenes for our homesick visitors.

P. S.—The rigid fowl body was removed from the street by police constable Isaard at exactly ten minutes after eight last evening.

NOT MUCH CHANGE IN TEMPERATURE

There was very little difference in the temperatures of today and yesterday. The mercury registered 32 high and 13 low yesterday while today the mercury registered the same low figure but had risen to 36 at noon.

A decrease of more than 750,000 barrels of beer brewed in British Isles the first half of this year as compared with the same period of 1930, has just been reported by the British Exchequer.

Schools and colleges in Canada teach approximately one-quarter of the country's population annually.

Among the privileges now allowed to prisoners in certain British gaols are a weekly Movie, dancing class, animal pets, fitted gymnasium, solo cabinet talks by wireless and classes in shorthand and foreign languages.

ELECTRICIAN'S WIRES CROSS TO MAKE DAY

Fate Grins at Belleville Man in Toronto in Trip

TOIL AND TROUBLE

Reporter Summons Muse to Record Events of a Day

Trouble, so behaviorists and others engaged in the psychology of the mind tell us, comes to those who spin, and of other affairs pertaining to this serious business of living believe comes in threes.

If you drop a plate while you're drying it, then the chances are that two more plainers of the family china will also be dropped in a few days' time. If you're anxious to make his cuspids into the fleshy part of the flank of your fat lamb look out—for two more dogs—or possibly you'll fall down a well on your way back home. If your left rear tire blows out with a bang that scares you half to death while you are coming by some particularly fine scenery, then be prepared to change the left front and the rear tire right on up the line. After that, the records show, you'll have passed your third-degree and your troubles are over—for the time being, or until the next streak of luck that comes along.

If we can believe this statement, then a certain electrician of Belleville can reasonably expect a heavy increase of luck, a trouble free business for an indefinite period, and the possibility that old Lady Luck might smile on him for the next few days, at least. We have dealt in this statistary rolled up, spewed forth the days of hardship and again turned its cloud back so the silver lining could be again seen, all in one day, it was Friday, the 20th. And it happened like this:

Business had to be attended to in Toronto. Wiring jobs were pressing and no mere delegate could be depended on for the hone himself to go, which he did—and in the car. And while his business hovered over the board that big business generally hovers over, the rest of the necessary business was being carried out on the street below. The electrician in question emerged from the conference possibly with a fat contract in his pocket. Anyhow a beatific look illuminated his countenance. The world looked good and life a smile was on the face. The host changed; a scowl appeared, the eyes grew hard and ominous and a few curt words were hurled across to the four winds which blew gently up and down the corner. The shiny new fender of a shiny new car so unsuspicious parked at the curb in the building was now a crumpled piece of tin. It was bunked and tore and hung at the angle a drunken sailor wears his cap. And the subject of the disorderly mess was not in sight. So ends part one of this little drama of city life.

The curtain next rises on a pastoral scene somewhere near Whitby. Cows grazed peacefully amid the fresh green grass and basked in the sun. Even crumpled and torn fenders were forgotten in the beauty of the day. Suddenly—went the calmness sound of trouble—trouble in great gobs and chunks. Apparently coiling car rolled no farther. A man got out and poked his head among the greasy brake rods and other gadgets and then crawled on like under parts of motor vehicles. He got back out, rubbed his hands and with awkward exploratory hands he felt around the grease and dirt. He started the engine, wiped his brow, wished he had never been born and started for the nearest telephone—which meant a walk of one mile and the charge was a rapid sequence of irregular actions. The connection was secured, the car was dragged sqeakingly to the nearest garage, a tow charge was made, a bonus for a real quick job, two perspiring mechanics installed a new fender, a new headlight, a piece of waste and bid him Godspeed as he roared off into the night.

ACT 3

The shades of night were falling fast when through a Western village passed.

An automobile, with headlights bright, wended through the peaceful night.

A speed cop, zoomed on his sized, stop-watched this roaring, reckless speed and promptly took the road.

The rest is sad as we must relate, for a Belleville electrician, at half past eight, arrived before the judge.

The usual fine of ten was paid, and ye scribe's charge was that of the business soon was over.

However, as mentioned before, the man has now paid up his score to Lady Luck, the wench.

And though he had his tough time then, it seems that now he's once again back home—and safe.

But take you heed, when in you're sized you watch the road just ahead. And if you have to change a tire, then do it and you go rushing by. You'll get a ticket sure as fate, and then for sure at half-past eight you'll get your little bit more than the law says.

The common toad is worth its weight in gold for killing pests on the farm.

Embarrassing Moments

Heard On the Street

The other evening a sad-faced colored man stood in front of a local restaurant's window with his nose pressed pretty perhaps seen on a small boy's face as he stands in front of the entrance of the main circus tent and watches the crowds go in, while he is compelled through lack of funds to stand there and watch them. In this case the magnet was a plump roast chicken with all the trimmings on display in a platter. After a considerable interval he moved slowly away with many backward glances. All of which calls to mind an old fable the Chinese have handed down for centuries about this difference in color of the various races.

According to their version of varying colors, when The Maker first made man of clay he tried three times to get a perfect baking. The first one was overdone, which resulted in the black man. The second time the baking was underdone which resulted in the white man. But the third try resulted in a perfect baking and the beautiful tan, that the world has been into being and has been the superior of all, in the Maker's eyes, ever since.

ROUSING ELECTION AHEAD

On Monday election for Belleville will nominate candidates for various offices, those of mayor, aldermen, Hydro Commissioner, and school trustees.

It is confidently believed that the nominations will be large as there is more than usual interest in the annual elections. With the 1931 council likely to run in almost its entirety, with a mayoralty contest assured, with the promise of a number of new seats to add to the contest for council seats and with the balloting on Daylight Saving, a stirring election seems assured.

The field for all the offices ought to be large. Then the duty will not fall upon the citizens who stay in the field so much as upon the rank and file of voters.

Citizens when they have a large field of names from which to select members for office generally strike pretty true to value and elect the best men.

No one should desire to go into office under an acclamation. He should prefer a mandate for then the elected person has a mandate from the people. Without a mandate expressed at the polls council might be justified in believing that the people took no interest—surely a bad state of affairs, it is true.

City government next year will be onerous. No one expects duties to be light with the unemployment situation still hanging on for a time at least, and with taxes maintained at least at present levels. The sanest administrators in the city must be induced to represent the city in the council, in the Board of Education, and on the Hydro Commission.

It is to be hoped that enough citizens are so far interested in the next year's work of the city council and in the school board to offer themselves in large number as representatives for the year 1932.

Those who stand for office, even if they are defeated, deserve the gratitude of the electors, for it is these who make possible elections and who bring out the will of the people through the expression of the ballot. There is no other way in which the test can be made.

PUBLIC MEETINGS

This is the eleventh hour of the year and the time has come for a checking of the "accounts" of public men. The man who sits in any representative capacity should have this time in view, especially in a democratic state of society such as we enjoy. He should be pleased to submit to the public that he has discharged his duties faithfully—some public men of course trust to their years to speak for their record—but do not put in an appearance when public meetings are held for the discussion of municipal problems. While discussion of municipal affairs is not always as lavish of interest and as indicative of the people's opinion as they might be, some of the fault can no doubt be laid at the feet of those who do not put in an appearance to make the public meeting what it ought to be—a real survey of the year's work.

Both members of public bodies and electors should cooperate to make these meetings count where matters in dispute are ironed out, for these gatherings are the very backbone of democracy or the rule of the people. Where such meetings not held there would be a wave of indignation from the public attacking aldermen and councillors behind-the-corner methods, but because the meetings are open and expected thousands of citizens pass them by. Let this year make a change in this regard.

SIGNING CF NAMES

Writers of letters to this paper sometimes omit to sign their names either as evidence of good faith or for publication. Such letters cannot be published.

Many other writers use a nom de plume with their letters. While these communications when within proper bounds, are published, it is apparent that their views would bear much additional weight did they sign the name of the writers for publication. A letter signed "Pro Bono" Publico is not nearly as interesting to the public nor will it have the weight that a letter signed by "John Smith" will. The reason is obvious—there is no personality in the nom de plume, but when Mr. or Mrs. So-and-So is outspoken enough to sign a document, then importance is attached to the letter.

Writers airing their views through the press should keep this in mind if they count up—or either effort on the public.

The letter writer has a far greater importance upon the trend of thought than he may reasonably imagine and as said before, the writer who signs his or her name is more likely to attract the attention of those engaged in a public capacity. Letters signed by a pen-name receive scant attention at the hands of public men who like to know the critic with whom they have to deal. Beside they admire the person who is brave enough and so sure of the facts as to sign his or her name to a statement.

NOVEMBER NIGHT

BY Aline Michaelis

November night—the moon a polished disc
Of silver, swung against the empty sky;
A sudden wind on which the dead leaves frisk
And scamper up the pathway, whirling high

Into the crisp, sweet air, to fall at last
Upon dust of leaves of all November past.
Of all bright things those autumns once possessed.

November night—the dancing firelight flings
Its gleam along the polished oaken floor,
The desk, the chairs, the corner clock, that sings
In droning chant of hours that come no more.

The doors are barred against the wind and cold,
Within, gay hearts forget the year grows old.

OSHAWA WENT OVER THE TOP in their campaign to raise thirty thousand dollars for the unemployed relief fund, getting a few thousand extra for good measure. North Bay asked for $7,500 and twenty thousand dollars were subscribed in a campaign lasting less than two weeks. Brantford relief committee asked for $75,000 and received nearly one hundred thousand. Belleville relief committee asked for $10,000 and over $6,000 has been received up to date. There is as much money in Belleville as elsewhere, perhaps more, and the balance should be easy to raise. If all those who intend to give, give quickly, the campaign can be over before another week rolls around. Until the objective is reached the business men who are giving their time to the work of relief must carry on, and it would expedite matters a great deal if all intending subscribers send in their subscriptions at once. The Relief Finance Committee will have to function all winter passing on applications for relief, and seeking out deserving ones. The Relief Supplies Committee will also have to function all winter, also the Relief Employment Committee. The gentlemen comprising these committees are giving their time and money cheerfully to this good work and should receive every encouragement. No better way to help them than by attending to that matter you have unconsciously neglected, sending in your contribution.

JUST FOUR SHORT WEEKS until Christmas, and the spirit of Christmas is already in the air. Christmas shopping has begun and the forehanded ones are choosing gifts when the choosing is best, getting the first pick of what there is to be had. The warm weather drove Christmas out of the minds of many for the time, but the little touch of the Christmas spirit Santa Claus into the picture with a bounce, so shop early and avoid the rush which will begin soon and continue right up to the last moment of shopping time before Christmas.

HUMANE SOCIETY NEEDED

Editor Ontario Intelligencer.
Dear Sir—
In reply to your appeal to rescue the cats. What can one do? It is the positive duty of the Humane Society to have no Humane Society. Are there no philanthropists in the city child not a year's salary be subscribed and a humane man be found to pick up the poor starved creatures? There should be a law compelling owners of animals to destroy all unwanted cats or pups. To my mind it is a criminal offence to save kittens or pups to be given to children to keep and the meanest of deeds to drop the poor creatures for more tender-hearted people to take pity on. I have three pick-ups right now, but one cannot take them all. The suffering of animals is one of the mysteries of life. Man is more or less shapes his own destiny, but what have the poor animals done to merit such ill-fate.
Animal Lover.

WHY DO JEWISH CAPTURE PRIZES?

As noted in these columns yesterday, the high school girls win 70 per cent. of the scholarships awarded in the collegiate institutes and technical schools of this city last June. Fully one-half of the total value of these scholarships went to Jewish pupils. This is surely a remarkable showing in view of the fact that the Hebrew population is only 6,000 in a total of nearly 700,000. With only six and a half per cent. of the population, our Jewish young men and women captured forty per cent. of the prizes and honors offered them in this province. Nothing is more remarkable than the manner in which the Jews have found their way to the various avenues of endeavor, wherever they go. They have a passion and their capacity for sustained hard work. Their success should stimulate all Gentile parents to younger generation to emulate their example. In return for the education and opportunities offered them in Canada the Hebrews owe to this country a special obligation to serve their adopted country to the best of their abilities.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

THE LONDON DINNER

The quiet note struck by Premier Bennett at the dinner given in his honor last night by the High Commissioner is the note that should dominate the Imperial Conference. "The political issue in Canada," Mr. Bennett said Mr. Bennett. "We shall have to decide, and we shall have decided if we are to remain an Empire of free nations."

The hair-splitting arguments over relative political status, which monopolized the first precious time, are now ended. The day has arrived when statesmen can at last calm devote the whole time of Imperial representatives to the means of promoting Empire trade.

If Premier Bennett's keynote was of the greater Imperial importance, its contribution to the Conference Prime Minister was perhaps of keen er human interest to Canadians. In saying frankly that in the country's energy and initiative, Mr. MacDonald declared, "the people of Ontario Premier "has become one of Canada's great men." Candor is assurance that Mr. Ferguson is doing his work in London not only efficiently for Canada but acceptably to the Motherland.—Toronto Globe.

TRUCK AND FREIGHT

That railways must be regulated if it is not to wreck the railways and put the whole transportation system into chaos is evident when the scrap heap is carefully admitted. It is told of one C.P.R. locomotive in Toronto with Hamilton connections that it was hauled backwards from Hamilton to Toronto for 10 miles, because it was cheaper. And this is an exceptional case. It probably arises from the fact that the locomotive has to be returned from to Toronto but no return load. Trucks do not go back empty, but pick up a contract at the price they can get, and so long as the business concern; but it spells death to any kind of railway freight.

Then again there is the man who has a load of goods to haul to Toronto for a few hundred dollars and runs it himself. Rather than be idle he picks up what he can, and he can get. The net result is that there is less freight offering for the trains of railways to carry.

Railways and other railways have been a bit high in the past. They have attempted to charge what freight as unprofitable. They have also been slow to adopt improvements in carlois. They have thus helped to give the truckmen a foothold it will be hard to dislodge.

But after all we have to have the railways. They don't look after their own interests the country will have to do so. It is a task probably why the most distinguished Royal Commission at present sitting is preparing to go up and down and over the Dominion, examine systems of the country and tell the people what they must do to be saved.—Toronto Telegram.

Poet's Corner

A DEAD TERRIER.

Dear waif from Sirius with thy constant flame
Of loyalty and love who now art gone,
Approved a terrier void of taint or blame,
Licked with the poppies of oblivion!

Back to the star where all thy race is dated,
Felicity, and done in halcyon ease,
Chase phantom rats by summer meadows sated,
Yet vaguely scenting still an ancient trail.

Which hath not wholly faded from thy ken,
Challenging with tense ears and quivering tail
One long-forgot-for prototype from the world of men!—

If it should be, if there should meet once more,
What perfect-ecstasy, raptures, on that happy shore!

Cinema Star Dies from Bone Lodging in Throat

NEW YORK, N.Y., Nov. 28.—Little Lya De Putti, Hungary's contribution to a chastity to Canada of Germany, Great Britain and North America, died early today, at the age of 23 years old.

A chicken bone that lodged in her throat during November it was the indirect cause of her death. The immediate cause was pneumonia complicating the blood poisoning that followed the removal of the bone from

The picture that first turned the attention of this country to Lya De Putti was "Variety," a story of chastity, a tragic drama widely commended for its photographic excellence and the artistry of its performers, chiefly Miss De Putti and Emil Jannings. "The Mistress of the World" and "Manon Lescaut" were other productions in which she had notable work.

BACK BROKE IN TACKLE

SIDNEY, O., Nov. 27 (AP)—His back broken in a chastity football game between two teams of Sidney high school alumni, Ralph Baumann, 22, died today. The accident was played last Saturday. Bauman was hurt in making a tackle.

A CLEAN MOUTH

Did you ever get your mouth so it all around the gums, gloriously clean you can almost taste the freshness of it?

Not the momentary exhilaration following some druggy tooth-paste or antiseptic, but a mouth every part of which your tongue would brush your teeth! But it is far better to go without a tooth-brush than mix a gritty abrasive with your saliva. Every night you should brush your teeth with a tablespoon of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia and brush it back and forth in your mouth until it's gone. No water. Just the pure emulsion. Force it between the teeth with your tongue, and work Magnesia, Made in Canada.

Your teeth will stay white even if you smoke a lot. Your tongue will be pink and healthy-looking. People who don't know this use of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia just think their mouths are clean.

Dentists are urging this scientific protection from acid-mouth. And when you adopt the suggestion your dental lesions at your next visit! You may go three or four years without a single new cavity when you alkalinize your mouth in this manner and neutralize the acid that eats the enamel.

SASKATCHEWAN IN CASES GIVES DIRECT RELIEF

Federal Government Assists With Over 5 Millions

FARMERS HELPED

Many Acres in Province Have Suffered Severe Drought

Regina, Sask. (By The Canadian Press)—An elaborate programme of public works is under way in Saskatchewan to relieve the unemployment situation, and direct relief is being given to farmers in drought areas. The provincial government is now making a survey of the drought area in the southern part of the province where direct relief is being given to approximately 100,000 persons.

Federal approval of public works costing in the neighborhood of $5,- 396,000 has contributed immensely toward relief of unemployed throughout the province, the number 24,- 134 according to official registration figures. Other projects are being considered.

Chief attention is being directed to the aid of destitute farmers. Eighty-five rural municipalities and eight local improvement districts have had no crop for three years, in 72 municipalities and seven local improvement districts there has been no crop for two years and in 58 other municipalities crops were poor. The Dominion government is advancing loans for the purchase of fuel, seed and feed, many farmers having refused to accept aid on any other basis. It is estimated that more than $3,000,000 will be advanced for this purpose.

Most farmers in southern Saskatchewan own their own farms without encumbrances. They first petitioned the government for assistance through the Farm Loan Board as it was impossible to obtain mortgages. The government decided against this, however, and ruled that notes would be preferable to mortgages.

To help make the lot of the hapless farmer a mite easier, East and West joined hands. Five provinces have contributed a total of 100 carloads of fruit and vegetables to meet the needs of the people in the dried-out areas. Each car was distributed among 300 families.

Principal of the province's voluntary relief administration bodies, the Saskatchewan Relief Commission, operating solely in the drought areas, has apportioned to date relief amounting to $700,791 to 34,- 767 applicants. The Red Cross and various church organizations are also helping to provide effective relief.

To bona fide settlers the government has granted free big game permits conditional upon statutory declaration. It is expected many farmers will avail themselves of this privilege.

To provide work for unemployed highways expenditures of approximately $6,000,000, to be borne in part by the Dominion government have been undertaken by the province. Work is now proceeding on the Saskatchewan link of the Trans Canada highway from Maple Creek to the Alberta boundary; from Willowbrook to Rosetown; McIville to Killally; Waldron to Whitewood; Carlyle Lake North; Stoughton to Regina; south of Saskatoon and Swift Current; Weyburn south to the border; Chaplin north to Riverhurst. One of the principal highways crosses the province from east to west from Yorkton to Kindersley connecting with the Alberta road through Drumheller and Calgary.

Jobless in the province's eight cities, 120 towns and municipalities are being taken care of with a number of general improvement projects. Regina's expenditure includes $360,781 for development of Wascanna Lake which created a payroll of $94,730 and employed 3,064 men. The Alberta street memorial bridge, costing $250,000, is under construction and a large waterworks undertaking at Mound Springs to cost $420,000 is being considered. This would keep 1,000 or more of the city's jobless busy for three or four months. Not only will Regina labor be used in the digging and back filling of the long ten-mile trench from the springs to the city, but Regina labor is specified in the construction of pipe. Other projects included improvements at Boggy Creek, the municipal airport, installation of culverts and the laying of sidewalks and driveways.

Principal of the many undertakings commenced, at Saskatoon, to provide relief for unemployed was the erection of a $850,000 bridge across the South Saskatchewan river. Toward this the federal government contributed 50 per cent., the province approximately 25 per cent., and the city shouldered the remainder. Approval for this relief brought Saskatoon's total past the million-dollar mark. A three hundred thousand dollar expenditure on storm sewers, and a general programme of local improvements also aided the unemployed of the Hub city.

Most ambitious of Moose Jaw's schemes to provide unemployment relief work was the plan to pipe water from the Saskatoon river, at Riverhurst, to Caron to connect with the city's pipe-line. The original plan was to supply Moose Jaw and Regina with water. The project, which would cost $1,750,000 and provide employment in hundreds, awaits federal sanction. Considerable work has been made available to city and municipal unemployed in a programme of highway construction, park improvements, sewer installation, sidewalk and paving work.

Highway construction procured the principal source of relief to settlers in the northern part of the province. Relief camps were operated at Cypress Hills, Moose Mountain, Pish Lake, McGurk Lake Meadow Lake and Loon Lake. Present plans of the government provide for the operation of two camps at the latter two points, and four moveable camps at or near Hudson Bay Junction. The federal government also operated a camp at Prince Albert National Park, north of Prince Albert where some 350 men were employed.

Relief camps have been established for single men from urban centres in the dried-out portions of the province, the cost being shared equally by the province and the Dominion government. In the case of direct relief the Dominion government provides and municipality each contributes a third. Relief camps for single men are filled to capacity. Plans are under way to open further camps as the need arises.

With relief camps filled, many men are being placed on farms under the provincial government's bonus scheme. Under this plan provincial government pays the man $5.00 per month and to the farmer $10.00 per month. Prospects are that between 1,000 and 2,000 men will be placed with farmers under this arrangement.

RETIRE WITH SAME RANK AS SERVING

London (By The Canadian Press) —The Admiralty has resolved in the interest of economy that the system which has been pretty generally followed of promoting officers upon retirement, or afterwards shall be abolished. With certain exceptions officers will retire in the rank they held on the active list. The system does not exist in the Army or the Air Force, and while it may have fulfilled a useful purpose towards the Navy in some respects, it has involved certain anomalies, particularly when in time of war or emergency it has become necessary to recall retired officers to active service. The Board of Admiralty points out also that the holding of a very large proportion of retired officers of ranks in which they have rendered no service is open to the objection that it cannot fail to lower the prestige attached to such ranks.

Another order deals with the retirement of captains and other officers, whom it has been decided not to employ in a higher rank. The Board of Admiralty has decided that where the officers is not intended to be employed in the rank of rear admiral he should not be promoted to that rank, but after reaching the top of the list should be retired in captain's rank when the next vacancy for rear admiral occurs.

BURNS RELICS STILL DEMAND PRICE

London (By The Canadian Press) —Burns relics continue to command good prices at auction. At Sotheby's recently a letter written within three weeks of his death sold readily for $1500. A fragment of four lines in verse dashed off in reply to a woman correspondent realized $360, and $310 was paid for an old book that had once belonged to the poet and was presented by him to his friend, Mrs. Dunlop.

Three additional statues to his "Ode to Napoleon," which Byron wrote at the house of Murray, the publisher, were another important item. "I don't like them at all," wrote Byron, "and they had better be left out." The discarded verses in the poet's handwriting fetched $750.

There was a George Washington letter referring to the beginnings of the cotton industry in America which drew $475, four Wesley letters sold for $470, and a series of Coleridge letters reached the same figure. First editions of Sheridan's play brought $240, and $180 was given for the manuscript page of "The School for Scandal," at the end of which the dramatist had written, "Finis—Dank God."

17,000 OPERATED PLANES

London (By The Canadian Press) —Figures recently compiled by the Society of British Aircraft Constructors show there are more than 17,000 civil aeroplanes in operation throughout the world. Of these the greatest number are in service in the United States. The British Empire, taken as a unit, comes second in the list, France and her empire third and Germany fourth.

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

"You're not still angry with me?" said my ex-fiancé with that charming smile of his. "You're never angry. It's only—you're so different now. I hardly recognise you."

"I'm just this in the real me," she told him. "I'm not really a silly weepy person."

With a sudden awkward movement he got up and kissed her, and he it lay on his sleeve. He felt it move quickly as if in protest, and he looked up at her.

"You're not angry?"

She smiled. "No. I think I rather like it—as I'm a princess."

Then she looked away from him out of the window into the dark night, and it seemed to her that in once again she could see only a big ship disappearing over the horizon against a grey sky.

Jonathan was wise enough not to press the little advantage with Priscilla he had gained. He sat back again and began to talk on ordinary matters.

"I managed to get a box at the Palace, I tried several other theatres first but they had nothing left. It's a musical show, you know."

"That will suit me splendidly," Priscilla said gaily. She was not very fond of musical comedy, but tonight she felt it would be better than a serious play—there would be something to laugh at, no doubt.

"I thought we might have something to eat at the Savoy Grill afterwards," Jonathan suggested.

"Then we could go somewhere after the show and have supper. He looked at her with faint apology. "I suppose you won't believe me if I tell you that it is almost the first time I have taken a woman out to supper."

She laughed lightly. "Almost the first time! There have been others, then?"

He answered quite seriously. "I have taken my cousin to one or two plays. She stays with us sometimes. She's quite a nice girl. Quiet. You probably wouldn't care for her."

"She lives in the north," he explained. "We have not seen a great deal of her since—" He broke off, but Priscilla knew that he had been going to say— "since we grew rich."

"You must ask her down to stay," she told him.

It was a new thrill for Priscilla to drive up to the Savoy in the Corbet's handsome car; it was almost like stepping over the threshold of a new life. She was determined to make the most of it.

Of what to look back, and regret things? She tried only to think of all that lay in the future. With Jonathan's money she could go everywhere and see everything. Italy, Switzerland, Monte Carlo, Austria—all the places she had dreamed about and longed to visit.

She was amused because Jonathan seemed a little shy in his surroundings. She did not know that had he been free to choose he would have gone to some unpretentious Soho cafe where the waiters knew him, and he could drink ale out of a tankard.

His visits to London had never been very frequent, and always of a Bohemian nature, but he was quite willing to do anything and go to any place that Priscilla wished. It was happiness enough to see her opposite him and to know that some day soon she would be his wife.

It was still like a dream to him from which every day he dreaded to be awakened, and yet it was really enough—the big diamond he had given her flashed on her slender hand if could live on what that cost for a year," Hugh had grumbled when he first saw it) and when she met his eyes it was with such friendliness and understanding.

He knew she did not love him, but he was content—to wait. Some day she would be forced to return his love for her.

Priscilla, made him decide what they should eat. The waiter proved himself terribly helpful, managing to leave Jonathan with the conviction that he himself had made a personal acquaintance.

Jonathan was more successful with the wine—apparently he knew something about champagne.

"We must celebrate it's the first time we've dined together," he said.

The champagne helped Priscilla tremendously. She began to feel that life was not so disappointing after all and that there was a future for her even without Clifton Weston. She toasted Jonathan with bright eyes over the rim of the glass.

"Here's my love," she said lightly.

He flushed a little, but only answered gravely, "And all mine."

Priscilla looked around the crowded room. She almost wished she might see some one she knew, for the back of her mind was an absurd little childish pleasure in her new venture. She knew she looked well even though her dress was too expensive and she knew that there was something about Jonathan that compelled attention. He was not good looking, but he was a personality, a man who could set even a room without creating an impression.

"I thought it was you Priscilla," a voice said beside her and she raised startled eyes to the face of a man who had just left a table in a corner to come across to her.

"Why, Harry—"

She introduced Jonathan.

"And what are you doing in London?" she asked. "I thought you were up in Scotland killing poor little birds."

Harry Simmonds laughed. "You always hated me for that, didn't you? Well, as a matter of fact, I came down only this morning to see Weston off." There was a faintly unhappy flicker in his eyes. He talked chiefly to Priscilla.

"I know. She managed to smile. "I sent him a wire. I do hope he'll be lucky now, don't you?"

Simmonds shrugged his shoulders. He deserved to be. Life hasn't been too kind to him lately. He's one of the best."

There was a little silence. Priscilla was trying hard to think of something to say, something ordinary and natural, but she felt tongue-tied and almost stupid. She was painfully conscious of Jonathan's big person and his grave, watchful eyes.

It was Simmonds who broke the silence.

"Well, I'll go back to my table. I thought I must just come and say a word. You're looking well, Priscilla."

"I am very well, thank you." Then with an effort she forced herself to speak of her engagement. "I ought to be if I'm not", she said. "I have just taken the serious step of engaging myself to Mr. Corbie."

The most unobservant onlooker could not fail to have noticed the change in Simmonds' countenance. He seemed to stiffen a little and his eyes were unfriendly as he turned to Jonathan.

"Is that so? Congratulations, I'm sure."

There were a few more desultory remarks and then he moved away.

When they were alone again Jonathan asked casually, "Who was that chap? I didn't catch his name."

"Simmonds, Harry Simmonds. He was at Cambridge with Hugh."

"And the man he spoke of—Weston was it?"

INSTALMENT XIV

"Yes—another man who was with Mr. Simmonds and Hugh at Cambridge. He sailed today for East Africa—" and then, with the dreadful feeling that she could bear no further questioning, Priscilla rushed on— "he always wanted to go to East Africa—it must be wonderful. Men are so much luckier than woman aren't they? They can get about wherever they like."

Jonathan's steady eyes met hers. "I'll take you some day, I should like to go there myself."

Her cheeks were a little flushed and her eyes bright. She was pleased with the Calcutta sweep or get a lot of money I'll go around the world at once."

"You need not wait for that," he said.

"Need not——oh, of course!" She leaned back in her chair with the feeling that she had been behaving foolishly, talking like a man as if he were the merest acquaintance. "Sometimes I forget I'm engaged to you," she said almost defiantly.

"Even though just now you told Simmonds it was such a serious step?"

"That was only in fun."

He leaned his arms on the table and looked at her. "But it is serious Priscilla—to me anyhow. You've made me terribly happy for me during these last few days, and you must not let me down."

She tried to laugh. "You're getting tragic, and I'm sure we ought to go."

The coffee is just coming."

His sudden seriousness had gone as quickly as it had come, and Priscilla found herself wondering if those words had been just in her imagination and that he had never really spoken them.

"You must let me down."

Well, she had no intention of letting him down, and that was not a fair apprehension in her heart. "You've made yourself responsible for me."

It was as if with those words he She was glad when they were in the garden and could dance. A girl in the front row of the pit stirred in her seat. She was young and pretty and her face was vivid with happiness. There was a big gardenia beside her and she laughed and laughed together, obviously of every one else.

How she envied that girl, shabbily dressed as she was! She felt her eyes filling with tears as she glanced at Jonathan Corbie.

He was sitting well back in the box, screened from view of the house. He was leaning a little forward, his long hands folded loosely between his knees." Priscilla looked at those hands and wondered if perhaps the cousin he had told her about from the north had ever long to slip here into them, if perhaps she loved Jonathan.

Well, why not? Priscilla knew that he was worth loving that with him any woman could surely find a great peace and happiness—if there was anybody any woman she loved with her whole heart and soul.

Jonathan spoke suddenly—almost as if he could follow the trend of her thoughts.

"What is your friend Weston doing in East Africa?"

The unexpectedness of the question was a shock. She felt that the last color and for a moment she could find no answer. Then she managed to say:

"I don't know—some rubber company—I forget what." She opened the program. "He was more Hugh's friend than mine," she added, and then hated herself for her disloyalty.

The lights suddenly went down. The mercifully darkness, she leaned back in her chair and closed her eyes for a whole minute of her body relaxing.

Jonathan was not going to be so easy as she had believed. Beneath his quiet exterior there was a great deal of masterful strength. He was not the man to allow too much freedom to the woman he meant to marry.

She was sorry he knew about Hugh, and his money difficulties, although in a way it might be useful later. It did away with her guilty feeling that she was engaged to him under false pretenses. And if he was certain to know well, it was not her fault.

FROZEN NORTH ONLY A FABLE

Arctic Circle Enjoying a Season of Low Pressure

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 28 (CP)—Meteorological statistics today struck another blow at the fable of the "frozen north". While inhabitants of the warmer parts of Canada made hurried preparations for winter's initial onslaught, Eskimos and other residents of the Arctic doffed their parkas and fur-lined garments gratefully to enjoy the genial warmth created by an "area of low pressure" stretching across the northern rim of the continent.

Alaskan reports of temperature of 43 degrees above zero yesterday, the second highest level reached in the whole of the Dominion and that northern outpost is well over one hundred miles inside the Arctic Circle and a land and water journey of something like 3,000 miles from Edmonton. Situated on the Mackenzie River delta near the Arctic shore Aklavik and the surrounding territory often experiences comparatively mild weather before Christmas after which Winter sets in in typical northern fashion.

Reports from Churchill, Manitoba's port on Hudson's Bay, indicate that the bay is still clear of ice and boats are able to operate freely.

But in the pyholated sections of the south a different story was told by the temperature chart. From the Rockies to the Atlantic the mercury slid to freezing temperatures while snow was general. Probabilities indicate a continuance of the colder weather. In Ontario, where citizens had been lulled by a balmy almost summer-like temperature for weeks past, the decline was precipitated yesterday and during the night with heavy snow in most southerly districts today.

Wide Variations

John Patterson, director of the Dominion Meteorological office in Toronto, commenting on the warm wave, which envelops the north country, stated that while records of weather in the sub-Arctic do not stretch back many years, wide variations are often experienced in the late fall and early winter.

Interesting addenda on conditions in the Mackenzie River district were given today by Rt. Rev. J. H. Lucas, for many years Bishop of the Arctic diocese, which takes its name from the great river which flows through it. Bishop Lucas after years of active work in the far north."

"BEWARE OF A RED HEAD"

Fellow Citizens:

Not long ago it was all a church fair, and a beautiful young lady said that for fifty cents she would read my character if I would let her hold my hand. I told her "sure" I felt it was well worth the money, whether she read my character or not.

I don't deny that I enjoyed it, but I want to say that, as a way of reading a man's character, it is no good. My character may have been O.K. when she started but she longer she held my hand, the worse it got.

She said that the way she could tell was by looking at the lines. I never supposed that I had so many. She pointed out the heart line, and the life line, and about everything but the C.P.R. line and the C.P.R.

The young lady said I had had a lot of trouble, and I asked her if she was married, too. She also said that I was going to have a lot more trouble, but I told her that I was in the plumbing business, so that was no news to me.

She predicted that several dark men would cross my path, but I explained to her that I changed a tire last morning, and that was how those lines got that way. She told me to beware of the red-headed woman, I told her that I would —that I always was.

Then the seance broke up. I hadn't noticed that the young lady had red hair herself. I have a pretty good line in other ways, and can tell it didn't seem to do me much good after that. But there is something in this character reader by lines, after all—and if the lines have fallen for me in pleasant places it should be reflected in your home. Comforts and conveniences make the home a happy place to live in for husband, wife, First and foremost in home comforts comes a heating system which will give the right temperature at all time, not too warm, nor yet too cold. If your home heating system is not satisfactory it will pay you to see an expert heating engineer like Sam Dobbs who will tell you just what kind of a system will be best for your home, or suggest improvements to the one now in service. See Sam Dobbs for more comforts and an economical, satisfactory heating system for the home.

Comfortably yours,

SAM DOBBS

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 33.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Copyright, 1931, by Edgar Rice Burroughs, Inc. All rights reserved.

Down rivers, across mountains, climbing almost perpendicular crags, the expedition marched in quest of adventure and riches. On the twenty-fifth day, Tarzan, who headed the line of warriors, scrambled over the top of the last cliff. On the far side of the desolate valley beneath he saw a magnificent sight.

Lofty spires, turrets, minarets, and domes gleamed red and yellow in the sunlight. That night the camped before the towering city. Often Tarzan felt the sensation of unseen eyes upon him. Yet all was strangely silent. Once at midnight he was awakened by a shrill scream beyond the walls, high at first, then ending in a series of dismal moans.

It almost paralyzed the blacks with terror! They wanted to abandon the venture. But, encouraged by the morning's light they marched along the forbidding wall, finding a narrow opening. A flight of stairs, worn hollow by centuries of use, rose before them. Into this Tarzan made his way, turning his giant shoulders sideways. Behind him trailed his warriors.

Winding and twisting in a serpentine fashion, the path ended at last before a great temple. As Tarzan and his companions gazed in wonderment, they became aware of dim shadowy figures moving in the semi-darkness. Nothing tangible—only an uncanny suggestion of life. Yet life seemed out of place in this weird, dead city of the long-dead past.

NO HOPE FOR MISSING MEN

Survivors From Ilfated Tug Land at Digby

Digby, N.S., Nov. 28 (CP).— No hope for the six men missing from the schooner tug Lord Kelvin was held today by Captain Simon Theriault, who came ashore this morning with five others of the crew of Gloucester fishermen.

The schooner sank in two and a half minutes after she was ramped by the steamer Evangeline Prince which brought the survivors into this port today. A vain attempt was to launch either of the two dories aboard the Lord Kelvin. Simon, said Captain Theriault, and it was futile to hope that any of the missing might have been saved.

The survivors owed their salvation to floating wreckage. They say clung to this wreckage for three quarters of an hour before being picked up by the Gypsum Prince.

The men were searched for two hours before hope was abandoned, said Captain Theriault, and the Gypsum Prince, with a damaged bow, began limping for Digby.

Those believed drowned, were:

Ernest Gillin, Centreville, Digby County; Bradford Wagstaff, Glen Cove; Joseph Rose, Gloucester; Gus Peter, Gloucester; Jas. Brothers, East Boston; Youlie Lovance, Boston.

The survivors are:

Captain Simon Theriault, East Ferry, Digby County; Engineer Max Hy Goddick, White Cove, Digby County; Alex Theriault, Digby; Oscar Tivodal; Jim Powers.

Captain Theriault said the five remaining members of his crew were preparing today to leave for Yarmouth, Halifax and Boston and taking passage for Boston tonight.

GERMANS ARE DISAPPOINTED

Believe Laval's View Will Hinder World Re-Valuation

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(CP)—Premier Laval's speech before the French Chamber of Deputies, particularly his announcement that France could agree only to a provisional reparations arrangements, created considerable disappointment in German official circles today.

M. Laval's declaration that France could not allow Germany's payments to be made in excess over reparations was regarded as a serious obstacle to world economic recovery.

His address seemed to indicate, it was felt, that the diplomatic negotiations which have been taking place between France and Germany on this subject have not resulted in any improvement at views, and the prospect for the future was therefore regarded as gloomy.

IN MEMORIAM

McLEAN—In loving memory of a dear mother and wife, Mattie McLean, who departed this life, Nov. 29th, 1930.
A mother and a wife has gone to Heavenly Mansion fair
And from this sinful world of woe
Where all is pain and care.
Her cares and sufferings too are o'er,
She calmly sleeps tonight.

In early life she sought the Lord
And trusted in his word
So when the summons came to her
She leaded upon her God.
'Tis hard to break the tender cord
When love has bound the heart,
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the words
"We must part."
But we'll forever part.

Until her last long illness, her prospects were so bright,
Then Angel Death came lingering near
Though hidden from her sight.
But as pain took her form as cold in death she lay,
In that bright light early morn of morns,
She met her sons sweet day.
—Sadly missed by Husband and Family. n28-1i

PORT WILLIAM, Ont., Nov. 28.—After two days and two nights in the open without food and without a fire, Constable Bradley and Eddie Wiles were picked up on a railway track in a dazed condition Sunday. The men lost their way while hunting and had a narrow escape from death. Their matches became soaked in a swamp and their only food was a partridge they shot and devoured raw. Wet through and suffering from frost bites they wandered on until they heard the whistle of an engine and reached the railway where they walled till picked up.

The average tax on all motor vehicles in Britain is $35 a car, of which the Treasury takes half, the remainder going to the Road Fund.

No Advertisements In Saskatchewan

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 28. — "The Government of this province will not permit any further advertisements of hard liquor to appear in the press in Saskatchewan," Hon. Howard McConnell, K.C., Minister of Municipal Affairs, said before the annual convention of the Prohibition League here Thursday night.

Mr. McConnell said this action had not been taken previously, owing to the fact that Manitoba newspapers covering a large portion of eastern Saskatchewan carried such advertisements. Liquor advertisements were banned in Manitoba earlier in the year.

BRINGING UP FATHER, By George McManus

Women's Interests in the Home

Famous Designer Worth, Began Styles in Attic

Was English Lawyer Before Fashion Career

Paris, Nov. 28—If it had not been for a young English lawyer, Paris might never have become world's fashion capital and modern women might never have become the world's early Victorians. Deserting the stuffy atmosphere of the Jam with the intention of teaching women how to dress themselves beautifully like young men set the fash of fashion rolling from a tiny attic on the Rue de la Paix.

Charles Frederick Worth, whose name adorns one of the most world famous fashion houses in Paris was born at Bourne, Lincolnshire, in 1325. His father had been a lawyer and he was apprenticed to the same profession.

He was given a high stool towh on in a little drive to become Dickens. Dickens might have worked but when the budding milliner should have been pondering over law books he was pencilling designs for draperies and decorations for the family house.

Got His Chance

When his father died, his mother gave the boy the chance he wanted and he was sent as an apprentice to the drapery establishment of Swan and Edgar, in London. He was delighted because by now he gave him the chance to see and touch the fine fabrics and learn about them from the beginning.

Charles soon found himself with his ideas born too early for London, so he left the English firm and came to Paris where he met several changes and started a revolution in women's wear. Now his grandsons are carrying on his traditions.

Ex-lawyer Worth was the first dressmaker to see that those who made dresses should make the materials for them as well and that women should be considered according to their type, and not just one general type.

The gossip of his earlier patrons soon reached the ears of Empress Eugenie, who later became his most beautiful and faithful customer. Only once did they disagree and that was on the question of the crinolline. The Empress Eugenie designed by Worth opposed it as a monstrosity. The Empress Eugenie insisted—and won. She stands alone as the only woman before or since that time for whom the great man changed his iron clad rules.

Embroidered Bills

Other great ideas who received elaborate hand written bills for Worth, French and Empress Eugenie included Elizabeth of Austria, Margherita of Italy, Mme. de Metternich and many royalties and in the theatrical and operatic world.

Worth used the first live mannequins in Paris—the others all had been wooden—and she was such a triumph over the lanquorous figure that among the many who risked her hand in marriage, he himself was the lucky person. He was the first man to enter the field of feminine fashion moved into two rooms at number 7 Rue de la Paix, from which he never had moved. The only change in fact, is that today the Maison Worth occupies two buildings and employs a thousand workers. He and Charles Worth, is co-owner with Jacques, his brother, of the now world-famous establishment in the Rue de la Paix.

The famous Worth brothers of today made quick work of the answers to the question of their advice to women with no taste but money; with taste but no money; with neither one; and with both.

"We make the materials and the clothes and our mannequins show how they should be worn.

"People come to us for advice on dress from all parts. Queens and princesses obey our orders and elegant woman come from the four corners of the earth, from America and Argentine, Scotland to Scandinavia to be dressed by us.

"To be one of the Czars of the fashion of fashion has been trials and tribulations than the life of the most harassed politician. He is a dictator of fashion and yet he is a slave to the whim of womankind. Sometimes the Czar's heart is nearly broken when he sees women going into elegant flowing creations and, prompted by that terrible word fashion, adopting something skimpy and ridiculous."

BRITISH COURT ACE AND HIS BRIDE

Evidently H. W. "Bunny" Austin, England's outstanding tennis star, is an adept at courting as he is playing on the courts. Bunny recently acquired a wife with his experitness, and here the happy bridal pair are emerging from the Hampstead parish church, England, after the ceremony. Austin's charming bride is the former Phyllis Konstam, movie actress.

GIVE A PUFF to a coat sleeve and it is new. A smart one has several details including the sleeves which above the forearm are full and bordered epaulettes, a tiny peplum and buttons of the trailing silver fox collar. The material is black broadcloth.

The silver standard is very much in evidence in the mode world. At a smart reception one woman wore an extremely fitted, perfectly plain gown of silver cloth, with severely plain silver bracelets on the tight, long sleeves. There was a band of round turban of silver tissues.

The most interesting of all trends with the advent of a clever new device. This is a fine braided with rhinestones or sparkling colored stones, or rather, the braiding and a seal is it is attached to a thin wire that clings round the heel proper or the shoe.

Put on your apron if you wear a youthfully designed frock of taffeta. One smart model, of bright red taffeta, has an apron-like overskirt edged with a double row of ruffles, which ends on the left side with three clusters of red and black flowers.

Black does it matter if an evening wrap is long or only hiplength, so it is long. It is smart, fancy slipper is a full length wrap with a slight train in the back and a hiplength one trimmed with a bijou kolinsky collar. The full bicased bodice is in front with the sleeves. Equally smart is a three-quarter wrap of caramel colored velvet with a huge collar of beige fox and a curved border of the same fur.

COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES

with Castoria's gentle regulation

"The best way to cure colic," says a famous doctor, "is to prevent it."
And the best way to prevent it is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract regularly functioning.

But there's one thing to remember, however, that baby's delicate organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged.

That is the reason Castoria comes to a mother's aid. Castoria, you know, is made especially for the delicate needs of babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation which is absolutely harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

Children never fight Castoria. They like its taste and its relaxed comfort its gentle regulation brings.

For many years it has helped mothers through trying ordeals with colicky babies, with children suffering from digestive upsets, colds and other little ailments. Keep it on hand for your children. You can always find Castoria easily by the name Chas. H. Fletcher.

MYSTERY PLAY PRODUCED AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Ghostly Shadows, and Screams Thrill Large Audience

THE PLOT

First Venture of Holy Name Society in Drama is Success

Ghostly shadows, chilling screams, lights that failed abruptly, to say nothing of prowling mendicants, made the play given last evening in St. Michael's Academy Auditorium under the auspices of the Holy Name Society an exciting entertainment. This mystery play—"The Valley of Ghosts", marked the first venture of the organization into the field of drama and the splendid success of last evening augurs well for dramatic well for future productions.

The play was given under the direction of Miss Jessie B. Tuite and to her is due hightest praise for the splendid manner in which the young actors. Many of those in the cast had never taken part in a play before and after Miss Tuite's faithful coaching were able to act their parts in a fine fashion.

The plot of the play concerned the terms of the will of the late Lucille Evans. If the beneficiaries, a young man and a girl, would spend six months in the Evans' home they would inherit the property but should they be unable to comply with the terms the property would revert to an old family retainer, Minnie. All kinds of complications ensued. The house was one regarded by the villagers as haunted, and was utilized to the best advantage by the author of the play to create the proper spirit warnings of danger ahead. The young man and the girl met, plighted troth and sweethearts and contemplate six months in each other's company but with little pleasure. The first night's a nerve-wracking one, four conspirators gathered in the confusion by their horror. It is announced that a banker has been murdered has escaped from a nearby home and is in the house. And for a few hours there is plenty of excitement. To be commended for their splendid acting, to everyone's surprise, turned out to be the one responsible for the eventful evening and his crooked dealings were abruptly brought to an end.

With a play of this nature it was important that the stage effects and mechanics be carried out perfectly. In this respect the work of the young men operating the lights and the curtains left very little to be desired. Only one serious mistake would have interrupted the action. Godfrey Donoghue and Bernard Mc-Donnell were responsible for the evening.

The young actors carried out their parts with skill and showed genuine talent. The part of Constance Black, the suave lawyer, was taken by Jack Donovan and his clever reading of the highlights of the play. Possessed of an agreeable voice, easy and natural style, Mr. Donovan made great progress and promises well as an actor. Miss Margaret Mahoney as Helen Wayne and Jack Fairbairn as Jack Martin were fine reading characters and played their roles splendidly. Miss Wade made an appealing little heroine while Mr. Fairbairn, a newcomer to the city, distinguished himself as the likeable young man whose determination, to let his go in the boat with the sailors. Once on land she refused to budge, and her command, will-only, was obliged to disembark his goods and settle there.

None of the characters in her stories is a "real" person, said Mrs. Macdonald. "I never met a human being who could as a whole, be put in a book. Characters are built, I said, and the audience laughed.

The Macdonald home is still the country of the real grandmothers and grandfathers. Her maid servants, who are born into a political party and remain in it; where it is a great feather in a man's cap to be in the family, and where it is safer to betray all of the Ten Commandments at once than not to have three kinds of cake when a visitor arrives, declared the speaker.

Mrs. Macdonald told several stories heard along the north shore of Prince Edward and urged her hearers always to write down any tales told to listen by a child with them. There was a wealth of material for writers in the Maritimes, she declared, but, and only by putting the stories on paper could they be preserved.

"Problem" Story Has No Appeal for This Writer

Montreal, Nov. 28— There are four reasons why L. M. Montgomery, the well known Canadian author, does not write a "problem" story. The first is that it would not solve any problems. Sensible people have quite enough problems in their own lives without worrying about more, and thirdly and fourthly, she does not want to be sold a crowded meeting of the Maritime Women's Club of Montreal, held in the Windsor Hotel, then the audience which had gathered to hear the fellow Maritimer was so great that it overflowed the work room into the hall.

Mention of the wonderful good fortune it is to hail from the Maritimes, was heard often during the evening, coming with many a self-inflicted joke on the subject. Such references came from the president, Miss D. A. Gass, who is a Nova Scotian, and from L. M. Montgomery, otherwise Mrs. Evan Macdonald, a Prince Edward Islander.

Mrs. Macdonald set out to explain why it is that she has given sixteen, or her seventeen novels a Maritime setting, and the conclusion arrived at was that she just couldn't help it. She loved the provinces on the Atlantic so much that she wanted to make others love them and their people, too, she explained.

It is this wire that Mrs. Macdonald happens to be an "Islander" by the related. Three Montgomery brothers, with their wives and children, sailed for Quebec from Scotland in 1760. The crossing was stormy, the ship was stayed and the supply of water gate out. So when Prince Edward Island was neared, sailors were sent from the ship to fetch water. Mrs. Macdonald's ancestors bribed the captain with a bottle of Scotch whiskey to let her go in the boat with the sailors. Once on land she refused to budge, and her husband, will-only, was obliged to disembark his goods and settle there.

None of the characters in her stories is a "real" person, said Mrs. Macdonald. "I never met a human being who could as a whole, be put in a book. Characters are built, I said, and the audience laughed.

The Macdonald home is still the country of the real grandmothers and grandfathers. Her maid servants, who are born into a political party and remain in it; where it is a great feather in a man's cap to be in the family, and where it is safer to betray all of the Ten Commandments at once than not to have three kinds of cake when a visitor arrives, declared the speaker.

COLD WEATHER TASTY DISHES

One cup macaroni, 1 1-4 cups scalded milk, 1 cup soft bread crumbs, 1-4 cup melted butter, 1 pimento (chopped), 1 tablespoon chopped parsley, 1 tablespoon chopped onion, 1 1-2 cups Canadian cheese grated, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon Worcester shire sauce, 2 eggs.

Cook the macaroni in boiling salted water. Blanch in cold water and drain. Pour scalded milk over bread crumbs, add butter, pimento, parsley, onion, grated cheese and seasoning, then add well-beaten eggs. Put macaroni in buttered casserole and pour milk and cheese mixture over it. Bake until firm in a slow oven 325 degrees F. about 50 minutes. Serve with mushroom or tomato sauce.

Broiled Open Sandwich

Toast a slice of bread on one side, cover the untoasted side with a thin slice of cooked ham. Top with a cheese on ham. Place a thick slice of tomato on top and sprinkle with salt, pepper and mustard. Broil until the cheese melts. Serve immediately.

Tomato and Cheese Sauce

Two tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 1-2 cups tomato juice (strained pulp), 1 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1-2 teaspoon sugar, 1 tablespoon sauce, 3-4 cup grated cheese.

Melt butter, add flour, add tomato, sugar and seasonings. Stir and cook until thick and smooth. Then add cheese and ham. Place a thick slice of tomato on top and sprinkle with salt, pepper and mustard. Broil until the cheese melts. Serve immediately.

Baked Tomato Omelet

Four eggs, 1 tablespoon flour, 3-4 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 2 cups corn, 1 tablespoon butter.

Separate eggs, beat whites and yolks separately. Add flour and corn which has been heated, and seasoning to egg yolks. Fold into beaten egg whites. Pour into hot frying pan greased with butter. Bake in a slow oven 325 degrees F. for 20 minutes. Chopped green pepper or pimento may be added to this recipe.

ed person, and was wonderful in his part as Jack Martin's "shiftless" Leo Flagler gave a fine impersonation of Snow Hill, sadly afflicted with sleep walking and Margaret Donoghue was Lily Violet, another married colored visitor.

Four characters that added greatly to the evening's entertainment were those of the escaped lunatic, taken by Betty Carrington—colored woman, George O'Brien: a villager, Betty Ann Donoghue, and a ghost, J. B. Carter.

The play was well received and those taking part were warmly praised for their work. The stage settings were made by members of the Holy Name Society, the general manager of the play being Jack Norris, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Holy Name Society. Between acts selections were given by the Holy Name orchestra which included Pat McGlynn, Jack Doyle, Tony De Genova, Phil De Genova, assisted by Phyllis Dutton at the piano. Mr. Harold Barrett was heard in a delightful solo, accompanied by Mrs. Barrett. After the play the cast was entertained at a supper given by the officers of the society.

"SLIPPERS OF CINDERELLA"

Commercial Students Act in Well-Produced Drama

Confidence in the power of fairy godmothers dropped considerably after the interesting entertainment, "The Slippers of Cinderella" given yesterday afternoon by commercial students of the collegiate at an assembly meeting of the literary society. This little play concerned the unhappy plight of a family that had called upon the aid of a fairy whose old-fashioned rescue ideas were oddly out of place in the modern world.

The fairy godmother (Eva Leverence) as stately and beautiful as any fairy godmother need be and best to alter things for the better. But unluckily understood the fact that the children were neither daughters of a wicked father and cruel step-mother, nor those of a poor, but honest man, a monarch royal. A gown suitable for a lecture on "economy" she interpreted as a dazzling creation for Ella and Estthers, for a conveyance to transport the eldest to the lecture she introduced a coach-and-four complete with trumpeters and as an appetizing evening meal she provided a dish of peanuts. The ensuing havoc was concluded only when the son of the family inspired to make the clock strike the magical hour of twelve without waiting for midnight to arrive.

The play yesterday was directed by a collegiate student, Miss Catherine Smith, who is to be commended for the splendid afternoon's entertainment. The play was capably done and the actors were well versed in their parts. Miss Mary Goldberg was exceptionally fine as Myra, the eldest sister, and Abe Cole as the flippant Jimmie kept the audience chuckling at his funny lines. Beatrice Scapa was Agatha, the rich girl next door, and it was her misfortune to incur the displeasure of the Fairy Godmother with rather embarrassing results.

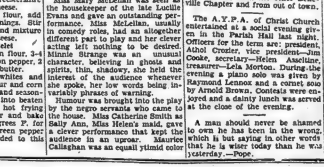
Molly Connell was Belinda, the youngest of the family, whose belief in fairy tales was held as the cause of the household's unusual experience. Sonia Rosenberg and Ruth Brough were the twins, Dolly and Polly. Grace Dorsey was the family servant, who was utterly demoralized by the goings-on and Gladys McDonald was Jane, the erstwhile French maid, who spent more of her time in fashion help.

The chairman for the literary Society was the president, Ross Wrese, and numbers on the programme included a reading by Bonnie Hunt and Patricia Chatterton a vocal solo by Clara Ostrom and an instrumental chorus by Bill Cerrard and Bruce May.

BOY DROWNS IN OLD CANAL

Slips Into Water When Gathering Fire-Wood

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Nov. 26(CP)—Falling into the old canal at Cardinal Thursday, Frederick Kelly, 18, was drowned. The body was recovered in about nine feet of water an hour and a half later by employees of a nearby plant.



Kelly accompanied by a ten year old brother, had been gathering wood when he slipped and fell into the water. The younger boy ran home when he saw his brother struggling in the water and before help arrived the older boy was drowned.

The coroner decided an inquest was unnecessary.

TRENTON BOYS ENJOY CAMP ON HIGHWAY

Hockey Assoc. Organized With Mark Tripp as President

Trenton, Nov. 28 (Special)—Chief Bain of Trenton received a card from the boys at camp 3 miles here up to Tacks to work on the highway:

"Dear Sir:

We had a wonderful trip, and we are certainly well pleased with the conditions here.

Good bosses and good food.

The Boys."

It is a remarkable thing that young men of the finest stamp who as a whole are unaccustomed to such work, are willing and do adopt themselves to conditions of life which they are entirely unfamiliar with. With such young men as these Canada has every reason to feel confidence among nations.

Two local criminals were before the magistrate to answer a charge of having in their possession a gun. One paid a fine of $100.00 and costs, the other was remanded.

After numerous delays and postponements a hockey meet finally proceeded in having a hockey meeting in the Gilbert House last night at 8 p.m.

Mr. Mark Tripp is the president, Mr. S. E. Terrill, vice pres., Mr. John Ritchie as secretary treas. The executive council, Blake Crawford, Lorne Foster, G. A. Hoag and Major Geo. Rogers. Intermediate hockey association Representative, George Rosegild. Junior hockey Mr. James Dolan. The first meeting to discuss the coming season will be held next week.

The entrance fees were mailed last night just under the wire as this was the last day for it. Lets hope we can get some pep behind the hockey this year and get some place.

Young Trenton man was arraigned before the magistrate to answer a charge of stealing. Restitution was made, and one year's suspended sentence.

Mr. Gerald Moran of Codrington, is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Houlihan of Trenton.

Mr. Fred Abbott of Toronto is visiting his home in Trenton.

A young 11 year old lady decided she wouldn't be scolded so left a note for her mother that she would be gone forever. A frantic mother and the police located the child. The young children just better remember that mother is always right.

BOYS' WORK IS REVIEWED

Bay of Quinte Conference For Boys Opens at Holloway St. Ch.

One of the largest registrations in the history of the Bay of Quinte Boys' Conference, now in session at Holloway Street Church, was witnessed in the church parlors at the opening session last evening.

The Quinte District Boys' Conference is held once a year, usually in the autumn, when the leaders of the boys' work in the district meet to discuss ways and means to carry on their this work among the younger boys. They receive instructions from experienced men from larger centres and hear addresses on subjects pertaining to boys' work.

After the registration last evening the conference opened with a sing-song service which was followed by the worship service by Harold Snell. Rev. H. B. Neal on behalf of Holloway Street Church welcomed the delegates from the district and assured them that they would receive the greatest amount of co-operation possible from the members of Holloway Street church. Rev. Mr. Neal then introduced Mayor Reid, who welcomed the boys and their friends to Belleville on behalf of the city itself. Mr. Reid lauded the work of the Boys' Conference and assured them that they should keep up their great work and wished them every success possible in their endeavours.

Rev. Lou Buckley, secretary of all the Y.M.C.A. branches in Toronto was called upon and gave a much-appreciated address on the subject of "Adventurous Living." Mr. Buckley was very much at home on subject and after considerable explaining on his part he showed the boys the folly of living.

Immediately following the organization for the smaller year took place with the following officers being elected to office:

Practor—Douglas Campbell, Massanga.

Deputy Grand Practor—D. Bourne Albert College.

Grand Scriptor—Gerald Wright, Brighton.

Compter—J. Foley, Wellington.

CHICAGO STOCK SHOW OPENS

Canada Will Try and Duplicate Success of Last Year

Chicago, Nov. 26 — The finest sheep and cattle of Eastern Canada, and the most flawless grain exhibit in the prairie provinces had been assembled here today to compete against the best produced in the United States as the 32nd International Livestock Exposition opened at the Union Stockyards.

Canadian livestock and grain men, who saw their entries sweep through last year's show to capture more awards in the classes in which they were represented than ever before in the show's history, were banded together in a family would be duplicated this year.

The highlight of the Canadian success in the 1930 show was the winning of the title of Grand Champion over corefed grain awards, by Herman Trelle of Wembly, Alta. Trelle's exhibit of hard red spring wheat was adjudged the best exhibited. A sheaf of the wheat, raised by George Avery of Kelso, Sask., had earned almost best than grand ing the string of victories or second places which Montana growers have compiled year after year with their samples of hard Red Winter.

SHORT CHANGE SCARE AIRED

Local Merchant is Uneasy By Money Business Operations

Another short change scare—people are leary nowadays, what with the Chinese-Japanese war brewing, and the high cost of living and go on—occurred in a Front street shop last evening. Matters however, were soon ironed out and business was resumed as usual.

It seems that a gentleman whose appearance did not tally with the amount of saccharine product he was buying, owing to the fact that he had a cop pulled down over his face— and also smelled strongly of beets or something, tendered a five dollar bill for the purchase. Poor something, was returned. It was accepted. Another purchase was made with one dollar. It, too, clicked into the till, underwent a modern miracle of transformation of paper into silver, and emerged in the shape of two quarters and some chicken feed which was given back. Then the change the gentleman had acquired from the two transactions together with some he had in his pocket, was tendered Gus (which it was his right name, by the way, and more than ponys is Percival), who was getting a bit fed up with both watching out for himself on the financial end of this thing, and also the changing of money in general by a seedy-looking individual with a cast in his eye who was talking fast for him anyhow, but Gus unwillingly and weirdly clumped heavily to the till, counting as he went, to change this silver into paper money again as he had been requested.

He stopped; a head bent closer to the palm of the hand which contained the silver. He began to breathe heavily, chickens on their roost throughout the countryside stirred and clucked restlessly; dogs who had been chasing cats stopped in mid-stride as if some unearthly power had reached out a cold hand and had petrified them. A passing motorcar for no reason at all slowed and came to a stop; horses in their stalls for the night whickered and shifted restlessly to and fro; the town clock missed three beats, and up in the heavens above, Jupiter changed his flying course and nosedived heavily at a neighboring planet—Gus had found a shortage of thirty cents!

That ending almost seems good enough to leave alone and just say that the world really did stop when Jupiter fell into that planet, when the planet joining into the spirit of this new game of tag, reciprocated by barging into the moon, which in turn plummeted heavily again on the earth and finished it. But the real fact is that after Gus had let a Hindenburg howl out of him and had turned to the wondering customer the man by this time had begun to have an idea that something had gone wrong some place and had dished out another hand full of the ready silver. From this point on matters progressed very favorably. The change was made, still under the watchful eye of Gus, now ever, and the man departed. As for Gus, perhaps he still thinks that he was too smart for a guy who had tried to outsmart him. But the other fellow with the cast in his eye, we wonder if he still knows what it was all about, or if he really was a fellow who thought he could pull a fast one over the eagle eye of Gus.

MARKET TREND IS DOWNWARD DURING WEEK

Interest Divided Between Down Trend and Response of Loan

Written for the Canadian Press by Thomas C. Thompson.

Toronto, Nov. 28—Financial interest throughout Canada was divided this week between the disappointing trend of the stock market and the remarkable response which greeted the government's offering of the new "National Service Loan" 5 per cent bonds.

In the case of the stock market there was a notable absence of investment demand with the result that prices followed an almost uninterrupted downward tendency, but it would be a mistake to view the stock trend as an index of the prevailing sentiment in financial circles.

Stocks, wheat and other commodities, along with business news in general served to draw fresh attention to the fact that current improvement in the economic situation is still a matter of the future. Employment figures were disappointing, the wheat price indulged in a series of sinking spells that could not be otherwise than discouraging to those who have looked upon wheat as a barometer of general trade recovery.

Passing of the regular dividends on Ford of Canada shares, and on one or two other prominent Canadian and United States stocks was in line with expectations of traders, who have come to regard such announcements as a reflection of the recent depressed condition of trade. Nevertheless, Ford of Canada "A" reacted sharply on the To. ronto Stock Exchange, losing 3 points in a sharp break to 12 on Friday.

Brazilian Traction, International Nickel, C.P.R. and Walters dropped in light trading. Brazilian losing more than a point in its decline to 10 3-8 from 11 3-4. Nickel declined from 10 to around 9 a share, and later recovered to close at 10, unchanged. C.P.R. was sensitive to pressure against rails in New York and lost 2 points for the week at 18.

Noranda failed to respond to the report on Friday that the Belgian Congo Corporation had agreed to a production to the point decided upon by other interests. At 13.20 showed a net decline of 40 cents for the week. Of the other leaders, Consolidated Smelters was off 1 point at 67½, Hollinger 30 cents at 30, Teck Hughes 1 point at 1, Sylvanite 1 point at 81, Lake Shore 2 points at 2800, Wright Hargreaves 1 point at 266, Dome 15 points at 965, Howey 1 point at 34, Kirkland Lake 15 points at 5315, Sisco 1 point at 26, Vipond 1 point at 53, Vesting 1 point at 66, Bidgood 1 point at 14, Base Metals 1 point at 96, Hollinger 30 at 573, Hudson's Bay 2 points at 293, Howey 1 point at 34, Kirkland Lake 15 points at 5315, Lake Shore 2 points at 2800, McIntyre 15 points at 1785, Sisco 1 point at 26, Sylvanite, Bid 1 point at 81, Teck Hughes 1 point at 1, Vipond 1 point at 53, Vesting 1 point at 66, Wright Hargreaves 1 point at 266, Dome 15 points at 965.

CANNED GOODS LAST CARGO FROM PICTON

Last of Freighters Call on Sunday at Picton

LOADING JOB

1931 Closing of Navigation Season is Later

PICTON, Nov. 28.—(Special)—It is expected that the last freighters for the season will call here today for cargoes of canned goods and apples. This season has seen much activity in shipping from the local harbor with thousands upon thousands of cases of canned goods and bushels of apples being shipped out.

Friend Edward apples and canned goods go to many parts of the world Shipments have been made direct to France and to Africa, while apples are forwarded to other foreign markets from Great Britain. This season, the Prince Edward Fruit Growers Limited received a big order for apples in boxes from a New York firm.

County apples and canned goods are popular in the Canadian West, and shipments have been made to the Arctic Circle. These shipments are usually made by water to Port William then on by rail to Western cities. However, the closing of the West go entirely by water freighters calling here and going up the St. Lawrence and around the coast through the Panama Canal to British Columbia. Last week, such a shipment was made on the ocean-going freighter Moyra of Halifax.

Though the greater part of the canned goods pack goes out by water, some shipping is done by rail.

The loading of the big freighters has done much to relieve unemployment. The C.S.L. are over fifty local men to load each boat while the other companies use quite a number. Good wages are paid for this work and there is always a big crowd of men on hand as each boat docks.

Today, the City of Toronto, package freighter, is expected at the C.S.L. wharf. She will load canned goods for Montreal and points east. This will wind up that company's business here for this season.

A Tree Line freighter is also expected today at the Gulliver and Ruff wharf for canned goods. It is expected that a coal barge will close the season as one is expected here next week.

Last year, Navigation closed here on the 27th of November.

The peat was send saw heavy shipments from Picton. The Edmonton, a Canada Steamship Line boat, loaded 60,000 cases of canned goods and several thousand barrels of apples. A small army of men were employed twenty hours loading her.

The Tree Line freighter, Poplar Bay, which was bound for Port Arthur and Fort William and took over a thousand cases from Gulliver and Ruff's wharf. She expects to return from there to Toronto with a cargo of flour before laying up for the season.

The Glen Allan made her regular trip to Belleville and Trenton and back to Picton on Tuesday leaving the same night for Montreal, heavily laden with apples, canned goods and cheese.

The Calgarian, an Upper Lake freighter, of the C.S.L., loaded 25,000 cases canned goods for the Canadian West, she going to Port Arthur.

The Glen Allen, the Hepburn package freighter will lay up in Picton as usual for the winter. She will finish the season on Monday

REMANDED ON THEFT CHARGE

Wilford Smith of Wellington, who was arrested at that place on Saturday, November 21, charged with having stolen money in his possession, appeared before Magistrate A. E. Calnan in police court at Picton this Saturday morning and was remanded for another week. The arrest of Smith was made on the morning following the blowing of the safe in the office of Hogg & Lytle, grain and produce merchants at Wellington and the theft of a sum of money.

LOCAL MARKET WELL ATTENDED

Egg Prices Range From 36 to 46c a Dozen

Under ideal November weather conditions the local Saturday market was very largely attended. The feature of the market was the marked difference in the variation of prices of eggs. The price of eggs ranged from 36 to 46 cents per dozen. Butter sold for 23c to 25c a pound, while the fowl ducks could be bought from $1.25 up. There was quite a variation in the price of chickens and they sold from 65c up according to their size.

Hardwood cut into stove lengths was offered on the market at $10 per cord, while fine young porkers sold from $5.00 a pair up according to their weight. The specimen of young pigs were perhaps as good as could ask for and they were soon picked up at the prevailing prices.

At the outside market there was a fine display of apples by the vendors. Show apples sold for $1.25; MacIntosh Reds, $1.50; Talman Sweets $1.50; Black Tuscious, $1.50 and Spys at $1.00 a bushel, and were rapidly sold as the prices asked. Citrons brought 10c each while picking pears sold for 60c pck. Pickles remained at 60c per bag, while fine large cauliflower could be purchased at from 10c up.

In the vegetable line beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips sold for 30c a peck. Cabbage brought for each, onions 60c a peck, squash 15c to 30c each and celery 10c a bunch.

The local market on Saturday was one of the largest attended that has been seen locally in quite some time and the prevailing low prices encouraged the prospective buyers to purchase in large quantities.

CAMPOLO ALL WASHED UP

Took a Lacing in Two Rounds From Carnera

(By Herbert Bastow, Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Vic Morris Campolo, the fistic trail drifter from Sudbury seems to head back to South America.

The six-foot seven-inch giant from Argentina lasted less than two rounds with Primo Carnera in Madison Square Garden last night. One volley of lefts and rights sent him to the floor early in the second round and another finished him for the rest of the evening.

Thus ends Campolo's hopes of re-establishing his pugilistic reputation which suffered sadly when the tall Canuck took a bad lacing from Tommy Loughran in ten rounds and was knocked out in seven by Ernie Schaaf. The new setback apparently is Chelmsford Campolo entirely from heavyweight consideration.

The huge rivals aggregated 401 pounds, Carnera scaling 258½ and Campolo 254½.

MAIN BOUTER HAS EXPERIENCE

Brilliant Student at Evans ville Before Taking up Game

Arthur Dick, who is scheduled to match wrestling ability with Ed Kozat, Canadian light heavyweight champion in the finish bout, which will feature next Monday's show at the Arena was rated as the outstanding athlete at Evansville College, when he was a student at the Indiana seat of learning. In addition he was voted the most popular man of his year. He starred on both football and wrestling teams while at college and in his last year was assistant coach of the football team and captain of the college wrestling squad.

Dick was a medical student, when he left college to enter the professional wrestling but after a couple more years of experience in this rather rough sport and return to college to take his degree as a Doctor. He made good quickly as a professional and in a recent bout defeated Bengt Lindeberg, Chicago's Jewish star. He appeared at Toronto against Kogut in a bout on the London-Romano world championship card and impressed fans, sports critics, reports stating, "Dick, by virtue of his cleverness and his knowledge of wrestling, was the master throughout the match. He was never in danger at any time and had a slight advantage over Kogut up to the time the latter caught him with a flying tackle and won the bout. He got his chance for revenge Monday and promises to take full advantage of it."

The supporting bouts are quite in keeping with such headline attraction. The semi-final, Sandor Szabo, Hungarian, the "Pittlers Pole" and Alec Koski bring together two of the most powerful light heavyweights in the sport and the affair may develop into a rough house battle as Kasaboski is one of the leading villians in the mat and Koski is not the man to stand by any abuse and trips the Pole delights in handing out.

In contrast to the grim final the opener should provide one of the most brilliant examples of clever wrestling ever seen. Frankie Brady of Holland and Jack Herman, the "Toledo Whirlwind" are master wrestlers. They know their holds and apply them with the finishing precision. It should be a great show.

Here's one for the hook-an-eye witness now a young man will himself out of the Bay waters at the Hudra River last Wednesday morning. Upon investigating the young man's explanation of swimming the mid-winter, he found out that the swimming in question was one other than Tommy Fodder Belleville's youthful entry into the C.N.E. marathon swim last fall. Tom has started to train in cold water already for next years marathon. Perseverance is the key-nut of success, to say the least.

The question now arises—what will the "readers" do next Monday evening when they are cooped out of the ring under the lens? They would be well advised to wear rubbers in their shoes so that they won't slip and lose the lens when trying to regain their feet. It is now betting that they won't lay on the ice as they stayed down on the boards at the last go.

Lou Marsh, sports editor of the Toronto Daily Star scaled out the following article in regards to Alex Kaskiski who wrestles Alex Koski in the semi-final bout—"They call him 'the guy that never learned to play'. He plays golf, tennis, but don't know anything about pulling his punches. The other night he almost raised a perfectly good playmate by taking a flying leap like he was trying to dislodge bankers down on an opponent's unprotected stomach."

This boy Art Dick, who "rassles" Jack Kogut in the main bout, is a "rassler" of no mean ability. Out in the middle west (that's they think that the ex-Evansville college boy is the best in his weight that graces the wrestling mat. While in the certain-rainer Frankie Herman by who we made so many friends in Belleville, will take on Jack Hennessy of Toledo, O. This is Herman's first Canadian appearance, so we are informed by Matchmaker Corcoran. He will be under the personal care of Mr. Corcoran as he is looking for new talent all the time.

We were sorry to hear of the accident that occurred over at the intermediate practice on Thursday evening. Ross Barnhard, to the nets received a nasty gash under the eye when he was hit by the puck when Fern Perry let the slicker of Bobby Hall. Hall sailed in and let one fly, it was a little higher than Barnhard and the result was that Ross was rushed to a nearby cot and bruise.

It looks as though the local city hockey league is doomed. At a meeting held on Thursday night in the Y.M.C.A. but two teams were represented. President Don Ross has tried to interest some local sportsmen in a proposition of entry but as it looks as though the sportsmen can't get hot on it. It is too bad that a league cannot be formed for the purpose of providing hockey for the players who will not be old enough for O.H.A. hockey this winter.

President Ross is taking one more chance to save the league. He has announced that a final meeting will be held next Thursday evening and if there are not enough teams represented then the idea will be passed up for this year.

Harry Rosborough put his fighters, Jack Lang and Freddie Perry, through a stiff work-out this morning at the Y.M.C.A. They will be busy this week at practice before they step into the ring Tuesday night to meet Ray Comerford and Ernie Sharpe, the card with Billy Townsend, the Vancouver boy who has made such a fine showing in New York and other American cities.

The K-I-Y league will have their annual meeting at the Y. M.C.A. on Tuesday evening. Any team that wishes to enter must be represented at this meeting. It is hoped that at least six teams can be produced for the juvenile and midget groups as these leagues are the feeders for the junior O.H.A. teams in future years. It is a worthy cause and the sports committee of Belleville should get behind the project.

Bill Rankin announced last night that he had made arrangements with the Queen's Hotel to have a game the middle of next week. Bill and Boomer Holway were in Kingston Friday afternoon and saw the Queens team work out. They have all of last year's players plus three new boys. Squires and Murphy alone should pack them in at the local arena.

DICK IRWIN NOW COACH OF LEAFS

Formerly Was in Control of Chicago Black Hawks

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP) — Dick Irwin, of Regina, Sask., former Winnipeg player and coach with the Chicago Black Hawks is to be coach of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, Owner Conn Smythe announced yesterday. Irwin agreed to the terms of Manager Conny Smythe and he will assume his new duties immediately. He replaces Art Duncan, who will be kept on the Toronto payroll.

Commenting on the appointment of Irwin as coach of the local N.H. L. entry, Conny Smythe said: "The Toronto Maple League hockey club is such that it can be used to such advantage that we can get more than two points in five games.

"Personal relations between Mr. Duncan and myself are of the best and had no effect on the club's decision," the Leaf's manager declared.

MARLBOROS WIN FROM NIAGARA

Gene Fraser's Crew Stopped at Toronto By 5 to 1 Score

Toronto, Nov. 27 (CP) — Walking through their opponent's defence without opposition, Marlboro Technicolo entry in the "Big Seven" group of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association series banded Niagara Falls Cataracts to a setback here last night. Bolstered by the addition of Fred Radke, stalwart defence star of last season, the Dukes hammered home two goals in the opening period and added a single tally to this in the second stanza when the Falls bobbed their goal counter. A brace of goals in the final session for the Cataracts were using five forwards completed the total. The counters were by Fazzalaine in the loser's net, who in the last session stopped numerous Marlboro drives, Gene Fraser and the superb ability of Claude Harris, heavy set guardian of the Dukes were the highlights of the game.

"Scotty" Bowman, sturdy Falls defence man, was lost to his team after the first frame, when he was handed a stiff body check as he left the Marlboro rearguard, injuring his shoulder.

Bill Hunter, who along with Arvi Makl and Henry Laurent made up the first-striking attacking division for the Soo Greyhounds last season, was Gene Fraser's selection for the line.

Hunter should have had a couple of goals as a result of his fine playing, but he lacked the finish on end. In the last period he beat the whole Marlboro team cold, and then laid the puck at his mate's feet to shoot.

The only goal for the Falls came on a drive by Makl after he had received a pass from Laurent. The Marlboro defence played for a pass, but Makl crashed in and swept in from the side to drive a terrific shot into the corner of the net.

BOXERS SHOW THEIR WARES

Lang and Perry Will Appear in Toronto on Monday Next

Last night at the armouries after the regular Friday night's drill, an hour of lively boxing was featured. Fred Perry and Jack Lang who are boxing in Playfair Brown's Shamrock Club show at the Mutual Street Arena, Toronto on Monday night next took on all comers and some real quick action rounds and first class boxing was seen. The boys who are going to Playfair's "circus" show did up well, but they were not the only punch-jabbers present, having to go all the boys with their opponents, to be awarded the approval of the spectators.

What Theatrical Managers Say of Coming Attractions

At The Belle

"EAST OF BORNEO"

This unusual drama opened a two days engagement at the Belle theatre yesterday, and all were impressed the large audience as a picture which has something to offer in addition to a highly interesting story.

The story is laid in the wild jungle country of the Malay Peninsula, and many of its scenes were actually made there by an expedition from whom credit is due. The story around the world from the studios in Hollywood. To the authenticity of the scenes is unquestioned and the pictures as a whole constitutes a valuable record of life and conditions in that far off land.

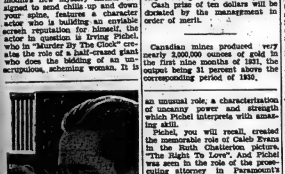
The story concerns an oriental Rajah, an American woman and her former husband. The latter, embittered by his unsuccessful married venture, has chosen to live ably busy himself in the Malay jungles where he is the only white man, and where he acts as personal physician to the Rajah of the district. The wife, feeling the return of her love for her former husband, follows him in this tropical outpost, and it is after her arrival that the story takes on an unusual quality of tense drama. With the indignant husband jealous of his former wife, and the Rajah casting covetous glances on her, a situation is created which leads to exciting events and a most thrilling climax.

Ironically, "East of Borneo" is full of wild charm. Most of the scenes take place in the palace of the Rajah, a picturesque affair situated on the bank of a crocodile-infested river, while active verdicano topping the mountain range in the middle distance.

The cast, headed by Rose Hobart and Charles Bickford, is excellent. These two players are already known to these roles, as are also George Renavent, Lupita Tovar and Noble Johnson. The efforts of these prominent are supplemented by several hundred native Malays, who supply the "finishing touches" to a screen production which is in every way remarkable.

A program of varied and amusing short offerings preceded the exhibition of the feature attraction.

THE MYSTERY OF A MAN MURDERED TWICE



"Murder By The Clock," Paramount's new mystery thriller designed to send chills up and down your spine, features a character actor who is building an enviable screen reputation for himself, the actor in question is Irving Pichel, who in "Murder By The Clock" creates the role of a half-crazed plant who does the bidding of an unscrupulous, scheming woman. It is an unusual role, a characterization of uncanny power and strength which Pichel interprets with amazing skill.

Pichel, you will recall, created the memorable role of Caleb Evans in the Sixth Chatterton picture, "The Right To Love"). And Pichel was seen in the role of the prosecuting attorney in Paramount's widely heralded production of "The-odore Dreiser's American Tragedy." Incidentally, Pichel's performance in "Murder By The Clock" has won for him a long term contract with Paramount.

Also prominent in "Murder By The Clock" is a cast of established players including Lester Matthan, William "Stage" Boyd, Regis Toomey and Sally O'Neil.

"Murder By The Clock" will be the feature at the Belle Theatre for two days beginning Wednesday.

Every daily attending the Belle Wednesday evening will be presented with a Blue Pearl Dresserware gift, their will also be a special drawing for a complete Blue Pearl Dresserware Set with cabinet, beaten other prize Drawings. No doubt the Belle will be favoured with large patronage on Wednesday evening.

Sally Blane, Lew Ayres and "A Couple Notre Dame Fellas", in "Spirit of Notre Dame", at Capitol today, Monday and Tuesday — Matinee Daily.

At The Capitol

"SPIRIT OF NOTRE DAME" OPENS TODAY

No other expression than "The best football picture this reviewer has ever seen" will do justice to "The Spirit of Notre Dame," which today opens its showing at the Capitol Theatre for 3 days.

This comedy-drama of the gridiron takes its place at once as one of the most entertaining shows ever produced, either by Universal or any other company, and teems with thrills and human interest throughout its length. One of the most interesting young men on the screen today, Lew Ayres, is presented as a small town high school football star, who enters Notre Dame, determined to win a ball carrier of the team, only to find himself in competition with the men who are familiar to every football fan. And it is over this that they have the way who will enjoy "The Spirit of Notre Dame." It will amuse and thrill every man, woman and child who is fortunate enough to see it.

Frank Albertson, who is also featured with William Bakewell, who is seen as Lew's pal and roommate, and J. Farrell MacDonald, the football coach and the living image, by the way, of the late Knute Rockne; by Sally Blane, Kathleen Burke, Harry Barris and many others.

Director Russell Mack may well feel proud of "The Spirit of Notre Dame." Not only is it a picture of greatest college sports, and the most accurate and realistic gridiron story but it is a picture of youth and the will to do, maintaining a tempo that literally sweeps the spectator into maelstrom of excitement which grips his character.

By all means see it. It is seeing the biggest football championship game and all the rally goes on behind the scenes for good measure.

UNEMPLOYED VAUDEVILLE CONTEST TUESDAY

Great fun is expected at the Capitol Theatre on Tuesday, when the unemployed vaudeville contest is staged at 8 p.m. Singing, dancing and other entertainment will be rendered by members of the only too large body of unemployed. Cash prize of ten dollars will be awarded by the management in order of merit.

ROSES DO NOT CAUSE TROUBLE

Trees, Grass, Ragweed Spread Pollen and Promote Sneezing

Toronto, Ont. (By The Canadian Press)—Sufferers from hayfever treatment for hay fever victims may be the result of an investigation into the pollen content of Toronto air conducted during the past three years by Dr. H. E. Detweiler, of the department of pathology and bacteriology, University of Toronto.

Out of his experiments, Dr. Detweiler reports he has found three definite seasons for the extensive pollination of the atmosphere. The first season, defined by him as the June season, starts with the blooming of the trees and covers a period from late March to the end of May. Hay fever, he discovered, was largely attributable during this period to the pollen of the maple, oak and birch. The second, or grass season, coincides with the pollination of the grasses and covers June and July, sometimes extending into the early part of August, of the grasses Dr. Detweiler found that timothy, red top June grass and orchard grass caused practically all hay fever during this time.

The third and most influential season, Dr. Detweiler claims, is that of August and the month of September and early October until the first heavy frost. Ragweed is almost exclusively responsible during this third period for the vast amounts of suffering from hay fever and hay asthma.

Up 10 per cent of patients suffering from hay fever develop their symptoms during the season of June and July, which coincides with the blooming of roses, this form of hay fever is often called rose fever and it is hard to combine these two facts, Dr. Detweiler says, that this particular flower is not the cause of their trouble. Such cases probably have the major portion of their symptoms from the grass pollens and no blame can be attached to the rose, Dr. Detweiler says.

POLICE INVESTIGATE FOUR BARN FIRES

Ingersoll, Ont., Nov. 28.—Provincial police from London are investigating fires that destroyed four barns in Middlesex county yesterday resulting in a loss totalled at $15,000.

A fire near Adelaide village on the farm of Harry Cullnan is believed to have been of an incendiary nature while one on the farm of Norman Anderson in Westminster township is thought to have resulted from spontaneous combustion. In the latter fire three barns were destroyed, while only one building was burned in the former blaze.

Destruction of the barn and No. 8 District Provincial Police, has warned farmers to report at any outbreak of fire to his office immediately.

The great Canadian National War Memorial now nearing completion at Vimy Ridge, France, England, will rank with anything of its kind in the world.

GORDON CRAIG GETS TOUGH

Says George Bernard Shaw Not an Artist

London (By The Canadian Press)—What is thought to be a reply to George Bernard Shaw's recent preface to the Ellen Terry letters was written in a book "Ellen Terry and her Secret Self", recently published by Gordon Craig.

Mr. Craig refers to Mr. Shaw as "that old Sage of Whitehall Court", who "is not an artist—never was and never will be."

In the first page Mr. Craig writes: "I had not wished to write this book. Ellen Terry knew me already one of the most famous names in the English History—no one by writing, could add to that fame. But it was possible they could detract from it. And that is what Bernard Shaw, through his blind vanity and jealousy, has done at first, in permitting the publication of the correspondence between himself and Ellen Terry; secondly, in writing his apologetic and back-to-front Preface in which he descends here and there not to salute but to insult the dead.

"He cannot help it—it is his unfortunate way."

In regard to the publication of the letters, he writes: "Poor publication—how she would have loathed it." The rest of the book is devoted to Craig's tribute to a woman of genius and also to his own paranoia, which, in one paragraph after another, he:

Mr. Craig does not seem satisfied with the attacks directed at Mr. Shaw in the book, for the reader will find in a pocket attached to the cover a three page parody in which the writer returns to the attack. Here he seems to have hit upon a method completely away with him, saying that when reading Mr. Shaw's letters in the past three years he "objected to what seemed to me to be a pack of silly lies, lies purposely invented to damage the Terry family and myself." The latter is more interesting both of Mr. Shaw's preface and of Mr. Shaw's character.

Mr. Craig concludes by suggesting that one of Mr. Shaw's motives in writing his preface was jealousy of Irving.

"What motives, then? One was vanity, another was envy. He wished one more postmortem kick at Irving—for he was jealous of him as the letters prove.

"Well, jealousy, is, after all, a very human weakness and forgivable; but it must not lose in stature—in quality—and jealousy is very pretty. Shaw's jealousy does not resemble the jealousy depicted of an Othello—it is dreadfully like the permanent and incessant bite of a flea, never blinding him to mischief. It flares Him always—and is jealous of writers, of actors, of better—he is ever jealous of men who are favored by women, of the success of sons and daughters, because loved by their fathers, of the love showing way. Let him but catch sight of a man and a woman who are happily living together—and his first look is a wedge between them, his first word is a mallet's stroke, and with his words he betters himself with the sentimental part of woman, her brain, and all is done—and nothing undone—he seems to delight in dividing where other men love to see union."

MISER LEAVES MONEY TO LONDONERS

London (By The Canadian Press)—Sir Albert Durlach, aged eccentric resident of London, wealthy but a miser, died recently, leaving more than $600,000 to the poor of the Metropolis. The money to be distributed through the Metropolitan police court poor boxes. Durlach's eccentricity was marked by his frequent appearances of the Bankers Court "dressed like a mercenary." He died on the Riviera.

His estate, which included 10,125 Canadian Pacific Railway shares has been the subject of investigation in the High Court in which Justice McCardie is the Government for the Public Trustee. The action was on the question whether or the Durlach money be distributed among the charities, valued at about $600,000, had been transferred to the trustees of the late Joseph Halat, as claimed by a son of Halat, the Public Trustee alleging that the papers in question were forgeries.

The money left by Drlnan all goes to the poor boxes at the London police courts and distribution has been made for an annuity of £1,500 a year to Durlach's daughter, Miss B. Drlnan, of Berkhamsted, Herts.

The Attorney-General, as adviser to the Charity Commissioners, will cooperate with the solicitors acting for the Public Trustee, in settling a scheme, to be approved by the High Court, for the investment of the capital and the distribution of the income among the 12 poor boxes. It is expected that each of the boxes will receive an equal share.

Each magistrate is responsible for dispensing the money allotted to his court. If he comes across an obvious case of distress he can order assistance to be given.

MANITOBA RELIEF PROGRAMME

Winnipeg, Man. (By The Canadian Press)—Construction work, road-building, a back-to-the land movement and direct relief all play a part in Manitoba's programme designed to aid unemployed numbering approximately 40,000, according to provincial government legislation.

Works costing in the neighborhood of $3,000,000 have already been undertaken by federal, provincial and civic authorities, and proposals for expenditure of an additional $4,000,000 are being studied.

The province, at least, the present emergency is likely to prove of great benefit to the province. Manitoba has a great deal of land its unemployed citizens to work. The provincial is paying attention to the opening of new roads in outlying sections. Some of these roads tap areas of rare scenic beauty which in the not far distant future may attract motor tourists in increasing numbers.

Perhaps the most important road projects in the frontier areas, which will be part of the provincial relief scheme are Turtle Mountain Provincial Park highway to Elm Pra with the southern centres and the Duck Mountain Park road to Lac Bonnet.

Construction work under way in other of new sciences building for the University of Manitoba, in the municipality of Fan Garry, adjoining Winnipeg, at a cost of $700,000. Another large building is also going forward is a civic auditorium on the Mall, in Winnipeg, at an estimated cost of $1,000,000. An addition to the Brandon provincial mental hospital, costing about $40,000 is also being proceeded with.

Federal-approved construction of the Baler street viaduct, in Winnipeg, at an estimated cost of $1,300,000 provided work for a large number of skilled and unskilled men for a considerable period. Further relief to the city's unemployment was made available in a varied programme of park improvements, road, construction, sewer and sidewalk laying.

Completion of the province's part of the Trans-Canada highway forms a part of the relief programme but does not bulk as large as in some of the other provinces. The reason is that the 150 mile road part of the road is already built and on the completed portion the traffic of the country does not require the extensive work of bush cutting and root removal needed in Northern Ontario.

Some work is being carried on in Manitoba on the Trans-Canada highway in the eastern section towards the Ontario boundary and in the north

EVERY CLASS AIDED BY RELIEF WORK

Alberta Has Taken in Every Class in Plans

NO JOBLESS

Work on Streets and Public Buildings Being Done

Calgary, Alta. (By The Canadian Press)—Federal provincial and municipal forces have been linked to care for unemployed in Alberta. Unemployed girls, single and married men have all been aided. Small and large undertakings to aid workless are included in the program in every section of the province. In every city, town and rural city. Some are under way, others await formal approval and still others cannot, for various reasons, be inaugurated immediately.

Tent cities and "jungles" which sprang up this summer; river banks and creeks where men panned for gold are being deserted with the approach of winter. Although the farmers at work both in grain field and on ranche, single men, soon classified as "transients," went to the municipal highway projects; married men in large cities receive work for two weeks at a time, yielded their places to fellow breadwinners until their turn came again.

Calgary and Edmonton undertakings included the million-dollar smart and both cities expected to obtain government approval of other projects if required. Approval already has been given to works costing $700,000 in Calgary and approximately $700,000 in Edmonton.

Calgary's expenditure includes $220,000 on an infiltration plant superstructure, pumping station and reservoir task—all in connection with the new waterworks scheme at a cost nearing $3,000,000. Another $120,000 will be spent on a sewage-disposal plant, part of which has been built. A new bridge paying, storm sewers, park improvements and work on the new Mewata Park Athletic Grounds account for the remainder of the approved outlay.

As a basic principle, Edmonton city council decided work must be provided wherever possible. Accordingly, their plans called for the employment of as many men as possible, week on and week off, as the city fair-wage rate. Any men who could not be employed in this way and received direct relief, were required to work one day, or eight hours, weekly in return for relief supplies.

During the summer $456,210 was expended for native film, waterworks plant construction and other work. The programme for the coming months includes sewage disposal and drainage work costing $750,000; waterworks-distribution system, $50,00; bridges and highways, $200,000; parks and land improvements, $225,000, and airport and park work, $25,000.

Street car fares and assessments have been in progress for some time and probably will be completed before winter sets in. The city hopes to continue gravel-surfacing operations throughout the winter and also to carry on water and sewer projects without interruption.

In Drumheller, plans for winter and spring provide for building a large concrete reservoir and supplementing it with waterworks system improvements and cement sidewalks to cost $41,000 about June.

In Lethbridge it is expected that work on a storage reservoir to cost $100,000 will be carried on all winter. Work already undertaken by new chutes related to pavements, a new power-house intake, levelling and grading around the power-house and widening of the MacLeod road; replacing wooden bridges with concrete and curbs, gutter and sidewalks. The total cost of the latter work is estimated at $112,000.

Similar work are being undertaken in virtually every town and village in Alberta, but neither provincial nor municipal authorities will hazard a guess at the total expenditure.

An interesting example of aiding workless through extensive cooperation developed in the Drumheller area with the organization of an Associated Local Improvement District. Here, with the mayor of the city of Drumheller and extends the south side of the Red Deer river from Newcastle to Wayne and from Midlandvale to East Coulee, on the north side of the river. Organization of the district was completed in June, and after four months of steady effort its affairs are running smoothly.

A well-planned rotation system of employment was put into effect and in this case demonstrated that it is what work and not direct relief the unemployed sought. Road and mine construction work was spread out to the greatest possible extent. Out of it—especially the road work—has grown a new industry for the district which now provides employment for men who brought to it only the willingness of idle hands. The industry is that of providing red shale, dug from the coal fields, for use in road building and ballasting of railway tracks.

An unemployed relief committee in Calgary has obtained approval of the city council to operate a former hostel as a "jobless girls" dormitory and domestic science school. The committee estimates that 70 girls can be accommodated without extra cost to the city. Unemployed girls are receiving an allowance of $4.50 a week. Board will also be obtained at the hostel for $3.50 a week while allowances will be $1.50 for clothing and other necessities.

Jobless in Edmonton found a way of earning a livelihood without delay. Within a month of city and Along the banks of the Saskatchewan river they panned the sand. Here and there carried away a few particles of gold. Some days they cleaned a dollar's worth.

Acting as liaison officer in the joint administration of construction programmes and general relief efforts is Lieut.-Col. J. S. Harding, Calgary, who has had extensive experience in construction work and organization of large bodies of men.

Cost of relief projects in the province is borne 50 per cent. by the Federal government, 25 per cent. by provincial and 25 per cent. by municipal governments, the amount including material as well as labor costs. The provincial government stipulated that the cities should assist in handling transient jobless. In the larger cities, bush camps will be operated by the provincial government, not absorbed in those of the cities, to take care of unemployed not absorbed in highway and road construction.

Recommendations to aid workless stalled the plight of farmers in south areas. Northern districts with provision and vegetables by the carloads, and fruit and clothing were contributed by other sections of the Dominion. Farmers were asked to send word as to help them meet the lack of fodder through failure in crops to produce revenue.

Opening hundreds of miles of new road construction to thousands of tourists who visit Alberta annually and providing a highway across the central section of the province. The road construction programme has been entered upon by the Alberta government, in co-operation with the federal authorities. Work is now under way and progressing in the cities and planning communities are benefitting.

The greatest benefit, however, provincial authorities expect, will accrue in future years when the well built highways give greater service to city residents, townsfolk and farmers and bring more tourists to the province, thereby helping to increase the wealth of the province.

Linking the East and West through the Rocky and Eastern Alberta, through the Foothills and into the mountains, Alberta and Alberta-British Columbia boundary points, the Alberta government-planned to the Trans-Canada highway. The road extends 950 miles within the boundaries of the province and only 60 miles requires grading and gravelling. Construction of highways to the national parks—chiefly the Lake Louise-Jasper route—and in providing work for unemployed than the Trans-Canada highway is another in the province.

Selection of the Walsh-Medicine Hat-Calgary route for the Trans-Canada highway was made by the Alberta government after consultation with authorities in British Columbia and Saskatchewan, sister provinces, to guarantee a direct road from Manitoba to the Pacific coast.

Provincial authorities are not exactly certain what expenditure will be made on the Trans-Canada section, but the heaviest part will be the unfinished stretch of 60 miles, which the federal and provincial and repaired where required. Entering Alberta on the eastern boundary, at Walsh, the highway stretches to the westward through Medicine Hat, the "gas" city, and then due west to Calgary and Banff.

From Calgary west to Cochrane, 28 miles, there is a stretch of all-weather hard-surfaced highway. A proposal to have the Alberta link the Calgary-Cochrane route is receiving serious consideration but such steps will not be taken immediately. The road is gravelled both east of Calgary and west of Cochrane, and can be traversed at all periods of the year.

REPRODUCE PLAY THAT WAS POPULAR

London (By The Canadian Press) —More than 40 years ago Richard Mansfield thrilled the town with T. R. Sullivan's version of Stevenson's "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." When H. B. Irving produced Comyns Carr's adaptation in 1910 the play was dressed in the fashion of his day; and Sir A. Baughan, theatre critic of the News-Chronicle.

Recently, at the Savoy Theatre a new version of Comyns Carr's adaptation took us back to bustles long feathers in hats and high collars and black waistcoats for men's full dress. Strangely enough, some of the 1885 fashions are now the rage.

The sensentious play itself seems even older than those quaint dresses. Arthur Phillips as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde does us back to the transpontine melodrama. He is a doctor who, addicted to drugs, went the limelight was sure to follow. His sudden changes from Dr. Jekyll to the loathsome Mr. Hyde was cleverly acted, however, and the scenes not the result of makeup. Fisher White, O. H. Mulcaisy Frank Lacy, Daniel Hoden and Ruth Maitland did what they could with the humdrum play along. It was not improved by the introduction of Poole and Utterson of Dr. Jekyll. Young playgoers must not think that the thrillers of older days were as slow as last night's performance."

Every day sufficient rain falls up on the earth to fill a reservoir 60 miles square to a depth of about 10 feet.

THE WAR ZONE IN MANCHURIA

Here is the situation in the Manchurian theatre of war as Chinese and Japanese troops are variously gaining or losing along a wide front. Reports from Japanese sources have indicated the capture of Angangchi and Taitsihar in the latter, in which Chinese soldiers were hopelessly defeated. The checked arrow marks the "Russian sphere" which the Japanese have now penetrated. The shaded portion of the map below the Chinese Eastern line shows the zone occupied by Japan, with its network of railway.

GOLD OUTPUT SHOWS GAIN

Gain 30 Per Cent Despite Drop in Average Grade

Toronto, Ont. (CP) — The Ontario Provincial Department of Mines says the most prosperous section of Ontario's mining industry during the first nine months of the year was gold mining. While the average grade of ore treated in the mills fell from $6.13 per ton in the first nine months of 1930 to $5.56 in 1931, there was a marked increase in the quantity milled which rose from 2,825,397 tons to 3,683,852, or a gain of about 30 per cent. This increase was largely due to the bringing in of the new Dome mill of 1,500 tons daily capacity to the enlarged mills at the Lake Shore and Teck Hughes, the Lake Shore being increased from 1375 tons to 2600 tons per day and the Teck Hughes from 525 tons to 1200 tons. Completion of the new McIntyre mill has had the result of raising the average daily rate of 1930 tons to approximately 1700 to more than 1800 tons for the corresponding month this year, while the Hoyle mill increased from 442 tons to 637 tons. The total tonnage of gold ore milled daily in Ontario during September this year was 14185 as against 10,700 tons for the same month of last year.

Interesting discoveries of gold have been made in 1931. At Red Lake a gold mining find was discovered on McKenzie island by J. A. Munroe who transferred his option to the Cochenour Mines, Ltd. In Swayze township about 18 miles northeast of Kelso on the main line of the Canadian Pacific Railway free gold was found by Ben Kenty brothers in large dark-red quartz veins. In this locality staking became active and about 400 claims have been recorded. A new find of gold was made at Little Long Lake east of Lake Nipigon on the Sudbury-Nipigon branch of the Canadian National Railway and considerable staking followed by prospectors. These three finds were of sufficient promise to warrant examination by departmental geologists, but no reports on these findings have already been made public.

Development work was continued by the Mining Corporation of Canada on their property in the Larchwood township Timiskaming area, and the main shaft has been raised to 250 feet. On the 125-foot level two veins were crosscutting 167 feet in length and over a four-foot width averaged $7.64 and $6.04. On the 250-foot level one shoot for 198 feet showed average values of $17.23 over four feet. Drifting for a length of 78 feet showed $7.09 over 3 ft. 10 inches. Two other narrow veins were noticed branching from the Ashley vein. Diamond drill holes proved the continuity of the deposit to 700 feet in depth. Sinking of the shaft to 300 feet was resumed late in September.

Great activity was also noticeable at Kirkland Lake, where the mineral zones in the Wright-Hargreaves area were developed to greater depths in excellent ore. In the eastern and western extensions of this camp were also actively developed with interesting results. In addition to the intensive activity in the Teck Hughes and Lake Shore, as mentioned above oil flotation has been introduced at the Wright-Hargreaves as a preliminary treatment of crushing, resulting in a higher metal recovery.

Figures of gold output from all sources during the first nine months of 1931 are given by the Ontario Department of Mines, were 21.3 per cent in advance of corresponding figures for 1930. Indications are that the total gold production for the Province in the calendar year 1931 should reach 42 million dollars, a new peak of production added to the total Canadian output in 1930.

LUDGATE CIRCUS EARNS NAME FOR ITS UNTIDINESS

(By Thomas T. Champion)
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

London.—Ludgate Circus at the foot of the hill which is crowned by St. Paul's Cathedral, has now been officially christened. The naming been described by a lecturer before the Royal Society of Arts as being entitled to "the devil's prize for the most untidy crossing." The lecturer was George Mansell, the chief traffic superintendent of the Circus by advertisements, and referred to the "two obelisks of dirty paper" which mark the island's box policeman's rostrum."

Probably no London citizen would invite a visitor to pause awhile in Ludgate Circus to admire the natural beauty of his immediate surroundings. Indeed, Londoners have long accustomed to award the palm for ugliness within their own borders to Charing Cross railway station which struggles across the Thames between the Hungerford railway Bridge and the even more graceful Waterloo Bridge—the two gateways of London, too, who are jealous for their reputation for scenic grandeur, difficulty in turning anything but malevolent eyes upon Queen Anne's Mansions and the Ludgate Circus of their vision. The factory-looking block of flats in the former nearly marks the prospect when one stands under the Hungerford railway suspension bridge hard by in St. James's Park.

The advertising activities of two famous hospitals have also come in for criticism by the Royal Society of Arts. It is alleged that St. George's Hospital, Hyde Park Corner, with its suggestion of the Regency, with its near neighbor the lovely colonnade of Hyde Park Corner, on a site that would be hard to better, has gathered to itself such a collection of collecting boxes, sign boards and advertisements as beggars description. Westminster Hospital, on the Abbey in its right hand, is accused of having "made of its front a sort of jumble sale effect, near Cambridge, England.

SPIRITED SPEECHES

Week-End Meeting to Prove Interesting to Voters

Nomination day got away to a brisk start in one of the finest turnouts Belleville has observed, and although the day did dawn wet, cold and disagreeable, the rain came out as the nominations for the various offices of Mayor, Council, School Trustees and Hydro Commissioners went in—from the o'clock in the morning on.

The chamber of the city hall was filled by the attendance of the electors long before the mayoralty candidates were called upon to state their platforms for the year, and outside their immediate vicinity with a well ordered assembly on the whole, silvered later, however, by some remarks aimed at the presence on every when an attempted in reply to a spirited charge made upon him by exhibit of the Hydro Board, who attempted to show the audience how matters stood. Before the afore several arguments had ensued and order was not again apparently, and will be, rivalry shown.

On Thursday evening, December 3rd, prospective applicants will be allowed to state their platforms before the meeting of the Wharf Street Debating Club in their annual ban fred for civic aspirants, and it is expected that a big meeting will result.

After airing their views at the Wharf Street Club the Mayoralty Aldermanic and Hydro nominees will proceed to the Armouries, where they will be the guests of the Twenty-First Battalion Club at a smoker.

On Friday evening, in the large auditorium of the Y.M.C.A., the night of nights for arguments, recriminations, hot words, personal attacks, counter attacks, explanations and last minute speeches will be held. Fireworks are to be expected. There will be the usual heckling, the clamor of the electors, and the lack of order which to a certain extent is always to be found at any election. And from this melee the next civic year will emerge who will control the city for the coming year.

Mayor's Address.

Mayor O. A. Reid thanked the electors for the honor of the past four years. "I am asking you for your financial support for another year. You think I have been of service to the city. I am asking for a renewal of your confidence," the mayor said. "The mayor and council of Belleville will control the city's affairs for the coming year. The mayor is the servant of the people and has only one vote. I am not a dictator. I am not a boss. I am not a machine man. I am not a party man. I am the servant of the people and I am asking for your support."

The mayor dealt with paving operations of the past year, filtration plant and Hydro matters.

Work Below Estimates

"We have let under a contract this year when the contract price was lower than the estimate," he said. "Every contract was let to the lowest bidder. No one was refused and every contract was by sealed tender. Our record in the contract work is clear."

On the filter the cost so far is well within the estimate of $180,000. The cost is some $160,800 with some minor work to do.

Gas Plant Sale

Touching on the gas plant sale Mayor Reid said the first overtures for sale were made some time ago. Ald. Tice, chairman of the committee, but the Mayor and the rest of the council were in favor of corporation and co-operation. The candidate went into details of the gas plant sale and the expected advantages of the sale, relief from debentures and interest payment of indebtedness to the amount of removal of future deficits from the city and taxes on the $125,000 assessment. After the indebtedness is paid off the city may have about $15,000 less taxes to pay. Taxes reduced to the gas plant in recent years.

City Not Bankrupt

The indebtedness of Belleville was the Mayor's next line. "No one knew Britain was going off the gold standard and Britain went off the gold standard. Now the city bonds were ready for sale. A year ago we advanced the money and we have got our bonds as security.

"We can get all the money we Continued on Page Nine

Dangerous Practice Boys Run Over Arches

Small boys with the dare-devilry of small boys, encouraged by display are seen very often climbing all over the arches on the Upper Bridge. Often few of them climb completely over the arch from one end to another with the nonchalance of youth which make grey and more staid spectators shudder.

If, as might happen, one of these children were to fall from the top of either of these arches it would mean permanent disablement or even death. And we have been informed, the city might be liable to pay damages in unstated amounts if such an unfortunate accident became a reality. Children love to indulge in this dangerous practise have been warned time and again by residents who live nearby but so far their warnings have fallen on deaf ears. It is now lies with the parents to try and check this evil.

Thirteen Aldermen Are Required in Next Year's Council

ONE PER THOUSAND

Thirteen Will Stand as Number Until Next Census in 1941

Belleville council will consist next year of a mayor and thirteen aldermen, not twelve aldermen as during the year 1931 and for years back, as is the word from the city hall because notice from Ottawa has been received there as a result of the recent federal census which gives Belleville a population just under the fourteen thousand mark.

Belleville under the by-law passed years ago under the general system of voting will now accordingly receive one thousand of population. The last census in 1921 showed under thirteen thousand population that the aldermanic contest of the future will be twelve for the past decade.

The twelve-aldermen council is quite large but the addition of the thirteenth man will not materially

PEACE HOPES IN MANCHURIA

Every Prospect For Negotiations in Eastern Trouble

Tokyo, Nov. 30.(AP)—A prospect for direct negotiations between China and Japan brought hope for a Manchurian peace to Tokyo today.

The first basis for the new hope was in a statement issued by Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese charge in Nanking. China will via, it Dr Wellington Koo, Chinese Foreign Minister to discuss the creation of a neutral zone in the territory.

TWO FOR MAYOR AT BRANTFORD

Brantford, Ont., Nov. 30—Mayor Ross L. Beckett and former Mayor M. M. McBride were nominated for the mayoralty race at the nomination proceedings. Only one acclamation was that of Commissioner Reg. Welsh of the Hydro Commission.

John Hill of the Street Railway Commission will be opposed by Ald. W. Cowan and Ald. W. J. Money and Andrew McFarland of the Board of Works.

Aldermanic nominations took place between one and two o'clock.

LATE A. R. THOMPSON

During the funeral of the late A. R. Thompson, whose demise occurred last Tuesday at his home in Toronto, and which interment was made in the Belleville cemetery, the public council chamber of Belleville stood as pall bearers for this distinguished ex-alderman and Belleville resident: W. Thompson, R. J. Mc-Farlane, H. Holland, J. Diamond, W. J. Davison and Arthur McGie.

Several members of the Regional staff of the Canadian National Railway staff in Toronto also motored down to attend the obsequies.

MAYOR OPENS CAMPAIGN AT PINE ST. HALL

Several Aldermen Appear on Platform to Discuss Issues

HYDRO MATTER

Mayor Explains His Stand on Various Projects and on Relief

The opening volley of the municipal battle was aimed and fired at the comparatively small attendance that sat and listened Saturday evening while Mayor Reid, in company with Aldermen Woodley, Mc-Millan, Marshall and Sprackett stood on the platform in Pine Street Hall, on Pine and Chatham Street, and drove home the nails in the planks of the platform and platforms for the coming year.

There were questions hurled at them, questions which showed thought and skill in their handling questions, which showed the way the wind was blowing, but a small appearance in city hall. There were the usual questions, the silly ones, and also the ones that were put and meant to "get the speaker's goat." The answers to them, but there third and one-half solid hours were spent by those five men who are civic honors in outlining their future policies and platforms, and what had been done—explaining the things they hadn't done, and answering questions.

Filtration Plant

Mayor Reid launched at once into the new filtration plant, after his few introductory remarks. "The greatest asset the city has," he declared, "is the water. We have received and "I fought for it tooth and nail. I spent more time on it, and gentlemen, I'm glad to say that we at last have got it. I had for its size it' second to none, and when it is done to prove present disease and sickness. My hopes are clear, fresh water, than anything else Belleville could have had."

Milk Question

At this point the pasteurized milk question skirkin was resurrected and settled with a powder who got up and asked the Mayor about it.

"Yes, I admit that I worked for pasteurization and I take a respon-sibility thrut onto my shoulders—but I'm willing to stand or fall in Belleville—of protecting you and your children—but you have your choice of either; no one is making you buy, nor, mind, we or our civic; you can use what you want. You have given me a your representative for the year, and wanted it and some did not, but I fought for it as I fought for the filtration this year

OXFORD HONOR ON CANADIAN

E.R. Peacock Was Once Teacher at Upper Canada College

London, Nov. 30 (CP)— Oxford University has decided to confer the honorary degree of doctor of civil law upon E. R. Peacock, director of the Bank of England and of Canadian Banks.

Mr. Peacock was born in Glengarry, Ont., and was at one time senior house master at Upper Canada College, Toronto. In 1918 he was reputed to be one of the greatest authorities on finance in the British Empire and was then recognized as a likely successor one day to Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England.

The honorary title of the degree still take place early in the new year.

All in Fun Stagery Reality

New York, N.Y., Nov. 30— They were playing "Thesies."

Clarence Hitchcock took the part of the philanderer—Home Wrecker. His best friend, John Tilker, portrayed the role of the husband who comes home at the end of the second act and finds his wife in the arms of another man.

Just a play, of course; but it was jelly entertainment.

Tilker entered. His saw his make-believe wife in the arms of her make-believe betrayer. He pulled a pistol from his pocket, aimed dramatically—and fired.

The bullet in Hitchcock's head was a genuine death.

Tilker is held for felonious assault.

POLICE LOOK FOR TWO MEN

Shot Girls in Legs When Refused Admittance to Their Room

Montreal, Que., Nov. 30—Detectives were searching today for two men who fired a series of revolver shots through the door of a house of Mayor Street and wounded two women in the legs.

The shots followed upon the door of a house in the small hours of Sunday morning. The occupants refused admittance, emptied their revolvers through the door of the door.

Alice Cote, 26, received three bullets through her leg and another in the hip, while Alice Stanley, 19, was shot twice in the leg. Both women were taken to a hospital and were reported as not critically injured.

Other residents of the house rushed to a window in time to see two men jump into an automobile and drive away.

SECURES LOT FOR PARKING

Ald. MacMillan Gets Fine Space For City After Interview

Parking space in the business section of the city has become sometimes unobtainable any additional space secured for parking purposes is a distinct civic asset. Ald. Dan MacMillan, chairman of the Public Works Committee of the City Council, has augmented the local parking space considerably by securing the vacant lot adjoining the Belleville Motor Sales Ltd. on the Mc-Laughlin Motor Car Company, and secured permission to use the lot during the day time as a parking lot for free parking, which will be very much appreciated by the city as it is very centrally located, and by the business public generally.

PATRONAGE JOBS AT WASHINGTON

Washington, D.C., Nov. 30 (By The Canadian Press)—The capital of the United States is a city of petty city, since all of its citizens are directly or indirectly employed in government work—will have the chance to compensatorily tiny group of unemployed increased by 400 when the Democrats reorganize the House of Representatives. The jobs of doormen, barbers, elevator operators, pages, clerks and the position of clerk of the House, make up the list of the patronage jobs and are given by party in power. Each job is likely to Democrats or Republicans as the case may be.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN TO PRODUCE PLAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 30. — Charlie Chaplin's laughs are to be given Britain and frequent visits to the continental countries are explained in the discovery that the comedian is writing a play about Napoleon, says the New York Times. The play is not for the screen, but for the legitimate stage, the paper says. The role probably to be played by Charlie Chaplin himself, according to the Evening Standard as saying. Two acts of the play, based on the Napoleonic story that Napoleon escaped from St. Helena, are completed.

Will Take Effect on Dec. 1st According to Information

MANY CHANGES

Office Has Been in Existence Since 1910

The Divisional Office of the C.N.R. express department will be non-existent after business as from December 1st according to information received this morning by Chas. Griffin, Divisional Chief Clerk. The office was opened on September 1st 1910 in Belleville and since that time has controlled all express business in the Belleville Division. The staff A. F. Sullivan, superintendent, George H. Griffin, chief clerk, O. H. Waterhouse, traffic supervisor, Raymond Harris express agent and the three stenographers have made many friends in the city with their courteous treatment and excellent service although the Divisional office will be closed, customers can still handle business similar to in the past.

Due to the closing of the office there will be many chantes. The Superintendent, A. F. Sullivan will be put on the road to look after the duties of traffic supervisor for the Belleville Division, Geo. Griffin, Jr., Griffin, chief clerk, will take one month's holiday and will be transferred to the city will take over the Belleville express agency. Mr. O. H. Waterhouse, traffic supervisor of the Belleville Division will move to Toronto, to take over the same duties in the Toronto Division. Raymond Harris, present agent at Belleville will move to Orillia on Mr. Griffin's return. Miss Bessie Bell, stenographer in the office will take a similar position in the commercial office at Toronto, while miss Agnes Hall will be an informal as per given by John Simon at Ottawa. Mr. Bert Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer and St. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, were the other guests.

The belief has been that the new British anti-dumping measure in which France is also interested, were discussed and probably also Germany's financial, especially the German situation.

MIX IS BETTER

HOLLYWAAD, Cal. Nov. 30—The condition of Tom Mix, screen and circus cowboy, showed signs of definite improvement today although he still was critically ill. Physicians expressed themselves as "very optimistic."

Mix is suffering from peritonitis and pleurisy caused by a ruptured appendix. He had a slight cold to contend with, but his physicians did not expect that would result in any complications.

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP)— Confusion between names and addresses led to Reginald Sirembie of this city spending 36 hours in jail on a charge originally intended for his brother Ivan. He was convicted by Magistrate Burbidge for not attending his children to school. Officials of the Board of Education secured Sirembie's release when they learned of the error.

MYSTERY TRIP ENDS TODAY

M. Flandin, French Finance Minister, Has Returned Home

London, Nov. 30.—The "Mystery" visit to Great Britain of M. Flandin, French Finance Minister, ended today in the early hours.

The visit had stirred political circles over the week-end.

Sir John Simon, British Foreign Secretary, and a number of friends saw M. Flandin off. The premier minister had declined to discuss the object of his visit except to say, that it was a shooting trip. He was a member of Sir Gideon Murray's party which went pheasant hunting in Buckinghamshire on Saturday.

Nothing of his visit was revealed, nevertheless, that he was also a guest last night at an informal dinner given by Sir John Simon at Ottawa. The Right Honorable Chancellor of the Exchequer and St. Hon. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, were the other guests.

The belief has been that the new British anti-dumping measure in which France is also interested, were discussed and probably also Germany's financial, especially the German situation.

Harry Turley's Grocery, Lodge Hall and Rose Grocery Lost

STOPPED BY WALLS

Aid Given By Nearby Village Fire Department

Frankford, Nov. 30 (Special)— Destroyed by fact fire, in the very last few years the village of Frankford would seem to have had its full quota of fire losses, especially in the mercantile section, yet again early this morning at 3.30 yesterday morning, once again the citizenry were startled by the loud and dread alarm of "fire," this time in one of the finest mercantile and paying blocks of the business section, 130 and 132 Main street, the L.O.L. No. 240, and occupied above as Caldwell Hall and Auditorium and dining rooms, and below by two stores occupied by H. W. Reid and H. Turley, each carrying full lines of groceries, provisions, etc. all of which were destroyed, a total loss by fire and water damaged.

The fire alarm was given at 3.30 a.m. by Mr. Harry Grant, who, as grocer, occupies the ground floor of the building next to the upper flats, where frame partitions made excellent feeding ground for the flames.

Within a very few minutes the fire brigade were playing two lines of hose into the building but owing to the dense smoke, it was impos-

No Thanksgivings Over Winnings by Race Stable

(By Thomas T. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Nov. 30.— Canadian Press Cable)—Special thanks for "success which crowns all honest labor" last night was offered in the Chapel of Manton House, which adjoins the Manton training stable of Leod Manton. During the late racing season this stable of 30 horses won winnings of $470,000.

The thanksgiving service, conducted by Rev. C. H. Matthews, Chaplain of Marlborough College, one of Great Britain's historic schools, was reported to be the first thanksgiving. The chaplain turned a strong denial declaring that the gist of the opening hymn "Now Thank we all our God."

The chaplain later delivered an address in which he said "newspaper people all worship mammon, so they put because that this was to be a day of Thanksgiving for 94-year-old Leod Manton, the reason was what tickled them—mammon. They do not know what they hurt, or whom they distress if they get a little themselves."

BICYCLES ARE TAKEN AND FOUND

Two bicycles were stolen Saturday night from near the Belle Theatre. Later they were found by Constable Beard on Pinnacle street in the possession of several boys. The wheels were returned to the owners and the boys who took them were ordered to report at chief constable's office at ten o'clock Monday afternoon.

BOYS GET THEIR REWARD AT HOME

A resident of the East Hill noticed a light moving in his garage about five-thirty o'clock Sunday evening. Going to investigate he approached the garage quietly and was about to enter, when two voices from the dark interior ordered him to "Stick them up." Slamming the door the greatly surprised citizen locked it and hastened for the police. Constable Beard responded to the summons and when the garage was opened two small boys were found to be the "desperate characters." One boy was eleven years old and the other twelve years old. The constable took the boys to their parents and told them of their adventure. The parents promised prompt action in the matter of punishment and also the enforcement of discipline which it is hoped will cause them to be real good boys in the future.

SKIMMING ROCKS TUMBLES IN RIVER

"You're all wet", had a new significance of meaning to one of the young people on Saturday afternoon when he walked too close to the bank of the river and down he dun at Canniffon and took an unexpected bath without the formality of removing his clothes.

It seems that the man in question was engaged in the gentle pastime of skimming rocks over the surface of the placid water; one particularly appealing stone, owing to its flatness and proximity to the near the edge of the river bank had before a fatal attack reached it. In an endeavour to reach it the sod turned under the river bank in the cold water. After an interval of sputtering the above was reached, and a small fire was built and the wet clothes was wrung out and dried over the blaze. The humorous feature was made in the dunk of the evening.

$30,000 LOSS IN FRANKFORD FIRE

sible to enter, and, at the back, the firemen had to work from the roof of the main house which was ablaze itself underneath. However, after a preliminary application of the fire hose, a bucket brigade kept the flames down, and away from the oil tanks, allowing a stream of streams to be concentrated on the principal building. At first, in spite of all efforts, the fire seemed to be gaining, so an alarm was sent to Stirling and Trenton, and in an incredibly short space of time, Stirling's very efficient brigade with their hose reel, under the able supervision of Chief Deputy Lagrow, were on the spot. Chief Lagrow took over the supervision of the Front Street fighting, and Chief Carter the rear, and immediately by the results of properly organized work was evident, the flames were effectually subdued, the supply of water kept continuously pumping until after 7.00 a.m.

Extent of Loss

Mr. T. Turley's store is complete ly gone, but fire fighting gained headway in there before being seen and the mistake being by Abbaze, concentrated effort was needed to keep the fire down for protection of adjoining buildings. The store occupied by R. N. Rose, while kept clear of actual blaze, was a total loss, being completely ruined by water and smoke. Both stores carried a very complete line of groceries and fine. Rose a fine line of harness and accessories, and auto tires. The adjoining clocks, those occupied by J. M. Bell & Son, G. F. Grant, and A. J. Sprague, suffered some small loss, but not much damage but no severe loss.

Too much cannot be said for the timely aid from Stirling, their brigade journeying to the work under the very able direction of Chief Lagrow, showing the result of organized fire fighting and discipline. And in spite of all cavilling and fault finding at Frankford, the splendid fire brigade did their work in a manner that, to the initiated leaves no room for any reproach.

The loss was heavy, the building and machinery wreck, leaving only the ocitice walls of solid brick sentinelling the smoke blackened sky and framing, and the shop keepers suffering severely from loss of trade through the Christmas season, but there is some little help left in the village. The complete loss may run closely to $30,000 and while partially covered by insurance, not the most serious loss ever sustained in the village.

In this connection the same building contained a quantity of wool in Dec. ember, 1929, when H. W. Rose's store was ruined by fire, and considerable damage to the building. Some residents will remember the loss of 1868 when the present block was razed to the ground the building being erected following that fire.

Mr. Jos. Carr in charge, of Frankford, is suffering from the consequences of rousing a bucket nail in his foot during the fire operations and Mr. Macallister also suffering the effects of a severe fall from the ladder on which he was climbing to the roof ridge—but both are reporting good re-

Annual Commencement Exercises Are Held

PICTON, Nov. 30 (Special)—The annual commencement exercises of Picton Collegiate were held in the assembly hall of the school on Friday evening, when, in addition to a program, the largest crowd in many years gathered to do the interesting event in school life.

Mr. Howard Lawson, chairman of the P. C. I. school board, presided over a high class program. The school students sang "Land of Hope and Glory," after which the pupils of Form III gave a delightful operetta play, "Autumn Blooming". The parts were cleverly taken.

Miss Frances Pearse sang "Ballin' Through" with fine effect.

Inspector Stothers presented the boys' and girls' medals and the girls of forms 3S and 11C presented a series of physical exercises in a very uniform manner.

Mr. Glenn Hoffman, head of the commercial department, presented the commercial certificates and Mr. A. C. Shaver, B.C.L., principal, presented diplomas to the graduates.

Mr. Lawson, on behalf of Mr. Dow's leadership sang "Oh, Who Will Build the Downs", and was very heartily applauded.

Medals for honors in final examinations were presented by Mayor George Welch, Dr. J. H. Cryan, Rev. S. R. Parker, Rev. Peter, J. R. Wootton.

The girls of IIA gave a graceful dance, being gowned in colorful costumes.

As Douglas Burr was not able to be present to give the valedictory, Mr. Shaver read it. It was very short, interesting talk to the pupils and parents.

"A parade of wooden soldiers" by the girls of form 1 was very good. Judge R. H. McLean presented the medals and prizes.

The Glee Club was heartily encored following their second selection, "Sweet and Low".

An interesting feature was the presentation of the Governor General's Powers, who acted as accompanist, by Mr. Dow. The presentation will be in turn was presented with a remembrance of the school. The audience gave freely of his time in training the pupils singing.

Rev. Cecil Winter presented the memorial scholarships. All rose as the name of Miss Ida Mae Hyndman who gave their lives for king and country during the war was read.

"God Save the King" brought the evening to a pleasant close.

Graduates, prize winners, and medal winners were as follows:

DR. J. CALDWELL DIES AT AGED 79

Well-known Dentist Passes After Long Illness

Belleville will mourn the passing away of its oldest and most well-known citizens in the death of Dr. Joseph Caldwell, who passed away quietly on Sunday, November 29th, in his 80th year. Dr. Caldwell had been ailing for the past year and his death came as a shock, however.

Born at Zion's Hill on February 1, 1852, Dr. Caldwell was the last of a family of twelve. Owing to his delicate at the age of 20, he commenced the study of dentistry under the late Dr. George Walker and at the time of his retirement three years ago was the oldest practising dentist in Belleville.

Always keenly interested in municipal affairs, Dr. Caldwell served one term as alderman for Victoria ward. He was a member of the Methodist church, a member of the Orange Order, a member of the Canadian National Exhibition was a member of the Independent Order of Foresters.

It was in the culture of flowers during his latter years that the deceased was greatly interested and his rose garden at his home on Bridge street East is known as one of the most beautiful show places.

Dr. Caldwell was also prominent in real estate having bought many valuable properties which he improved then made several very fine business blocks.

Mr. Caldwell was married in 1878 to Miss Margaret Conant of Oshawa, who died in 1916. In 1918 he married Mrs. Anna Hicky of Belleville, who predeceased him.

He is survived by three sons, Dr. C. A. Caldwell of Belleville, Dr. W. and Mr. J. O. Caldwell of Belleville and one daughter, Mrs. Hilton Jones. He was a member of Bridge Street United Church.

MAYOR OPENS CAMPAIGN

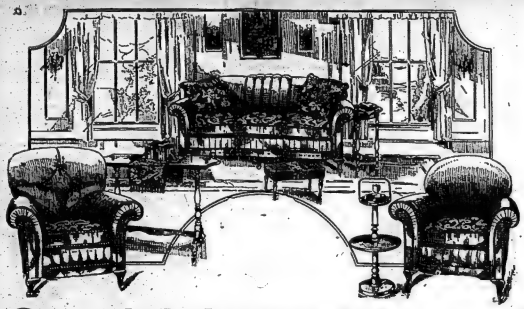
—North Front Street and East Hill—Mayor Ellis said that rather than that marked on the tender, I would prefer Dundas Street, Front to Dundas Street and Station Street, and Station Street from North Front Street to come. And, gentlemen, I think you will find a record of achievement when we can point with pride not only to the fine roads we have built, but to the jobs done and done well, but also to the saving of $50,000 in the country.

Gas Plant Sale

Here the Mayor warmed up, "And now for the gas plant. Why are you to come forward and say that they can hand me rental that is the gas plant was a losing proposition. Why, when we took over the gas plant we had eighteen thousand dollars set down to our credit account on the interest. Now we have sold it and realized that not only that we are, well protected—and have left over in the bank enough to pay bonds and dollars in the bank after paying the outstanding accounts.

"Some say the Belleville is bankrupt, that our bonds are hypothecated — we have $50,000 in the bank and we are all right, gentlemen They are all right, they are as good as gold, the day that we offered our bonds Great Britain were going to cash standard. Chaos reigned. When Great Britain went down so did the value of our bonds. We could have sold them but why not wait until the market was sure a little higher? Also they say we are overtaxed in Belleville. Tax rate. We're not, gentlemen. Out of this list of twenty-seven big reports of which I have here in my hand, Belleville is the only one that has taken sixteen of them and only a few cents in debt than ten. This is per capita debt. We have only eleven months of this year our finances—and remember we have buildings and various constructions that we have to pay for—and here the figures of last year. This year, the tax rate was 2318.855. The building construction. Does that look as if Belleville was bankrupt, or as if outsiders had lost faith in the city?

Hydro Progress



"And now comes a question that has been agitating every one—and wrangled since the commission was started. I'm glad to speak on Hydro, gentlemen. First, last and always, I'm a booster. I have been a booster for 30 years ago. Our Hydro system that from a debt of $178,000 a few years ago we have climbed steadily—and don't forget that from loss have made reductions in rates—until we now have a surplus of $64,000. Steadily but steadily being paid off."

"Now I'm not a politician by any member, "there has been considerable talk about replacing Noe for the benefit of the 'pres' would like to ask you your stand in this matter?"

Esplanade

"I'm for it! I was for it from the start. I fostered the movement and I have been for years. I have been paid for itself. But now I have been paid for itself. But now I have been paid for itself. But now

SUGGESTION OFFERED

Time is moving swiftly forward to the Christmas season and as likely as in the past most people will leave their holiday shopping to the last possible date when everyone else is seeking to make purchases and the tired salespeople are endeavoring to render every one service. Every year the question is before the public and the advantages of early buying are stressed but still as business people are ready to serve and appreciate even the last dollar of trade, it is quite probable that the situation which has always developed in the nation-wide has always developed in the last few days will be repeated in the year 1931.

Numbers of proposals have been made in local with this question and the Montreal Star offers an idea that business houses and other establishments where women and girls are employed give these employees a half-holiday sometime between the first of December and the fifteenth of the month so that they may do their shopping. The plan has, it is said, worked well for several years in New York City to the benefit of all concerned, shoppers, salespeople and employers. How it will work out in the small cities is of course yet to be tried out.

NO FEARS FOR DRAMA

Those who fear that the legitimate theatre is a prey to the bowwows because of talking pictures have much to learn and have yet to become optimistic instead of chronic pessimists.

Canada is getting this winter a good fare of British drama and is showing in the larger cities its appreciation of the higher class. The Birmingham repertory company and the Abbey Theatre company from Dublin, Ireland, are in Can-Players from Britain which has a dozen or more other companies to the per-to tour Canadian cities and each section of dramatic presentation, which eschews the star system for something much greater—the balanced company with what it amounts to—every player a star.

Such a system cannot be eliminated by the star system which prevails in screen versions which depend largely on the star whose name is known throughout the world. Now the star system distorts though it does produce some amazingly brilliant players, but these would have just as great an opportunity in repertory as in the star system, for the repertory system tends to raise the acting quality of every member of the company while the star system lauds the star and if necessary plucks many a feather out of the wing of a lesser light in order to show off the star by contrast.

The actual sight of men and women struggling under circumstance on the stage will not fail to appeal to theatregoers.

The two and a half to three hours of acting required by a play is longer than that by a film and therein again is the strength, for the spoken drama is an art of entertainment. Only in case of one act and short plays are two plays put on the same program. The result is a unity of effect.

If the theatre houses have largely disappeared, they will come again with the people and the demand for them will be there and the men seen in action will never give up its appeal for man.

Some Belleville people saw the great Abbey Theatre Players from Dublin at Kingston last week and enjoyed the presentations by possibly the greatest artistic organization in the world which has built up an Irish dramatic literature and has attracted attention to the study of Irish problems. No talkie picture with the finest direction can ever secure the power to move men's souls as the Abbey Players for their work is the result of decades of training, perfect efficiency in dramatic presentation.

COMMENT

Increase in the licence of motorcars for the coming year in the Province of Ontario will create no surprise as there has been some talk of an advance. The increase announced on Wednesday set at rest the rumors about the increase when it was stated that the recommendation of the Hon. Leopold Macaulay in regard to the increase was accepted by the Government. The only thing to fear now is an increase in the gasoline tax with the prosperity of Queen getting ready to pay seven cents on a gallon.

It was noted that in the reception of Viscount Snowden of Ickornshaw in the House of Lords the ceremonial was curtailed and modified owing to the crippled condition of the new noble. Even the strongest customs have been themselves in the past new and novel and new customs are being created all the time. Should most newcomers to the Lords be in the physical condition of the new viscount, a new ceremonial would be adopted.

A CELEBRITY'S DIARY
By Aline Michaelis

She names them all, the books she read,
The tale of her work and play,
The cities she saw as the swift years sped,
Her journeyings far away.

She wrote them there for the world to read
In the years to come, maybe;
Her story of struggle, of want and need,
Of courage and constancy.

She left a record of fame's bright blaze,
Of stirring and strange events,
A glimpse of her crowded, colorful days,
Of life, full-trimmed, intense.

LAST THURSDAY was Thanksgiving Day in the United States, just a little later than Canada's but a fixed date, the last Thursday in the month of November. Uncle Sam's most important festivals are in November, state and presidential elections and such like, all fixed dates, like fixed stars, no monkeying with them, they just got to have them on the dates fixed whether it seems convenient or not for the party at the moment in power. Uncle Sam celebrated Thanksgiving Day this year in approved style with plenty of turkey, cranberry sauce and trimmings, but his biggest effort was in seeing that while some ate turkey, others did not go hungry. Millions and millions of dollars are being handed over in the United States for the Unemployment Relief Fund. New York City alone having a deficit of seventeen million dollars which will be largely oversubscribed. Last winter was a time of the unemployed and of the great cities of the United States and the good people over there are determined that they will have plenty of cash reserves to cope with any situation which may arise this winter. One of the big relief features will be donated by the national entertainers who have already given much of their time to the task of awakening the public to the needs of the occasion. Theatres all over the United States will set aside evenings when the receipts will go to community relief funds, so that people can get a dollar's worth of entertainment and at the same time give a dollar to the relief fund. The relief drive is nation-wide starting with President Hoover in the White House and reaching right out to Will Rogers in Beverley Hills, California, then right slap back to the rock-ribbed coast of Maine and Seth Parker and his neighbor in Jonesport, together with the Stebbins Boys of Bucksport, Maine, with their general store and newspaper of the air. Yes-sirree, Uncle Sam is merely getting down into the mire in a big way this fall and going to show the world just how gold-danged prosperous he really is by refusing to let anyone go hungry and cold this winter, even the dyed in the wool hoboes who are likely to get so ashamed that they will be looking for work next spring.

Other Papers' Opinions

CENTRAL HEATING

Central heating is far from being an experiment. It has been tried out in other cities and has always found advantageous and a paying proposition. Yet, although proposals for its introduction here date back some years, and though plans have been prepared for such a plant as has been recommended, there has been, up to the present time, no prospect of such an undertaking becoming an established fact.

The City Council should have no difficulty in determining whether or not it is prepared at the present time to embark on the undertaking of such magnitude. The Toronto Hydro-Electric System, which has also Hydro-Electric System, which has also recommended the installation of such a system, should be in a position to say whether it intends to go ahead with such a work. If there is any prospect in the near future of the construction of a central heating plant under the Commission's auspices, it is unnecessary to consider the application of private promoters. The Toronto should not be indefinitely deprived of the benefits of a system of this kind by any dog-in-the-manger attitude.

If a franchise is granted, it should be had otherwise than by private enterprise, there seems no sufficient reason why the necessary franchise should not be granted. Like any franchise which permits the use of city streets must adequately protect the public interest, but there must contain provision for the work being taken over by the city at any advantageous terms if the city should decide at any time to undertake the use such an option.—Toronto Telegram.

WHEAT QUOTAS

The announcement from Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of his new agricultural policy providing a 75 per cent. subsidy to wheat growers grown wheat is the second major departure in British policy since the new National Government has advocated.

It is hardly likely that there will be any announcement of wheat growing quotas for this Dominion, or for other parts of the Empire, for the time has not yet got to be threshed out at the Economic Conference at Ottawa.

When the question was brought up in the House of Commons recently Canada showed no great enthusiasm for a wheat quota, and there are many sound judges of the situation who see in such a plan more interference with the wheat market more danger than potential good.

Wheat has been a speculative and most gratifying appreciation in price during the last few months and the gain of ten or eleven cents per bushel means that the Canadian nearly million dollars has been added to the wealth of Canada. Reports from that this rise in value will continue is probably the most encouraging sign of the day.—Montreal Star.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper pop was smoking and thinking his private chair and ma was in saying, Willyum, Nora would like to speak to pop, so wake to ask your advice.

What about, Nora, pop Feet sake, pop said, and ma said, it seems to be something about the stock market.

Yes sor, Nora said. Mister Jones, her in, all the bad stock market advices, have been in the papers, so perhaps mine will be worth hearing.

And Nora came in and pop said, Is it true, Nora, that you have a tip about the stock market is to get as far away from it as possible and then stay away from it, or have a terrible long name when they was asking a bunch of questions and answers on things with stingy little short names, and besides you can't get near enough a tip on it and he gets around a lot and he ant to know if anybody does.

Ill look it up and see what its doing today, but I fear me nearly, pop said, And he started to look on the financial page, and after a bent see it all, it must be a cerb stock, yes, here it is, Amalgamated Standard International Look and Keys, by golly it look as if it was worth at 9 cents today, yes gods what a milk man, you've made over 500 dollers.

Glory be, I realy, pop decided a little vacation for years and now Im going to take it, I will be leaving at the end of the week, Nora said. And pop was down in the chair again, ma saying, Now isent that terrible, after we've got used to all her bad habits she has to go and leave us, she had no bizness to risk her money likes that, the stock market is nuthing but a gamble, and anyway if it was such a sure thing why aint dident she tell us annout it?

And she got up from the paper and started to look at the Situations Wanted.

GREENSHIELDS SENT TO TRIAL

Campbellford Witnesses Show Sympathy For Prisoner

Campbellford, Nov. 30 — After hearing the evidence of eight witnesses this morning, County Magistrate Floyd on Saturday committed for trial Hugh Greenshields on a charge of murder.

It is alleged that Greenshields clubbed to death one of his sons, Harold, aged five years, and his brother Walter, aged eight, into insensibility.

Greenshields was not called to the stand, but his statement to the police was entered as an exhibit, as were a club, an iodine bottle, and a razor found in the Greenshields' home.

Greenshields lacked both a shave and hair-cut. When the charge was read he did not reply. Mr. F. C. Britton, Crown counsel with P. C. Richardson of Cobourg, for the defence, reserved his election from pleading since his client was not capable of instructing counsel.

Insanity Defence

That insanity would be at least one angle of the defence was inferred from the questions asked witnesses by defence counsel.

Mrs. George Rutherford, the Greenshields' elderly landlady, was almost tearful as she gave her evidence. She said the details she had given at the inquest, she claimed Greenshields' wife told her, were kind to his children. She had performed services for the family for years along as well as the Greenshields. She could not remember him ever having been angry with his children.

All the witnesses seemed sympathetic towards the prisoner, but it was Mrs. Rutherford who created the opinion that Greenshields was insane because of worry. "I was worry any man," she said, "to have his wife go to work to support him and two children."

Dr. Lapsley said Greenshields was not his patient, but he attended him once when Dr. Ross was out of town. He had been either the Sunday or Monday before the alleged murder. At that time Greenshields complained that he could not sleep and required help. "That," the doctor said, was caused by worry.

Life of Worry

At that time Greenshields had told him of the struggle he had had for years, which was the cause of his condition. He was a farmer for eight years he had sown eight crops and reaped five. Greenshield said, he left his own farm and got a city experience. With the money he saved he went to Scotland. Returning to Canada he had a club foot. He was injured and brought to Campbellford. He was worrying because he could not see how to make a living for his dependents.

Dr. Ross then attended Greenshields on the morning of the alleged murder. At that time Greenshield said he had taken iodine. As an antiseptic, the witness thought.

Greenshields had told him also he thought he had a cancer, he suggested.

In answer to Mr. Richardson Dr. Britnell would not admit Greenshields to the club which had been designed for any particular type. Greenshields, he regarded as to be whittled as it was; it was not suitable for him. He had supplied piece of wood to assume some weight.

Provincial Constables McArthur and Carey gave evidence. McArthur warned Greenshields at the time of arrest about any statements he made. He witnessed the statement taken from the prisoner by Carey.

Carey said a doctor had examined the prisoner and pronounced him capable of knowing what he said at the time.

The prisoner's statement, taken after a careful warning, and read to him in spite of his strong objection, was a life history—a long story of struggle and years of bad luck.

Remembered Scene

It concluded by Greenshields remembering that he had left him to be still when she got up the fatal morning. She did not remember if he took the iodine before or after killing. He remembered a lot of struggling around, being handcuffed and taken to jail.

There was no argument by either counsel. In a quiet voice Magistrate Floyd committed Hugh Greenshields, stand- up. The prisoner listened carefully. The magistrate said: "There is nothing for me to do but send you up for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction."

The crowd milled and jammed its way to the door. Under the wall telephone, Mrs. George Rutherford, a little, lame old lady, stood with her hands to her face, and wept loudly at Greenshields. She was taken to the prisoner. Greenshields wept as this old lady took her hand and bent over him to whisper words of comfort or perhaps to deliver a message from his wife. Several others of his neighbors also stopped for a word with the prisoner.

POPE ENJOINS SPIRIT FAITH

Bids Catholics Throughout World Face Hardships Bravely

VATICAN CITY, Nov. 30. — Pope Pius XI Sunday night urged Catholics throughout the world to face "the present world hardships" with a spirit of faith and penance.

"There are many sore souls nowadays who are the target of persecutions as is happening in Russia, in Mexico and in Spain," the Pope declared in addressing cardinals, prelates and officials of sacred rites. He read a decree of the heroism of virtues of Venerable Ven. Gemma Galeani, referring to her "readiness to suffer for Christ's sake."

"The present world hardships are certainly serious and cruel," he said. "We are able to see personally that difficulties increase because we are the centre of universal paternity in which all seek refuge and from which all are expecting aid.

"Sufferers must recognize that hardships are the inscrutable decree of God's will and they must accept everything from the hand which is to be blessed even when it takes away what is dear.

The Pope said his recent appeal for aid to the persecuted Mexican people was directed to the poor rather than the wealthy, because he had personal experience that "the poor respond to such appeals more liberally, even in the midst of sorrow and penury."

CAR IS STRUCK TWO ARE DEAD

Capt. Lavigne and Brock Batten of Canada Lines, Killed

PORT ARTHUR, Nov. 30.—Capt. W. A. Lavigne, of Midland, skipper of the Canada Steamship Lines steamer Chimeneas and Brock A. Batten, district manager of the Canada Steamship Lines, were killed when struck by a car at Marathon, Ont., while walking from the steamer to a waiting freight at the inter-city crossing last night.

Captain Lavigne was instantly killed. Brock Batten suffered concussion and other injuries and died two hours later in the McKellar Hospital here, without regaining consciousness.

Mr. Batten was driving Captain Lavigne from the Chimeneas to his boat, which is in Port Arthur.

Captain Lavigne, master of the Chimeneas, one of the largest of the Canada Steamship Lines freighters several seasons, leaves a widow and three sons.

Brock Batten has been located here for twenty-five years, and he and his widow and four children, three girls and a boy from four up to twenty-one, live in Bamberg. He was formerly in Collingwood, and he was the first manager of the branch established here. Since 1926 he has been associated with lake shipping all his life. He was about fifty-two years of age.

JOHN D. REESE DIES SUDDENLY

Bonesetter Who Became Internationally Famous is Stricken

Youngstown, O., Nov. 30.—John D. Reese, internationally famous bone setter, died of heart attack last night at a hospital here. He was 81 years old.

From a steel worker in his native Wales, Reese rose to a place in politics among the world's healers. While still a child he assisted his father in setting bones from an aged Welsh healer.

His fame grew, and when he came to the United States in 1887 he found a laborer in Pittsburgh rolling mills and later in Youngstown, his gifts gradually took him from the steel pits to the healer's chair.

For many years he was bitterly opposed by members of the medical profession, but by 1900 his reputation had grown so great the Ohio legislature passed a special act enabling him to practise the profession of "bonesetter."

TRADE WORLD CONFIDENT IN FUTURE VIEW

Rainbow Edition of Toronto Mail and Empire is Symposium

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP) — Aglow with confidence and optimism in the business future of Canada, the Toronto Mail and Empire Saturday published a special edition called "Canada's Business Rainbow." "From Halifax to Victoria," says the frontispiece, "the sun has broken through; the business rainbow appears. The tide of business has turned. The ground is firmer underfoot. The rewards of constructive toil again are being sought. One thing needed now to assure permanency to the revival, is that Canadians renew their will to spend on the things they need."

Straightout legislators, professors of economics, bankers, industrial leaders, retail and chain store executives from all parts of Canada testify to the business revival of the Dominion.

Says Prof. Stephen Leacock of McGill University: "We need an assured confidence in our own country and our own way of living; an intense and challenging public opinion as to public honesty; expenditure on any and every reproductive enterprise that develops our resources for an assured return; corporate enterprise, rewarded liberally for success; bigger and better penitentiaries; unite the St. Lawrence with Chicago and, if need be, with Omaha and Salt Lake City; join with England in a big scheme of inter-Imperial guaranteed trade; cut out reparations; give the Germanians two-fifty each; kiss the Russians good-bye as soon as we can, let in the immigrants again; bring in brains and money and capital; be just as anxious to buy as to sell; straighten up the currency so that it will do both equally well."

"There are distinct indications of economic recovery in the west," asserts Prof. W. W. Swanson, professor of Political Economy at the University of Saskatchewan. "The crop," he adds, "has turned out much better than was expected and there has been a steady improvement of prices." After referring to the courage, enterprise, hope and confidence encountered on the prairies, Prof. Swanson stated: "I think it may be safely said that no modern nation is in a fundamentally stronger or happier condition than the Dominion of Canada."

"There is good sweating," writes Harry R. Muir of the Wing Standard, Kingston, Ont., "that nine million some hundreds of thousands of the people of Canada are 'on the job' steadily at work, drawing regular wages or supported by those who are at work.

"This business 'rainbow' does not mean, be construed, that depression will never return. It means that prosperity surely follows and has followed since the beginning of historical record. . . . During the past seventy-seven years there have been nineteen periods of prosperity or expansion of business and an equal number of periods of depression, or contraction of business."

"Faith in Canada? Why, it's the most obvious thing in the world," comments Sir Robert Falconer, president of the University of Toronto. He adds: "If there's any possibility for a great future in any part of the globe it is right here in Canada."

J. W. Curran publisher of the Sault Ste. Marie Daily Star appeals for the development of the iron ore industry in Canada. "Canada if it is to have a self-sustaining iron and steel industry," he writes, "must develop its iron ore resources. Until Canadian blast furnaces are using Canadian ore the industry is on an unstable foundation.

"Despite the fact there are deposits of millions of tons of this ore in Northern Ontario, Mr. Curran continues, not one ton is being mined at present. It is only a question of time until the iron ores of Northern Ontario, particularly those of Algoma, will be contributing their share to the National wealth.

"It is our obligation to mankind," says Prof. Humphrey Mitchell of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ont. "To believe and cast aside the gloomy fears that have plagued us so lamentably of late. He adds "under the surface, there is something which means that the forces are gathering that will carry us forward to another great wave."

RAIL SHARES HIT NEW LOW

This Class of Stock Lower Than in The Nineties

NEW YORK, N. Y., Nov. 28. — Pressure against the securities markets materialized somewhat today, but the stubborn decline persisted with railroad share price averages registering a new minimum since the 1890's.

Despite several bright spots in the week-end mercantile and trade reviews, the fact that acceleration in activity in the automobile industry, with consequent stimulus to steel, has been more tardy than expected, appeared to cast a dark shadow, so far as speculative sentiment was concerned.

Losses in shares ranged from fractions to about three points. There were fractional recoveries from the lowest in the final few minutes, as shorts apparently took profits, but the list closed with a heavy tone. The turnover for the short session exceeded three-quarters of a million shares, as the time was stock pressed for sale in important volume.

The week-end estimate of steel mill operations in the Youngstown area indicated a rate of about 32 per cent. of capacity for next week, a decline of about two points.

Public utility shares held about steady. In view of the large stocks of metals on hand, and the many vague character of reports of the final acquiescence of Belgium producers in a curtailment plan, the stock market was inclined to pursue a waiting policy toward the base metal industry.

U. S. Steel dropped nearly 2 points to a new low of 53½, and rallied but slightly from the bottom.

Radio dropped a point to 7½, a new bottom. The preferred "B" stock lost ½ points.

The Love Package

by Mary Ethel White

"But Jim," Mary Lee explained carefully, "I'm the pastor, this is Wednesday; surely you haven't forgotten."

"I know, honey," Jim had answered" but I thought that maybe tonight you'd like to go walking instead."

"Oh," she gasped in a quick little breath that tried to hide her disappointment, "all right, Jim."

Mary Lee placed the receiver back on the hook slowly, her mouth trembled just a bit at the corners and she could feel the hurt in her almost violet eyes. Jim and the third time Jim had called her to go walking. Two weeks before when they were to go dancing; well, it was hot and she hadn't minded so much, then. Besides there had been a refreshing cake stand. Later, Jim said it was too hot a night to cool off, and she'd laughed a little. That hadn't been so bad, either, and on the porch swing, when he'd kissed the tiny freckle near her mouth and said she was too sweet to be wandering around loose, Mary Lee was glad she hadn't gone swimming. Tonight, she closed the door on her pink and white room, tonight Jim hadn't even bothered thinking up an excuse. He'd just practically said that they were going walking instead of on their Wednesday night movie.

Mary Lee walked over to the dresser, picked up a comb, and ran it through her short, wavy brown hair. Maybe Jim was stingy! A quick little shudder ran through her five feet two. Even thinking that made her feel disloyal to Jim. Still, when a boy is in love with a girl he naturally wants to give her things. Not that she wanted him to give her a present; it wasn't that. But when a boy is in love with a girl he naturally wants to give her candy on her birthday. Besides the family would think it was awfully funny. They wouldn't know that even if Jim had been in love with her, she wasn't anymore, that she propped her head against the hard back of the canvas swing—she hadn't been able to look him! The candies, seventeen of them, were on the table and the whole family, included Jim, waiting in the dining room as Mary Lee came down. She spoke to Jim with what she hoped was the proper amount of coolness and tried to be gay and cheerful through the meal. She wanted to put on a bold front before the family; before Jim, too, for that matter.

After dinner, Mary Lee offered to help with the dishes, but Emily, with a magnanimous gesture, shooed them out on the porch.

Jim led Mary Lee to the swing, fixed the striped pillows behind her head and began her to talking which pocket.

"Oh," Mary Lee said in a small voice, as she felt a long, square box. She brought it out, her hands trembling as she undid the smooth, tissue paper. With a snap, the top flew open and in the moonlight Mary Lee saw a small jeweled watch.

"Oh Jim," she said again and then—because her throat was choked with so much happiness, she couldn't talk. She could feel her heart pounding under her chin, green dress. He did care—he still loved her—and she hadn't mattered! No wonder he couldn't take her to movies and things! She felt ashamed, repentant.

She put her in his arms. "Like it, honey," he whispered.

"Like it, Jim? I love it!" Jim slipped it on her arm and was satisfied with the flight that he saw in her eyes.

"And now, he wanted to know where's my freckle?"

PARTY FOR BRIDAL COUPLE

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Belcour Greeted By Friends

On Friday evening, November 20th, a number of friends and neighbors of Kenneth Belcour, gathered at his home at Holloway to welcome his bride into the community. Mr. R. Bleecker called the gathering to order asking Mr. and Mrs. Belcour to come forward. Then Miss Irene Frederick read the following address:

Dear Lela and Kenneth:

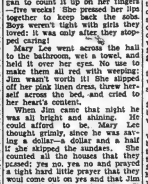
On this happy occasion of your marriage, your friends, neighbors, and fellow workers in Sidney desire to play a part in the establishment of your future home. We feel that we are meeting with you to-night. We have gathered to show that you have seen fit to make your new home among us and we hope in the years to come, through the ups and downs of life, to prove neighbors that are in the true sense of what neighbors is.

We feel that Kenneth all his life. He has always been a good sport, and as an all round worker thing, whether it were work or fun, he was a popular good fellow and popular with old and young. We are most pleased to welcome you to our midst. We hope she will have such a measure of contentment and happiness in her married life as is setting up with her husband and assure you that you certainly appreciate for the regrets and sadness which accompany the breaking of the home ties and the leaving of her family.

As a momento of our cordial welcome to you both, we ask you to accept the gift and with it the heartiest congratulations and best wishes for a long, prosperous journey, and useful wedded life.

Signed on behalf of your friends in Sidney,

Aiella Hurton
Dan Smith
Gladys Campbell.



Mr. Jim Campbell then presented them with a gift and with Mr. and Mrs. Belcour thanked all for the beautiful gifts. A few well chosen words and invited all to visit them in their new home.

The rest of the evening was spent in games and music. Then refreshments were served, after that all returned to their respective homes wishing the happy couple a long and prosperous married life.

"LIVE WIRES" BAND MEETS

The Live Wires Mission Band of Tabernacle Church had a most enjoyable time when 18 members and 3 visitors met at the home of Marion Clarke on Gordon St., on Saturday afternoon. The President, Irene Charlton opened the meeting with a Hymn and Prayer, and after the minutes were read and adopted, every member took part in a Word Friends game.

Dorothy Mitchell gave a recitation and the Misses Eva and Gwendoline Plindall played a pleasing piano duet. The meeting closed with the Mission Band Hymn. Just as I am thine own to be, and prayer by Mrs. Avery. Mrs. Clark and Marian served a delicious lunch for which a vote of thanks was moved by Freda Donaldson and heartily responded to by all present.

SHANNONVILLE W.M.S.

The ladies of Shannonville W.M.S. of the United Church, held a Silver Tea Social on Thursday evening, November 23rd, at the home of Mrs. Fred Mathorn. There was a good crowd, most of the members and their families being present. Mrs. (Rev.) Clark presided during the program which was opened by singing Hymn 296, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations." Mrs. Sam Shaw, first vice-president, read the Scripture reading from the 12th chapter of Mark, the story of the Widow's Mite after which Rev. Mr. Clark led in prayer.

Miss Flossie Terry gave an instrumental solo and Miss Jean Kent and Phyllis Mills sang a duet very sweetly. This had been given before at the Presbyterial Meeting. Mr. Lindenfelt of Stirling, sang "I Leave it to Thee," his daughter, Miss Evelyn accompanied on the piano. Reading of the Mission Band numbers then gave a dialogue entitled "A Mite Box Conversion." Miss Jean Kent and Phyllis Mills sang at the beginning and end of this exercise. Mrs. Arthur Houston, Mrs. Ross Sheller and Mr. R. Gilligan sang "Here We and the World is Mine." Miss Roberta Melborn gave an instrumental and Mrs. W. S. Dies gave a reading "Mrs. Pick-a-Back's Book." Mr. Lindenfelt favored with another selection after which the collection was taken and the meeting closed by singing "Stand Up for Jesus, Ye Soldier Stand" (No. 327) and all repeated the Mizpah benediction.

Sandwiches, cake and coffee were served and a pleasant social time was enjoyed together. The silver tea receipts were emptied and found to contain the sum of fifteen dollars and sixty cents, some are not yet handed in, so the collection amounted to $11.15, making a total of $26.75 taken in at this gathering.

The Ladies of the W.M.S. and all those present is due Mr. and Mrs. Melborn and family for kindly opening their home and making such a good time possible for so many.

EX-FIANCEE

by Ruby M. Ayres

She roused herself and tried to take an interest in the play, but she was conscious now that her head ached, and that it was an increasing effort to keep up that pretence of light-hearted happiness.

When the curtain fell on the first act, Jonathan stood up. "Would you like to go out?"

She rose obediently. "Oh, yes! We can have a cigarette," They went out into the foyer where the chatter and crowd around them helped her. She looked at Jonathan with fresh courage.

What was there to be afraid of? It would be easy to manage this man because he loved her so well.

With sudden bravado she slipped a hand into his. She felt his suddenly glad and say the color deepened in his dark face, and a wave of triumph went through her. She had nothing to fear. His love for her was true. like in the books.

It was Mrs. Corbie who a week later informed Priscilla that she had a niece from the north coming to stay with her. She shut the door carefully before she imparted the news and added mysteriously:

"My friend doesn't want it known her visiting us now very much, though in the old days she made a lot of time with us." She sighed. "Things are different, and I dare say he's right. Lena's a very homely girl and doesn't seem quite to fit in with this house, but I can't forget that she's my only brother's child. He was a fighting man, quite a small way, of course, but he left a nice little bit of money behind when he died. Not as my husband counts number of degrees to his name, but Lena will never starve nor have to work, and that's something to be thankful for."

"It is indeed," Priscilla agreed.

Mrs. Corbie went on: "I always had my own ideas that Lena liked Jonathan, and Priscilla, that's nothing to be jealous of—"

"I shouldn't think of being jealous," Priscilla said, checking a smile that shall be wrapped up together."

"She's not your sort, my dear," Mrs. Corbie half apologized. "Being as I said honestly, and you're a good looking, but she's aren't everything. She's a good girl, always been kind and affectionate to me, so when she wrote and invited her, self, what could I say? I'm glad that it was our duty to have her. She's anxious to see you, she says.

"Oh, you told her about me then?"

"About you and Jonathan? Of course I did. I told her how pleased I was and how glad I was for Jonathan was.

Priscilla said rather wistfully, "Do you think he really is happy?" She felt she needed confirmation.

"If he isn't then he ought to be," his mother retorted briskly. "He's got what he wanted, hasn't he? And what more can a man ask of life?"

She touched Priscilla's hand affectionately. "I know you'll be kind to her. She'll love to be asked with you at first."

"I'll do my best," Priscilla promised, but she felt a little apprehensive.

Something told her that this cousin was in love with Jonathan, and that therefore she could not feel happy about his engagement. She wondered how she herself would feel if Clive—but no, that was a for bidden subject, she had schooled herself so resolutely never to think of Clive.

She spoke of Lena to Jonathan when she was with him again.

"We'll go and meet her, shall we? Can't we take the car up to town and meet her?"

He looked a little surprised. "Would you really care to?"

"Of course. I always think it's so nice to be met—especially when you have come a long journey."

Very well." His eyes softened. "Nobody has ever, I should have thought of such a thing, princess."

Just lately he had taken to calling Priscilla "Princess", and it always touched her and made her feel a little ashamed.

"Why do you call me that?" she asked him once, and he answered:

"Because you have always come to me like a princess to me. Before I knew you I used to look at the Buckingham Palace and it seemed like a castle where a fairy princess lived." He broke off to add in his embarrassment: "You will laugh at me."

"Oh no."

She always liked him best in this mood. He seemed young, almost like a boy with whom she could laugh and be friendly. It was the grave, silent man in him that she vaguely feared.

It was when she and Jonathan were driving to London to meet Lena that, he said abruptly:

"Will you marry me next month, Priscilla?"

"Next month?" Priscilla was startled. Somehow this terrified her, she said lightly.

"It's a hurry ; think I've been very patient."

Priscilla laughed. "Do you know how long we've been engaged?" she asked.

"Yes. Just three weeks and four days.'

"It's no time" at all. Some people are engaged for years."

"I'm in a hurry, Priscilla."

She saw the obstinate lines creeping into his face, heard the impatience in his voice, and she said soothingly, "Well see. I don't know what Father will say."

"You can't always consider him, I suppose that."

"Do you?" He bent his eyes upon her. "Sometimes I think you don't," he said almost roughly. "You need not be afraid of me, Priscilla. I'll wait, even a very bad second."

"That's silly, Jonathan."

"It's the truth, he admitted "You don't love me—you're not even fond of me. If you could be sure of that, but Priscilla knew what he had been going to say, "if you were, you'd marry me to-morrow."

Then the train came in Jonathan said almost at once, "There she is—that's why she is here."

Priscilla laughed. Lena evidently meant nothing to him if all he saw was that she was here. She was quite conscious of a little thrill of excitement as she looked eagerly through the crowd.

And yet Lena was not nearly so ordinary as she had been said to suggest. Her first impression was that she thought as she shook hands with Priscilla that the prettiest girl she had ever seen. Priscilla's dark blue eyes that in some vague way reminded her a little of Jonathan's, the dark hair, the slender, rather delicate height, and she was plainly but well dressed, her complexion was very pale, and her eyes a deep brown. She felt a little overwhelmed by her first, perhaps, lines which in the future would be the sweetness, and a slightly virtuous nose.

"But she's not insignificant," Priscilla thought.

"It was kind of you to come and meet me," Lena said to Jonathan.

After their first greeting she had not spoken to Priscilla.

"It was Priscilla who suggested it," Jonathan said, and Priscilla thought that Lena said impartially, "Oh, was it? That was kind of her."

She sat in front with Priscilla on the way home, but she talked to Jonathan. She told him all the bits of local news in which he did not seem at all interested, and the names of people of whom Priscilla had never heard and she asked tactfully after her aunt and uncle.

Priscilla felt a little exasperated. She had not expected this girl to like her, but she thought she might have made a better pretense of friendliness.

When they neared home she said suddenly, "Drop me at the Moorland House first, will you, Jonathan? I promised father to be in for tea."

To her surprise he raised no objection.

"I'll see you again this evening," he said, for it had been arranged that Priscilla was to dine with the Corbie's.

She turned away feeling a little depressed. It gave her a curious sensation of desertion as the big car drove away into the darkness.

What would Lena talk to him about now they were alone, she wondered and then dismissed the thought. What did it matter, anyway?

INSTALMENT 2

Priscilla took off her hat and coat and went down to the library. Her father was there in the usual chair by the fire.

"Are you ready for tea?" Priscilla asked cheerfully, bending to kiss him; then she looked again, struck by his pallor and feeble look. "Darling, aren't you well?"

"I haven't felt very well this after noon," he admitted. "I don't think I want any tea. If you'll ring for Soames—"

Soames was a kind of general factotum who buried when there were special occasions at Moorland House. made an attempt at gardening when his domestication was not too bad, and valeted Priscilla's father.

He arrived solemnly in reply to the bell, a tall man, thin and solemn, they put the old man to bed. There was no question of it, the doctor declared. He was just more tired than usual and wanted to sleep.

Her father's condition gave her an excuse not to dine at the Corbie's and she felt a little unkind thrill of satisfaction as she took down the telephone receiver and rang Jonathan. Apparently he was not to be found at the moment, and she said she would not wait.

"I am not sure I'm sorry I shall not be able to come to dinner tonight, dearest, as my father is not well. Please give my love to Mrs. Corbie."

So that was that. Lena would be able to talk to Jonathan without interruption for the entire evening.

She went up to her father's room again, but the old man was apparently asleep, so she left the door open, went to the library and sat down by the fire. She was angry with herself because how very little he troubled about his family when there was some thing he wanted of them. Priscilla often wondered how he passed his time, but she never ventured him.

Since her engagement to Jonathan Corbie she and Hugh seemed to have drifted apart. Or had their relationship always been as it was now, only her love for him had blinded her to his selfishness and neglect?

It seemed to matter so little. She was rapidly growing indifferent to everything but accepting life as it came day by day without making reason or any looking forward.

In a way she had the same kind of Jonathan; he was kind and devoted and generous to her. Since their first visit to the theater together he had often taken her out, and she knew she had only to say the word and she could go anywhere she wished.

The trouble was that she wished so little nowadays. Odd that the fact of one man's going away from her should have such power to change her whole outlook!

She dined alone that night. She went up to her father once or twice but he declared he was very well, nothing wrong with him and that he already felt better.

"Why haven't you gone to Jonathan's to dinner?" he asked her, as she took the book in his eyes and Priscilla felt instinctively that he did not believe her when she said she had not liked to leave him. "I have Soames," he told her. "And if you wanted to go, my dear—" He broke off, his unfinished sentence seeming to say that he did not believe she had wanted to.

It was nine o'clock and Priscilla was thinking she might as well go to bed, when she heard the bell ring and Jonathan's voice in the hall. Jonathan came into the room quickly and his first words were, "I'm sorry I couldn't get here before. It was difficult to leave."

Simple, ordinary words, but they aroused a feeling of antagonism in Priscilla's heart.

"I did not expect you to come at all," she said quickly. "I knew you had people to dinner."

"How is your father?

"He's better, thank you. I don't think there is much the matter with him, but I didn't like to leave him."

There was a little silence. Jonathan's awkwardness seemed to have returned to him.

"I'm glad. I was afraid he might be seriously ill." He paused, but Priscilla looked unfriendly. "My mother sent her love," he added.

"Thank you."

Another silence; then Priscilla said, "I'm sorry you felt your guests. They cannot be too pleased with me for not coming."

He looked puzzled. "I came because I wanted to," he said, and then, "What is the matter, Priscilla?"

"The matter? Why, nothing." She turned away with an absurd feeling of tears behind her eyes. "Won't you sit down—if you mean to stay?"

"I mean to stay."

He followed her; put his hands on her shoulders and turned her around to him. What do you mean?"

"Only that I thought you would not like to be my poor cousin, as on my first night."

She had not meant to say anything so foolish, but she was tired and dispirited, and the words were spoken before she realized how they might be misconstrued. Jonathan was silent for a moment, his dark eyes searching her face with a sudden eagerness; then he said hoarsely:

"Princess—you're not—jealous?"

"Jealous?"

Priscilla flushed scarlet. "Jealous!—how dare you!"

She broke away from him, her hands clenched, her eyes furious.

"Jealous!" she laughed. "Of you, Jonathan, my cousin!"

There was a cutting inflection in the words, and she laughed again. "My dear Jonathan, I should never be jealous of anyone let alone your cousin. Don't you rather flatter yourself?"

"Perhaps I do." Jonathan was rather white, and that queer, hoarse note was still in his voice as he said again: "Perhaps I do rather flatter myself, but all the same—"

All the same, Princess, you are jealous of me. No, you need not look like that, nor say that you hate me as I know you sometimes. You've been much too brave to have tried to make me believe. You've flesh and blood as I am."

With a swift movement he took her in his arms, bending her head back against his shoulder and kissing her on the mouth, and when he released her, her eyes, her throat and her lips burned.

She fought against him at first; then suddenly, she was still, her eyes closed, her head flung back as far from his reach as possible. For a moment Jonathan was mad. He had longed so often to kiss her in this way that now the desire was accomplished he was carried away by his own passion.

"You love me—say you love me! You must when I love you so. Do you think any other woman in the world matters to me? Priscilla—"

With a last desperate effort Priscilla freed herself. She was trembling in every limb.

"How dare you—how dare you!" She could hardly control her voice at this moment she felt that she actually hated him. To accuse her first of jealousy, and then of love for him—she was almost beside herself with rage.

She tore the diamond from her finger and flung it down on the table.

"Go away—I never want to see you again! I've stood all I can, and now I hate you, do you hear? I hate you! Go away—go away!"

Jonathan had come to his senses. He was still very white, but his voice was perfectly controlled.

"I'm sorry if I frightened you, but I did not realize. I have kept me at arms' length all this time. I'm sorry if I frightened you!"

He picked up the ring and went down to her.

"Princess—"

She shrank away from him, putting the width of the table between them.

"Go away!" she said again, almost hysterically. "Don't you see that I hate you? I hate you, I hate you, I never want to see you again. I can't bear it any longer—I don't care what happens!"

There was a tragic silence, when Jonathan said in a voice of flint:

"There's still your brother to think of."

But Priscilla had lost control of herself.

"I don't care about him any longer. He never considered me, I've done all I can for him, but I won't go on—can't!

"You mean — you won't marry me?"

"I can't! I can't I don't love you!"

"Very well." He stood for a moment as if he did not know what to do; his big body looked infinitely helpless and forlorn. Then he turned, knocking against a chair as he went, so that it grew suddenly blind. "Very well," he said again roughly, and was gone.

Priscilla sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands. Already her moment of madness was passing; she shook from head to foot. What had she done? She tried to remember what she had said and to head all recollection.

Because he had kissed her—because he had taken her in his arms—because he had accused her of being jealous of Lena—

She tried to think, but her mind was quite confused. Her hand fell curiously bare without the big, heavy ring, and she stared at the place where she had sent Jonathan away. Why? She did not know. The whole scene was passing in a confused blur, and was regaining her composure. She had behaved like an hysterical schoolgirl, without dignity. She stood up, pushing her hair back from her forehead; she spoke Jonathan's name aloud — "Jonathan!"

But he had gone and there was no reply.

There was a sound in the hall. Priscilla listened a moment, then went over to the door with quick, uneven steps, and opened it. Perhaps he had come back.

But it was Hugh who stood there, taking off his overcoat. He stared at his sister, at her white, tear-stained face, then he broke out:

"What the devil?" He almost pushed her back into the room and closed the door.

DEATH SEQUEL TO WRESTLING

Oakville Youth Dies From Injuries Attributed to Match

OAKVILLE, Nov. 30.—Investigation into the circumstances of a friendly wrestle between two young men in the town following which one of the participants, Albert McHale, 17, Robinson street, Oakville died from injuries which he is reported to have received in the bout, is being made by Chief David Kerr. The youth died in the Oakville Hospital, Hamilton, late Sunday afternoon. An inquest has been ordered.

According to information received by the police, McHale was wrestling with A. R. Thomas, 21, of Burlington, when the latter threw McHale. McHale, hockey team, in the Imperial Oil service station here the latter is employed on Friday night, when he is alleged to have thrown against a desk, and sustained a cut over the right eye.

He then went to Dr. W. N. Wilkinson's office, and had stitches put in the wound. Afterwards he walked home and did not appear to be seriously from any ill effects except for a slight pain in his head.

Complaining of pain Sunday afternoon and the youth was rushed to the hospital where he died shortly after admittance. Death was attributed to meningitis of the brain.

Coroner J. Stead will held an inquest into the fatality. Dr. Thomas could be reached for his version of the affair and several other persons who were there declined to say anything about it other than it was a friendly match.

The youth was employed by the Imperial Leather Company. Besides his parents, two brothers, Francis and James, survive him.

BOYS' MEETING IS CONCLUDED

Impressed Ritual at Close of Conference of Youth

With impressive ritual the Bay of Quinte boys' conference concluded at Holloway Street United Church on Sunday evening. Douglas Campbell, grand praetor conducting the closing activities with Jean L. Buckley, leader. The boys formed a circle of friendship around the walls of the church and clasping hands sang verse by verse "Bless Be the Tie" at the end of the first verse praying for the boy on the right, at the end of the second for the boy on the left, at the end of third praying for their parents and with unclasped hands to symbolize the close of the conference the fourth verse was sung. The grand praetor formally closed the gathering.

The secretary and a number of boys reported on the conference and the ist impressions upon them.

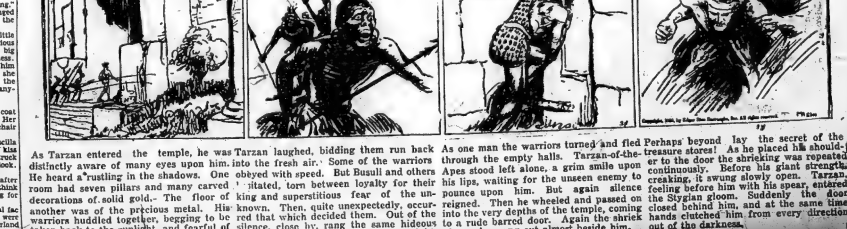
Mr., Buckley, assisted by the officers also Rev. Harold B. Neal conducted the evening service of the church which preceded the ceremony. He stressed the importance of youth in the church and the courage makes to the young. The church has the very job in recognizing the value of youth but Jesus knew the importance of the boy and the foundation for lives of value to the world. Mr. Buckley spoke impressively regarding the chivrous boy' whose very faults may be the possessor of unusual power. The author of the hymn "Joy in Service" was also irritating to his friends by his scrawling verse in which he made sport of the failings of those he knew and his father tried in vain to have it out of their sight as was the evidence of a genius for song.

It costs $4 per cent more to main tain a hospital bed in London than it does in Scotland.

Piles All Gone

Without Salves or Cutting

Hundreds of sufferers, providing piles go quickly and don't come back, if you remove the cause. Stop blood circulation in the hemorrhoidal veins causes piles by making the affected parts weak, flabby, almost dead. Salves and cutting fail because only an internal medicine can actually correct some condition. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt died covered a real internal Pile remedy. After prescribing it for 1,000 patients with success in 900 cases, he named it HEM-ROID. J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile misery or money back.



When the three English Methodist churches combine next year they will most probably use a new hymn book which will contain about 1,000 hymns, many of them not new ones. More than 2sc-half of the old Methodist hymns are to be discarded.

THE RETURN OF TARZAN, No. 34. (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

As Tarzan entered the temple, he was Tarzan laughed, bidding them run back distinctly aware of many eyes upon him. into the fresh air.. Some of the warriors He heard a rustling in the shadows. One obeyed with speed. But Basuli and others room had seven pillars and many carved decorations of solid gold.. The floor of another was of the precious metal. His warriors huddled together, begging to be taken back to the sunlight, and fearful of dead spirits in this haunted place.

stained face, then he broke out:

"What devil's work is this?"

As one man the warriors turned and fled through the empty halls. Tarzan-of-the-apes stood left alone, a grim smile upon his lips, waiting for the unseen enemy to pounce upon him. But again silence reigned. Then he wheeled and passed on into the very depths of the temple, coming to a rude barred door. Again the shriek of warning rang out almost beside him.

Perhaps beyond lay the secret of the treasure stores! As he placed his shoulder to the door the shrieking was repeated continuously. Before his giant strength creaking, it swung slowly open. Tarzan, feeling before him with his spear, entered the Stygian gloom. Suddenly the door closed behind him, and at the same time hands clutched him from every direction out of the darkness.

TRENTON NEWS

TRENTON DAIRY SUFFERS LOSS

Fire Believed to Originate in Furnace Room —Building Gutted

At seven o'clock this Monday morning fire was discovered in the two story brick building on Front street, Trenton, which is occupied by the Trenton Dairy Co., Ltd., and before the fire was brought under control, the interior of the building was entirely gutted. The company will be unable to carry on business until the building is repaired and the ruined contents replaced. It is said that the originator of the building was at the plant at six o'clock this morning starting the fires and it is thought the fire originated from the furnace.

HEN ROOSTS ARE ROBBED

75 Hens and 13 Roosters Taken From Sidney Farm

Sunday morning it was discovered that some time during the night chicken thieves had visited the farm of John Young, Murray township, and carried off seventy-five hens and thirteen roosters. In order to make a haul of this size it was undoubtedly necessary to make use of a motor truck. The Young farm is situated about three miles from Trenton on a side road off the York road, near the Glen Rurale farm.

AIRPORT WORK PROGRESSING

Preparation Made For Erecting of Barrack Room

Work still goes on apace at the airport on the Trenton highway. At present the men are busy laying the concrete blocks which will form the walls of the barrack block and at the present rate of construction it is estimated that the whole building will be enclosed before the middle of next month.

The second hangar is also rapidly nearing completion, and it is expected that is too will be ready for occupation before Christmas. All these various buildings will be enclosed by a close mesh wire fence and will return to his duties on Monday.

Mr. W. J. Taylor spent the last few days in Coe Hill visiting some friends.

Mr. Simon Bronson has returned home from a two weeks' hunting trip back of Bancroft. Mr. Bronson had very good luck bringing out a large buck.

Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman of Carrying Place left Saturday to spend the week end in Detroit.

Mr. Harry LaTour and son George, are spending the week end in Marmora.

Mrs. Tom McDonnville and grand daughter spent Thursday in Springbrook visiting her cousin, Mrs. M. Fitzgerald.

Mrs. Joseph Cote of Dufferin avenue entertained five ladies of auction bridge at her home on Saturday afternoon. A delightful luncheon was served. Mrs. Jack Orrill winning the first prize. Mrs. Ben Bracken winning the second prize. Mrs. T. Orrill the consolation prize.

MARY MAYCOCK MILFORD, AGAIN IS WINNER

For Second Year Wins Award For Field Beans

MISSED RESERVE

J. H. Frisby Cormley Has Reserve Award

Chicago, Nov. 30—Canadian entries got off to an excellent start here on the first day of the International Live Stock Show, though the majority of Canadian entrants in the live stock competition will have their animals lodged during most week, the hay and grain fanciers swept the field in the first judging on Saturday.

Herman Trelle, crowned wheat king last year, entered into the field pea competition with his friend, P. H. Clubine, to take two first prizes and to win champion sample, and Clubine the reserve in the field pea, small and small yellow, respectively. A. J. Myers of Melfort, Sask., took the other first award in the large yellow. Both Trelle and Clubine hail from Wembley, Alta.

Among other winners in the exhibit are: Tom Beckerich, Jr., Midland, Ont., blows Swedish Selora, Ont; H. L. Goltz, Branchbridge, Ont.

The States held their own in the various classifications. Written by Weaver, Turnerville, Ont., taking a seventh place in the Marquis wheat sample of Ed. Hall and Mac L. Maynard, Chatham, Ont., doing likewise in the oats and barley classes.

As judging continued in the grain and hay exhibits, Canada continued to improve the fields. Mrs. Mary E. Maycock, of Milford, Ont., taking the award for the champion hay sample of field beans and her neighbor, J. H. Frisby, of Cormley, barely missed out for the reserve.

Mrs. R. A. Bellrose, of Ladner, B.C., gained a first in the vegetables, and Mrs. Mary E. Maycock, of Milford, Ont., took second, while John E. Alton, Rockwood, Ont., took a seventh.

Winners in field beans, navy, are Mrs. Mary E. Maycock, Milford, Ont.; W. J. H. Frisby, Cormley, Ont.; J. H. Lampman, Ridgetown, Ont.; John E. Alton, Rockwood, Ont.; 23, Peter Clarke and Sons, Highgate, Ont. 6 qetaoinhrdl cmfw mfwy vbgkxx

The Beauty Box

Make-up belongs to the festive evening, bright lights and glad rags. When it strays along the street, it should be discreetly modified, toned down. In daylight heavy artificial drug store blushes and the cherry lip rouges impart hardness to the feminine pile, and that's not the purpose for which they were designed and intended. Women who have traveled through the years bathing up their noses must be more than careful about color decorations on complexions that have taken on sags and skin pleatings.

A solution of bicarbonate of soda is good for cleansing armpits, where perspiration glands are large and active. Dissolve a teaspoonful of soda in a cupful of water, apply with cotton and let liquid dry on. There are perspiration corrections to be practiced to be effective. Stopping the exudations in the armpit does no harm to the face of the body are millions of pores to carry off.

Brilliantine acts as a subduing agent on dry hair that bushes and bunces and won't stay put. Apply with an atomizer after you've brushed the comfort. If the scalp is dry and scaly, apply an oil the night before the shampoo and immediately after the laundrying of the glorious curls rub a bit more into thescalp. Mineral oil will do, or vaseline. There are commercial products that are convenient to use. The tonic in effect will also do the disappearing act.

The light breaking interferes with circulation causes tissues and muscles to lose tone; the breasts become flabby. It is necessary also that the brassiere be properly fitted setting, as it should support. It should be of light fabric so that excessive perspiring does not occur. Bathing the bust with cold water makes for firmness.

Girl Guide Activities of Year are Received

Bringing to a close a year of progress in the activities of the Girl Guide Council and of Girl Guide Commissioner in the city, the annual meeting of the Council was held last week at the home of Mrs. S. D. Lasier. The following were elected for the year:

District Commissioner—Mrs. S. D. Lasier.

Deputy Commissioner—Mrs. Leo Riggs.

Secretary-Treasurer—Miss Anna Hurley.

Entertainment Committee —Mrs. G. H. Holton, Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, co-convenors; Mrs. Judy, Mrs. F. C. MacLaurin, Mrs. Dan Hanna, Miss Lillian Smith, Mrs. T. J. Gerard.

Badge Committee—Mrs. R. J. S. Deroy, Mrs. R. Chadwick, Miss Collyer, Mrs. Van Blaklee, Mrs. Argue.

Transportation Committee— Mrs. Lorne Dore, Mrs. J. Gandi.

In the report of the year's finances read by Miss Hurley, it was shown that the Council had a balance of one hundred and thirty-five dollars after the year's expenses of the camp which were two hundred and forty-one dollars.

Girl Guide Camp

Belleville is fortunate to possess an organization which in a quiet and unassuming manner has come to play an important part in the community life of the city. This society is known as the Girl Guides and was started years ago by Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, who through these years has given of her untiring efforts for the girl life of this city and district. The city is fortunate in having in her as capable one who is recognized as the most efficient in the Dominion Association.

The Girl Guides function the year around, its object being to build up character manhood and to this end the annual camp held each summer takes a very important place in the year's programme. Through the generosity of friends different forms of activity, funds are raised so the guides are given two weeks of camp life free of all costs to the individual members. This outing last year was under the control of officers who gave of their time and valuable services. They were—Mrs. M. E. Branscombe (Captain); Miss Mackey; Miss Mosher, who came back when on her holidays to help with camp; Miss Collyer, nurse, who gave lectures on medical work in the sanitary; Miss Schurter, Lieutenant, and the annual camp held each summer takes a very important place in the year's programme. This camp is not only a holiday, but is instructional as well, every minute of every day being planned scientifically. The food is of the most wholesome and each Guide is required to drink a quart of milk a day. Possibly the most outstanding day of the camp is when the council and parents are entertained at a field-day and-camp fire. This gives us a very comprehensive idea of just what the girls do at camp.

Financial Statement

In the financial statement of the Guides for the year the total receipts were given at $1,000, leaving $114.30 giving a balance of $62.88 on hand to the credit. Among the expenditures included $15.80 for Girl Guide Week, $10.00 donation to the Grenfell Mission at Labrador; $2.58 postage of old silk stockings to Labrador and $20.00 for the material department of the mission for their hooked rugs; $20.00 for flowers for the sick and Thanks Badges, Christmas cards for the Guides amounted to $45.95 in cost. Christmas gifts were sent to the Babies' Home in Neemuch, India; a quilt was made for an invalid Belleville child; a Christmas tree and concert was arranged for the Home of the Friendless and six families in the city were provided with Christmas dinners.

Quinte Boys' Conference was Successful Event

Banquet Held in Holloway Church on Saturday

MANY SPEAKERS

Boys Entertained at "Y" and Attend Sunday Services

In connection with the Bay of Quinte Boy's Conference held in Belleville last week-end a banquet was tendered to the delegates in the church parlors of Holloway Street Church on Saturday evening. Well over 125 sat down to a sumptuous banquet prepared by the Ladies' Energetic Association of the church.

Douglas Campbell, Grand Praetor of the Conference, was chairman of the evening. In his opening remarks, Mr. Campbell stated that this conference was without conditions the largest conference ever to be held in Eastern Ontario. Mr. Hicks delivered one of the best talks ever heard from a young man at any boys' conference. He challenged the boys present to give Jesus Christ a real chance in their lives, to try and live the life set down by Him. He also reminded them that they should think more seriously in their every day life.

Rev. Lou Bishop, of Picton, led the sing-song service, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. Sidney Woodward, member elect for the Boy's Parliament, for Hastings, was called upon and he spoke briefly on his platform in the coming session. Leslie Clare of East Northumberland also spoke on short the things that he would like to bring about at the coming parliament. These two young men were followed by a piano solo by Clifford Bennett.

Mr. Joseph Foley proposed the toast to the church, for their wonderful reception throughout the entire conference, this toast was responded to by the Rev. Robt. Hall of John Street Church. Dr. Chas. Bishop, principal of Albert College was called on and he spoke outlining a new plan for boys' work at Albert College for improving their education. There are to be classes inaugurated at the Albert College for the purpose of teaching special courses in religious work so that the pupils may qualify as lay preachers Rev. H. B. Neal was toastmaster and he welcomed the delegates to Belleville. He also thanked the boys for the wonderful success that they had made for the conference. He was followed by Albert Looker, who spoke briefly. Mr. J. Foley rendered a solo, which was greatly appreciated.

The principal speaker of the evening was introduced by Mr. Lorne Jackman of Trenton in a few chosen words. The speaker of the evening was Mr. John Hoyle of Toronto and his subject for the evening was "The Secret of Life." He began in a very humorous way and had the boys in a very attentive mood all during his talk. He stressed upon the necessity of each of us and with God. He challenged every boy present to live in harmony with Jesus Christ by saying them that they would b better men in every sense if they accomplished this great achievement.

The evening closed with the singing of "Abide with Me." The night was one to be remembered and was voted one of the greatest evenings ever to be staged by a Boy's Conference. Mr. Ray Lennox presided at the piano.

At the Saturday morning session the conference broke up into four groups for discussion purposes. The groups were led by Rev. Cecil Lorne Jackman, Lou Buckley and Mr. W. F. Fischer. Vital problems such as boy's work, boy's welfare and other matters pertaining to the men and boys interest. The groups then reassembled into the main meeting and were addressed by Mr. Buckley and Rev. Hoyle.

On Saturday afternoon the boys were entertained at the local Y. M.C.A. where they had the use of the gymnasium, swimming pool etc. On Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m. the conference held a mass meeting at Baptist Church and was very largely attended. After the song service the meeting was addressed by Mr. Lou Buckley of Toronto, who spoke briefly on the subject of "The Game of Life."

Children's Christmas

By Constance Cameron

It was most interesting the other day to hear a mother of three children tell how the parents' self-sacrifice of last Christmas turned out. I believe it will interest you, because I know that many of you are entertaining the same idea procedure this year.

"Last year," the mother said, "the children watched with wistful eyes the preparations of their friends, looked longingly in windows decorated with Christmas greens, got the usual presents on Christmas morning and quarrelled all day. Something they'd never done before. You see, we had said thoughtfully, 'we had given things to the children but we had shut the door to the Spirit of Christ, and after all it is His birthday!'"

Ponder that last sentence again! Remember, it is what so many of us do.

"This year—finances being in no better shape for this family than they were a year ago—the children were not going to have anything. The same amount of money that bought gifts, had to buy presents and hall to the children. The children were busily planning their little budgets, planning to economize, and even denying themselves over secret caches where mother "mustn't look." and there is a real spirit of helpfulness in that home.

"Last night the experience of this family, and, whatever you deny yourself this evening, in the spirit of joy of giving. It may be only a five cent chocolate bar that you buy hands you, wrapped excitingly in a gay, pretty tissue paper, there will be love and joy in his heart and in his eyes as he watches you opening it.

The Spirit of the Christ Child when He came to earth that Spirit cannot enter where selfishness is found, but it is fostered when we only allow the children to take and not share in the giving."

Miss Laura Bell, who has been a member of the staff of the Canadian National Express, South Depot, has been transferred to Toronto and leaves this afternoon to assume her new duties. Previous to her departure she was presented with gifts by various groups in the Tabernacle Church. The C.L.T. Class which she had been a leader during Sunday School yesterday presented her with a cheque, a book of poems, a box of candy, and the Mission Band a purse. A gift of a cheque and a volume of Edgar Guest's poems, Miss Bell has been very popular in the city and her departure will be keenly regretted.

On November 23rd a very happy event took place, when about sixty friends gathered at a miscellaneous shower being given by Mrs. Art Skinner in honour of Miss Ada Kennedy of Thurlow. The bride before her marriage was Ada Kennedy of Thurlow. Holland Grove, the groom being a popular member of the Belleville Fire Department. They received many stylish and useful gifts. Mr. William Lynch on behalf of the Belleville Fire Department presented the newly weds with a hand some mantel clock and a silver cake basket. After which they expressed their appreciation. The evening was spent in euchre and bridge, the prizes being won by Mrs. L. Wilson and Mr. Doc Hurst and Mrs. F. W. Law and son equipment. The rules of the contest were to the effect that a 200-word essay was to be written on the advantages of Johnson's floor wax. Mrs. Lancaster wrote her essay and received word today to the effect that her essay had been voted one of the best entered. The contest covered the whole of the Dominion of Canada and therefore adds more to the glory and honor bestowed upon Mrs. Lancaster.

Mrs. Lancaster will receive the following articles from the company one electric floor polisher, one wax mop, one floor duster, one bottle of liquid floor wax and one can of floor paint. These are all donated by the Johnson company and will be given to Mrs. Lancaster through the Walker Hardware of this city. The value of the equipment is approximately seventy-five dollars.

FINANCIAL NEWS

MARKET IS PEPPED UP

Result of Response to Service Loan Helpful

TORONTO, Nov. 30.—Following a week of declining prices, Toronto exchange stocks yesterday gave a demonstration, if not of strength, at least of strong resistance. There was nothing to account for the about-face unless it was the feeling engendered in financial circles out of the quick response to the government's demand for $150,000,000 for the National Service Loan.

Undoubtedly the success of the loan had some market effect, though it would be in the nature of a strengthening of the technical position rather than apparent rise.

The turnover today was light. Port of Canada was the most active issue and rose a point from last Saturday's final. Pord made steady progress upward to 12¼ where it flattened out. Dominion Stores was another leader on the side of the advance, rising approximately 1½ points to 18¾. The advance in Dominion Stores followed new the company would pay an extra dividend of 30 cents a share.

Brazilian in the second hour advanced to 11. International Nickel was up nearly ½ point, Walkers, B, A. Oil, Imperial Oil, Canadian Pacific, and Gypsum slightly better.

Bell Telephone was easier at 124½. Building Products down ¼ to 20¾. Distillers off ¼ points at 11.

Ctcel of Canada rose to 23 for a gain of ¾.

MAY BE WORK ON NORTH HIGHWAY

Important announcement was made this morning by His Worship the Mayor of Belleville, when he intimated that in the course of a day or so there several men now unemployed will be sent in the course of a few days to the constructing of the Tweed-Actinolite- Ottawa highway, work which will undoubtedly be started in the very near future.

When asked about this matter today, Mr. Ernie Green of the employment office stated that as yet he had nothing to say.

It is however, expected in the course of a day or two more important news concerning this work and the men who will be required for it may be made.

COUNCIL CHAMBER THRONGED

want from our bank.

Per Capita Tax

"The only way to compare taxes is by per capitation. Belleville tax is $40.06 per head. Toronto's debt is $53.33 per capita, thought perhaps it would be better from an industrial standpoint it might be better if Belleville had a higher assessment and lower tax rate".

Mayor Reid said in 11 months this year building was $41,220 over the construction in the entire 1930. Yet people say Belleville is not an ideal city. How can these explain why foreign money invested in Belleville this year is about $750,000. Why would the Sargent Company, the American Hardware Co. and the Ontario Shore Gas Company invest three quarters of a million dollars in Belleville if there were not advantages?"

Relief Plans

Relief was explained by the mayor and the advantage of contributions. "I think the explanade was the better project though the one finally decided against it. It would have been work for years to come. Now Belleville must have parking space, as Belleville is the only city on the new highway link west of Oshawa.

Hydro Salaries

Mayor Reid declared he was 100 per cent. Hydro, "but he was not 100 per cent as it is run at the present. "I did not think it justice to the citizens of Belleville to increase the Hydro staff's salaries and the manager's salary which was increased $300. The Hydro Commission is paying the manager's insurance his club dues. "If you want to condemn me for that, all right and if it is right to increase his salary and pay his insurance, why cannot we increase salaries and pay insurance at the city hall. I have been scorched and roasted over this. I want the two commissioners here on Friday night to speak to them. There is nothing personal in my attitude, it is a question of the manager's salary, when other salaries are going down."

Ald. Tice

Alderman G. C. Tice declared: "All I ask is fairness. Mayor Reid and I have never had any disagreements. I want you citizens of Belleville to know that I am running on six years of service. I am not here to find fault. "We are now going into the year 1932. If I had my choice I'd poll the vote you gave me before. I do not see why I should not have the same confidence now.

"The gas plant, gentlemen, was actually sold before the council knew anything about it. All they had to do was to set the price. I had the credentials."

Mr. Tice said the gas chairmanship was visited on him. The plant would have broken even last year if certain gas operations had not been charged against the plant.

Gas Extensions

"But, in the next twenty years, it would have cost the city $417,000. The company is prepared to spend $130,000 on developments. $20,000 in the city and the rest in Thurlow on the highway to Trenton.

"You got out from under a very heavy load when you sold the gas plant and got a good company to buy it.

Explanade

"The explanade would be one of the finest things Belleville could have. The figure of $160,000 was not concrete, but council must have concrete figures. But can we afford to spend about $300,000 on a parking space?" he asked. "Because a large block of city bonds is in the bank unsaleable at present, I voted against the explanade.

The candidate declared he opposed the purchase of a road sweeper as taking work from men.

Ald. Tice touched on North Front street pavement. He had been impressed with the pavement on Moira Co. said he would construct North Front street pavement on the same unit price as on Moira Street. That was why he supported the North Front Street pavings.

"Where do I stand for '32?" he asked.

Economy

"I have my taxes paid and pay a rental of $500 per year. I am not in favor of any expenditure except what will give men necessary work. I stand strictly on economy for 1932."

Ald. Tice said the city council had nothing to do with the Hydro. The citizens elect Hydro commissioners. The mayor is the only member of the council on the commission.

"Belleville, first, last and all the time is my motto."

As Ald. Tice ceased speaking Mayor Reid shook his hand warmly.

Ex-Mayor Hanna

Ex-Mayor Hanna, when introduced by Mr. Pinkston, plunged directly into a spirited talk on the Hydro. After a few remarks about the large attendance of the electors and who were crowded into the room he stated that he did not make any statement as yet about being a nominee for the Mayoralty chair, "It might possibly be seen in there yet—don't forget that I have a chance," he stated, "and elections are not over yet. My little speech must necessarily be brief; time is limited owing to the length of the speeches made by the other candidates, but there is one thing I want to impress upon you electors; don't let politics interfere with your choice of the men you want to represent you in the business of the coming year for this city."

Both the candidates have given very nice-sounding addresses," he continued, "and addresses that sound very nice—very good, especially that of your worthy mayor, who says that he tried to fall in with the wish of the people on this question of the people's choice for the coming year.

"I think that he will fall in with the choice of the people after I have said my little say on Friday night from the platform in the city hall. Our opponent (Hydro) has only 110 volts of juice in it, but I think that the mayor when he started this little speech of his had about 5000 volts in him. The mayor said he did not get justice. Why? We wouldn't bow to his wish, that's all. He rants and raves about the manager's salary being raised 'while men of the city are not looking for work'—as he puts it, yet get this, gentlemen, he sat around and sat around until the unemployed of the city of Belleville had to take their own measures into their hands, form their own association of unemployed, and all without his assistance or help. Now can he talk about helping the unemployed?" (Loud cheers at this point for Hanna from the men in the back.)

Mayor Reid got up and attempted to refute the statements made by Hanna amid the cries of some men to "Sit down!" But he would not sit down and said that next Friday night he would be able to get before the people of Belleville some facts that will be new on this question and then that will answer all attack made on him by Mr. Hanna. Mr. Hanna jumped up and says that he has a bookful of 'stuff to bring with him, too.

Ex-Ald. Pinkston as chairman, asked the electors to turn out and vote for those who were entitled to use the advance poll to do so.

M.A.A.A. WINS GRID CROWN

Wins Eastern Canada Crown in Impressive Fashion

By Jack Hambleton C.P. Staff Writer.

Montreal, Nov. 30—Montreal's winged wheelers are Eastern Canada rugby champions. Sweeping all before them, the Wheelers Saturday eliminated Western University Mustangs from contention and qualific dto meet Regina Roughriders in the Canadian championship next week. And Saturday's was no uncertain victory. The Montrealers started out in the first qualified to meet Regina Roughthe final whistle blew a score of 22-6 had been recorded against the Mustangs.

Western's team beaten, soundly beaten, but by the same token they fought to the bitter end and in taking last little practice. The team, taken lightly by the so-called experts at the start of the 1930 season, swept through to the intercollegiate title, eliminated Barrie in the Eastern Canada semi-finals and had hung up their medals after a hard-fought but losing battle against the Wheelers.

Montreal's undoubted superiority was too much for the Western Ontario team, led by the long and accurate forward passes of Walwyn Stevens, former Ryerson Universities player who has starred in every game this year. Stevens' prowess would not be denied. Western's line, "the strongest line in intercollegiate football," crumbled pitifully before the driving onslaught of Burns, Collins and Hennigar. And on the backfield the kicking of Hock Welch, the Montrealers' chief of Patterson, of the Westerners.

The crowd was unexpectedly small, not more than 6,000 witnessing the game. Both ends of the bleachers were empty, while there were plenty of seats vacant along the sides.

BISONS CHALK UP THIRD WIN

Led By Cagey Frank Nighbor, Buffalo is Running Amuk

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 30 (CP) — Buffalo Bisons, headed by the veteran centre ice star of yesteryear, Hockey Frank Nighbor, chalked up their third victory of the week by whipping the Toronto Maple Leafs 4-2 when they handed Micky Roach and his Syracuse Stars a 5-3 setback to spill further in front of the International Hockey League scene. Entering the last period on the short end of a 2-1 score, the Bisons scoring aces soon found their eyes and rallied home two goals in quick succession to gain the victory. By virtue of their victory the Bisons are now heading the group race by six points and remain the only team in the International League to have no defeats scored against them.

Pittsburgh Yellow Jackets emerged in their fourth tie game in six starts, Saturday when they battled sixty minutes to a scoreless draw with Londons Panthers in the smoky City. Although both squads had numerous opportunities to score during the minutes, neither showed well finished work around the nets.

Cleveland Indians rang up their second victory of the campaign and moved into a tie with Detroit, Syracuse and Buffalo for the top spot and place in the league standing Saturday when they beat Georgie Hay and his Detroit Olympics 3-2 reverse in the Indian city. Bernie Brophy, sniffy left winger of the Indians, held down the centre for berth and bolstered the final attack of the Cleveland squad.

All is ready for the wrestling bouts tonight. The ring was set in the middle of the arena this morning. Bill Hankins has gone to much trouble to bring the "grapplers" here tonight, and was assured by Matchmaker Corcoran that as soon as the crowds warranted it, he would bring to Belleville some of the best wrestlers in America. He even went so far as to say that if Mr. Rankin could show him a packed arena he would bring Jim Londos here. Londos is the world's champion and it would be a thrill of a lifetime to see the Greek Adonis in action in Belleville.

Tonight's card promises to be a real rasspy affair. All the wrestlers, on the card, are men who have had a world of experience. They are not going to risk their reputation by putting on a boresome affair. The semi-final bout all sporting fans have been looking forward to. Alex Kasaboski takes when he enters the ring. It is the sport of men figs Alex that makes the "wrassling" game what it is today.

The opening bout should be a real high class affair. This bout features Herman Renaud who is out to make a real impression on Canadian wrestling and it would not surprise us if he takes Kasaboski's measure. Pinkie Hart in the curtain-raiser. It is hoped that Jackie Forbes will again be on the job. Jackie sure makes the boys toe the scratch.

Squires and Murphy! These two boys have packed the hockey fans into the Belleville arena for quite some years past. They are going to introduce to a Belleville sporting audience. When Queens step on the ice to battle the local intermediates on Wednesday night it will be like old times to see the two boys in action once again. The hockey fans are in for a treat and Varsity in the old intercollegiate setup. They will not play O.H.A. so this is the only opportunity the hockey fans will have of seeing the students in action this season.

Coach Holway had his seniors out on Saturday evening, there was a light workout and a real scrimmage tonight before they meet Varsity. Coach Holway declared tonight, "Boomer" had three new defence players out and tonight Ross Hall and Eddie Watts of Napanee were in uniform and will be out again tonight. Eddie used to play for the old Kingston Frontenacs in the years past when they used to play in the senior O.H.A. A real battle, each time they met. The other defence player was Wm. Ware of Fort Hope, Ken has been working in and around Belleville all summer.

Campbell, McKeekin and Smith were going great guns on Saturday night, these boys will score a lot of goals for Belleville this winter if they keep up their good work. Rice and Cain are showing up better each night as well as Rube Ruskard patches and all, was in the nets opposite Tice. Ottawa is to see a lot more scrap tenders in the country than this, mates Tice.

Ralph A. Kennedy of New York, whose hobby is playing different golf courses, recently played his 920th course at Sagamore Springs. He has played a total of 4,600 rounds in 31 states and five countries.

THIS VEXING QUESTION OF HEAVYWEIGHTS

Why Not Have a Showdown in the Boxing Game?

This heavyweight boxing tangle is getting so bad that the fans are giving up in disgust and turning their attention to wrestling. When the various ruling Commissions decide that a fight will be held, the boxers back out; when the latter come out into the open and declare they will fight all comers, the commissions turns the key in the key stare. There seems to be only one heavyweight who wants to fight, and that is Tommy Loughran, and he's hardly in the top class though one of the cleverest men in the game. Mickey Walker, before his fight with Sharkey in which he held the Boston Sailor to a draw, re-tired of challenge after challenge. Now he is resting on his laurels—Richard can't do anything about it, and is turning his attentions to a couple of Canadians who will fight. They are Billy Townsend and Jimmy McLarnin, both of Vancouver. These two boys have attracted a lot of attention in New York, and every chance for a crack at the titles—if any. Meanwhile Schmeling is turning down offers and making challenges in the same breath; Dempsey is continuing his barnstorming tour in the sticks; Gene is back in England picking a few soft pounds; Leonard has announced that he will not be a comeback; Carnera is about through as far as the States is concerned; and Stribling is definitely out. Of course there was the Canzoneri-Cochrane bout on Nov. 20th. But even that is nothing of importance so something must be done about the boxing game or it is soon to go into discard in favor of wrestling where the athletes at least put on a good show even if they are but exhibitions. LEAFS WIN

First Time in Win Column and Then Extended

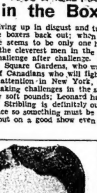
Toronto, Nov. 30 (CP) — Rangers overwhelming victory at the expense of Chicago Black Hawks, coupled with Canadiens' upset at Detroit provided the highlights of the week end program in the International Hockey League. In all but the Rangers-Hawk clash in Chicago the minutes overtime was necessary to decide the winner.

Toronto Maple Leafs scored their initial victory of the campaign Saturday night in the Maple Leaf Gardens defeating Boston Bruins 6-5 in ten minutes overtime and New York Americans took first place in the Canadian division leadership by outscoring Montreal Maroons.

Bill Cook Stars

Superiority in every department coupled with the outstanding goal-tending ability of Johnny Roach and the deadly sharpshooting eye of Bill Cook, stalwart right winger, who netted no less than three goals, were the Rangers 5-0 victory over the Hawks. From the initial gong the Patrick men showed their superiority on the blade and piled up an early lead in the opening frame, which the Hawks could not approach. Taking a two-goal advantage into the second period, the Rangers gave a startling exhibition of speed and defensive play and added two more markers before the period ended. Bill Cook was the hero of the game, rang up his third counter in the final twenty minutes when he took Boucher's pass to beat Gardiner. The victory sent the Rangers into the American group leadership four points in front of the Hawks.

Best in Overtime



Tieing the score in the final minute of the last period Montreal Canadiens met their third defeat of the season in Detroit last night, when an overtime goal gave the Falcons a much-needed victory. Canadiens broke the ice early in the first session when Rivers beat Con-nell in the Falcon's cage but ten minutes overtime and New York Americans took first place in the Canadian division leadership by outscoring Montreal Maroons.

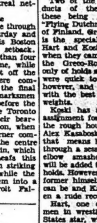
Detroiters were not long in retaliating and before the period ended Aurie had tied the score. Battling through the overtime session on equal terms with both teams having numerous opportunities the Falcons took the lead in the final twenty minutes when Johnny Sorrell and Carson Cooper combined for a goal. Mondou, however, equalled matters for the Canucks before the final whistle blew but the overtime session saw Ebbie Goodfellow score the winning Detroit tally.

Rangers Top

New York Americans, headed by Joe Lamb, former Ottawa Senators centre ice star, stepped into Montreal Saturday and whipped Montreal Maroons, 3-1 to capture the Canadian division leadership. The Americs went on top before half a minute of the first period had elapsed, when Lamb dented the twine but the Maroons fought back strong during the remainder of the period and evened the count early in second, when Norman Gainor Worters. A tie game looked certain as the two squads marched off the ice for overtime but Lamb again sent the Americans to the fore when a Himes-to-Lamb combination resulted in a score. McVeigh put the game in the bag when a low score up the right rail took him close to on Smith and he had little trouble beating the Montreal net-minder.

Leafs in Overtime



Toronto Maple Leafs came through with the unexpected Saturday and handed Art Ross and his Boston Bruins a 6-5 overtime setback. Bulging the twine no less than four time in the opening frame, while their opponents were kept off the score sheet, the Leafs were completely outplayed during the final periods and the Boston marksmen tied up the score at 5-5 before the final stanza ended. The Toronto net-minders found their bearings in the overtime session, when Andy Blair and Hap Horner combined for a neat goal, the centre ice meeting proving. The win, which was the first for the Leafs this campaign put them within striking distance of the league leaders while Brulp defeat dropped them into a third place tie with Detroit Falcons.

Main Bout Will Be a Real Go Between Kogut and Dick

There will be some contrasts in wrestling styles on the all-star program which is to be held at the Arena tonight with Jack Kogut, Canadian light heavyweight champion and Arthur Dick of Pravaville, Ind., supplying the feature with Kogut the favorite.

Two of the wrestlers are products of the Pittsburgh school, these being Frankie Hart, the "Flying Dutchman" and Alec Kaad of Finland. Greco-Roman wrestling is the specialty in Europe and Hart and Kaski were handicapped when they came to this country for the Greco-Roman style permits only of holds above the waist. Both were quick to learn new tricks however, and can hold their own with the best of the light heavyweights.

Kogki has a particularly hard assignment for he is to clash with the rough house Polish mat man Alex Kasaboski in the semi-final what means he will have to go through a session in which hilling show smashes and hair pulling will be added to the usual wrestling holds. However, he is a rugged performer himself and as fearless as can be and Kasaboski may be given a rude reception.

Dick, one of the best looking men in wrestling, meets a United States star, who is also well-built, being matched with Jack Herman, flashy Toledo 170 pounder, who comes from Ohio. He is a middleweight too, Hart has lost few bouts of late and Herman will also be in quite live up to advance notices to beat him.

As to the main bout men, Kogut and Dick have proven time and again that they are capable of mingling with the best in the game. They are very loyal to the press and can use them in effective fashion. It will be a battle of flying tackles for Kogut, known as the Somerset Flash, adapted the football tactics effectively while Dick, a former college football star is proficient at it, too.

Chocolate, Bass, Risko Will Be in Action

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—Kid Chocolate, Benny Bass and Johnny Risko will seek to get a somewhat vacant national boxing schedule off to a running start tonight.

Chocolate, who recently dropped a hair-line decision to Tony Canzoneri in a lightweight duel, battled Mauke Lerner of New York, in a ten round bout at the St. Nicholas Arena.

Bass, who lost his junior lightweight championship to Chocolate some months ago, starts a come-back campaign in Philadelphia against Jackie Pilkington, New York veteran.

Risko, the Cleveland heavyweight trial horse, engages Meyer (K. O.) Christner of Akron, for the third time in Cleveland, they split even in two previous battles.

Boston and Oakland, Calif., offer the best, one of the most even matched average interest during the rest of the week. Lou Brouillard, French-Canadian Worcester, Mass., welterweight champion of the world, takes on Bugsy Lavitas of Syracuse, N.Y., in a ten round battle duel at Boston Wednesday. On the same night at Oakland, Midget Wolgast of Philadelphia recognized states as flyweight champion, will meet Speedy Dado of the Philippines, in another non-titular affair.

CANADIAN BEES FOR THE ORIENT

Winnipeg, Man. (By The Canadian Press)—Queen bee trade with the Orient received an added impetus this week with the shipment of 1,200 colonies of screened bees by O. George Reidel, of Taber, Alta. Each 200-lb. box will be accompanied by a pure-bred Italian queen bee.

It has been Chesterfield that the variety of bee that makes honey in Europe and American produces almost twice as much as the native Asiatic variety which has started making honey since the days of Confucius. RETAIL LUMBER DEALERS MEET

Discussion of Trade Was Keynote of Convention

The Lake Ontario and Trent Valley Retail Lumber Dealers held an interesting meeting at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville, on Friday, when matters of interest were discussed particularly in the trade, and the year of building, winter activities etc. It was the first time a gathering of the district had been held since the annual picnic at Hastings last summer and the members were glad to come together and have a chat.

One of the most gratifying incidents of the afternoon was when R. P. White, the genial secretary-treasurer, present after his long illness. He takes the deepest interest in the welfare of the association and his friends heartily congratulate him on being correctly named. It was suggested that he had intended to pay a personal call on the members of the district during the past summer but was prevented by his sickness.

A number of the dealers present reported business as being quite fair particularly in Trenton, Port Hope and Bowmanville, while a few others reported as declared to be fair. While no great improvement is expected this winter, it is expected that under way, 1 t was asserted, business will be considerable in proceeding a little more freely. Many dealers in Belleville and others are making signs of activity as they are apprehensive of a shortage may result in sympathy with the trend of other commodities.

A number of dealers reported that they were now in a position to buy as there seemed to be a scarcity of stock, and wholesalers to strengthen prices in jack pine and hemlock.

A hearty vote of thanks, on motion of M. Comstock, Bowmanville, and W. N. Belair, Belleville, was tendered R. P. White, of Belleville, secretary of the district, for his faithful services coupled with felicitations on his recovery from his recent illness.

It was decided to hold the annual meeting of the district in Port Hope about the 3rd week in April, by which time A. L. Fee, of Cobourg, the president, will be home from Florida. It is hoped to induce to spend the winter months in Belleville, Toronto and

SAY FAREWELL TO CLASSMATE

Mr. Chas. Carter is Leaving For England

On Monday evening, Nov. 23rd the Boys Sunday School class of Mount Pleasant together with their teacher, Mr. Will Potts, the superintendent, Mr. James Sharp and the pastor Rev. Joslin, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Maddam and tendered a farewell party to one of the classmates who sails this week for his home at Cambridge, England for a three month's holiday.

The pastor conducted community singing with Mr. Adam Scott accompanying on the accordian.

Mr. Kenneth Holmes read the following address, and Mr. John Coggins presented Charlie with a fine fountain pen.

Nov. 23, 1931, Mount Pleasant

Dear Charlie:

We have gathered here tonight to express our regret at your leaving us for a time. During your stay at Mount Pleasant you have always been ready to help along every good cause and we can assure you that you will be greatly missed in our Sunday School and Church. It must however be a source of great pleasure to you to look forward to the happiness of spending Christmas with your own folks in the old England.

We appreciate that straight-forward life you have lived among us seeking to follow the Golden Rule of Him who increased in Wisdom and Stature and in favour with God and man.

As a slight token of our regard we ask you to accept the following that it will often recall the pleasant days we have spent together.

We wish you a safe and comfortable voyage and a joyous re-union with your own folk across the water and we shall look forward to seeing you back in the spring.

Signed on behalf of the class,

Kenneth Holmes,
John Coggins.

Charlie very fittingly replied, thanking his friends for their kindness, after which Mr. and Mrs. Earle Maddam served those present a delicious tea of apples.

Mrs. J. Douglas of Fuller is spending a couple of weeks with her daughter Mrs. Donald Sharp.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Young and George entertained Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Martin and baby Lois of Corbyville, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson and children, and Master Johnson and Douglas Rowe to a delicious feed of goose on Sunday.

Misses Lorna Cummings and Win. Reid represented Allan-School section at the Trustee Convention at Madoc, Friday afternoon and evening. They have the splendid address given by Messrs. McClaren and Bishop.

Festive Party of 48th Highlanders Gala Affair

TORONTO—Those who witnessed the 48th Highlanders charity ball at the Royal York now know the glory of a true "gathering of the clans". All the tartans and color of Scotland seemed deftly packed into the program. Like a great and vivid canvas, the scene reflected the magnificent thrill of the Highlands and the stirring strength of their traditions.

It didn't leave the Scots could be so light-headed", remarked one Irish guest who had caught their merry friendliness of the big family party.

Lining the walls of the ballroom were the bold tartans, forming a striking background for, the kilts and scarlet mess jackets and multi-hued gowns of the 1,500 guests who had responded to the skirl of the pipes. At the doors stalwart Highlanders stood guard—their intricate plaidies trowning their beauty, and as the pipes heralded the approach of Their Excellencies the Governor-General of Canada and Countess Bessborough, two long lines of kilted sergeants formed a pathway, down which the pipers marched, came Their Excellencies, and their aides, then the officer commanding, Lieut.-Col. Tait, Major Sinclair, Major Eric Middendig, aide-de-camp to the Governor and Mrs. W. D. Ross, Col. D. M. Roberts and Mrs. Robert—and Miss Isabel Ross.

As the distinguished party mount ed the raised dais, banked with ferns and palms, at one end of the room, the 48th Highlanders band, played by the 48th band, and seldom has it been more impressive.

Then with Their Excellencies interested onlookers, the pipers marched were gracefully danced and ex

AIDED SLAYER SON?

Charged with conspiring to aid the escape of his son, Herman, Jr., lowyer) to California, following the murder of John W. Anderson, a public company collector, Herman B. Duker is shown leaving the courthouse in Baltimore, had posted a five thousand dollar bond for his subsequent appearance to answer to the charge. Anderson, in California, the son was brought back to Baltimore and sentenced to death.

pipers proudly marched up and down the great room, followed by a joyous, lilting throng of guests, who joined in the parade as eagerly as those youngsters ever followed the Pied Piper of Hamelin.

Well Loved Music

The dance was on and everyone was happy.

Strains of "I'll tak the high road and you'll tak the low road," "Auld Lang Syne" and many other well loved songs—from Scotland rolled throughout the dance rooms, and at supper, after the haggis had been duly paraded, borne on the shoulders of brawny Scots. Red-green and blue candles and huge yellow mums decked the supper tables, and tall standards interwoven with smilax held clusters of the same sunny flowers in the reception room.

Countess Bessborough was lovely in an exquisite white lace tiered gown, with diamond diadem against her dark hair, diamond necklace, and a beautiful bouquet of green and bronze orchids which had been presented to her by Miss Margaret Scott-Griffin on behalf of the regiment.

Premier and Mrs. Henry, the latter in a handsome gown of gold lame with rose design and pearl necklace, and Miss Nora Henry, in a smart black crepe frock with shoulder corsage of orchids, were among those present.

Miss Jean Macpherson was particularly distinctive in a graceful gown of white lace with a scarf of the Macpherson tartan caught to one shoulder with a cairngorm and forming a diagonal line across the bodice of her frock.

JUDGMENT IS OVERTURNED IN COPYRIGHT

In Case to Test Validity of Copyright Act

DECISIONS GIVEN

Noted Jurists Express Their Opinion on Law

Winnipeg, Man. (By The Canadian Press)—Notation of copyright on original articles is not necessary in order to assure protection of the author against unauthorized publication, according to the appeal court of Manitoba. By a three-to-one judgement, the court recently reversed the finding of the trial judge in the case of Frederick Griffin, British author against Manitoba Free Press.

Five months ago, Mr. Justice W. J. Donovan dismissed the suit of Griffin, who objected to publication, without permission, of an article written by him and copied from the Ottawa Journal. No notice of copyright was attached to the Journal's article, which was a review of Sidney Dark's authitled "The Life of Louis Hemon," and originally published in "T. P.'s Weekly" in London, England.

Griffin's counsel argued that his client's assumption of right to publish author's articles without his consent, in this case rendered void judgment entered for nonpublication in favor of Griffin. The damages are left to the parties to settle between themselves, or they intimated they would do. No costs were asked in the trial, and none were granted in the appeal.

All four of the appeal-court judges opposed the view taken by the trial judge that the Free Press published the article in good faith, having "no reasonable grounds for suspecting that it was copyright." They inclined to the view that proper attitude of mind to copyright existed as a matter of law when the copies is that copyright exists unless he has evidence to the contrary.

Dissenting Judgment was entered by Mr. Justice W. H. Trueman, who held that the appeal turned on the point of whether notation of copyright should have accompanied the article. According to Mr. Justice Trueman, such papers which copy articles originally published in England, for instance, are protected from copyright-infringement penalties if no notification of copyright accompanies the copied article.

Judge Trueman based his stand on Article Nine of the Berne Convention, which provides that works has been adhered to by units of the British Empire are entitled to other nations, excepting the United States. This article provides for reproducing of newspaper articles by newspapers in other countries, subject to the convention "unless expressly forbidden."

Referring to the dissenting judge, Article Nine is plainly discretionary, over article 3 of the convention, which gives to authors, subjects of countries subscribing to the convention, the rights of the respective statutes "now existing or hereafter in force" and Article Four would thus give the author entire protection without formalities.

Under the Copyright act, the section governing the right of infringement entitles the plaintiff to no remedy if he has reasonable grounds for the defendant proves his allegation he was unaware of the existence of copyright, and had no reasonable grounds for suspecting, such copyright existed in the work. The Free Press pleaded this section and pointed out that no application was made pursuant to a general custom among newspapers in Canada of copying articles in other Canadian papers, unless without contrary judgment of the trial judge found that copyright subsisted in the work, that copyright subsisted in the work, that copyright subsisted in the work, that the Free Press was not aware of the copyright, and that the date of publication of the article. He referred the trial judge's statement that as six years had elapsed since the date of publication, the plaintiff could never any attempt or disposition to repeat it.

The appeal judges, however, found that The Free Press plea of unawareness of copyright could not be sustained. Mr. Justice E. K. Prendergast, one of the judges, held on Copyright: "It is submitted that the proper attitude of mind of a copyist toward a work that is not copies it unless he has evidence to the contrary. It is submitted that the proper law that it is sufficient that no notice of copyright appears in the work to assume without inquiry, that a work published anonymously is NOT the subject of copyright."

Referring to the plaintiff's defence on the basis of the article containing no prohibition against reproduction, Mr. Justice R. M. Denistoun remarked in his judgment: "Counsel for the plaintiff's defence if the plaintiff could seek his rights under the Berne Convention only, but he says that in addition to the protection given by the Convention he has the larger and wider rights given by the Canadian Copyright Act, and clearly that is true.

As Judge Prendergast, Judge Denistoun agreed with Coginger's suggestion that the proper attitude for the copyist is that copyright exists unless he has evidence to the contrary. Mr. Justice H. A. Robinson took the opposite view, as Judge Pendergast and Denistoun that the author's right under the Canadian act are not to be limited by any exceptions provided in the case of the publishers by Article Nine of the Convention.

In connection with the case, it may be noted that the Fourth International Press Conference (June 1930) discussed the matter of "lifting" and placed the question before a committee. It was decided, after delineation of the legal position by authorities, that the question would best be met by a gentlemen's agreement between editors and editors throughout the Empire.

The legal position was noted as "Every article which is an original literary work, and which is first published within the Empire, is the subject of copyright throughout the Empire It is not necessary for the owner of the copyright to comply with any formalities to gain protection. The only material exception is that a person may exercise a fair dealing with the article for the purpose of criticism, review or newspaper summary.

LIBRARY CORNER

The story of the spectacular Byrd Antarctic expedition, 1928-1930, is told by its leader Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd in his book "Little America," which is the name of the base established on the Ross Ice Barrier. This commanding volume describes the elaborate preparations, the trip to the Bay of Whales, the building of Little America and its radio towers, the long winter there, the flight to the Pole on Thanksgiving Day. Only a word can be said for the distinction of the reached both poles; the late Roald Amundsen and Richard Byrd said Amundsen and Richard Byrd is interesting to compare the Amundsen Antarctic trip of 1910-12 with the Byrd trip of 1928-30. The latter, an example of the successful application of radio, aviation and modern engineering was a luxurious adventure as compared with the meagerly-equipped Amundsen trip. Commander Byrd's narrative is written in a simple, clear style with many humorous touches. The volume includes a map and four photographs and many maps.

A new type of story has been written which describes the reactions of a woman whose home stood in the zone of battle. The day-by-day journal of Mme. Adam, wife of the Marquise de Foucault is her book "A Chateau at the Front" is a first hand account of war experience. Her estate near the Belgian border was taken over command as quarters for the troops, and at one time she and her family sheltered General Mangin of the French forces and from windows of the chateau the first victorious offensive of the Germans was seen upon Compiegne. In commemoration of the successful attack a plaque has been placed at the entrance to the chateau of Premleroy and a visit to the estate has become a part of tourist itineraries.

Two new books relating to the theatre that will be popular with Library borrowers are "Theatre Street" the autobiography of Tamara Karsavina, leading ballerina in the Imperial School of the Ballet in Russia, and Luigi Pirandello's successful play "As you desire me", which had such an outstanding success in New York, and has played recently in Toronto. Sir Philip Gibbs' "Ten Years After" and "Theatre Street" praises the book: "It is mainly a story of the theatre and dancing because of its gallantry, art in a scene strange and picturesque to us, the splendid pile (conceive of such a building here) called Maryinsky Street in St. Petersburg where the radiant beauty Karsavina learns to dance. To many, as to me, these reminiscences of Mamie Karsavina will make one of the most delightful and novel books of the season about the theatre."

Pirandello's play is a fascinating study of human personality. The theme is such as to leave the reader to make his own decision concerning the question: If a woman transforms herself as an illusion of a man desires her, does he really love her actual self or her transformed self? The leading character may be the wife torn from her husband during the war and returned after ten years, or she may be an impostor. It is a case for the reader to decide.

London is said to receive more than 250,000 letters on every day in the year, most of them coming from the provincial areas.
